Nubian afterglow. A secondary twilight sometimes seen in the Nubian desert, caused by re-reflection of rays dispersed through the atmosphere in the primary twilight.
Nubian sandstone. Geol. A widespread North African sandstone which rests generally on ancient crystalline rocks and is overlain by Eocene formations. It is supposed to be, in part at least, Cretaceous.
nu'bi·late (nū'bĭ·lāt), v. t. [L. nubilatus, past part.] To cloud; obscure. — nu'bi·la'tion (-lā'shŭn), n.
nu'bile (nū'bĭl), adj. [F. or L.; F. nubile, fr. L. nubilis, fr. nubere to marry. See NUPTIAL.] Marriageable; — said of females, or of age. — nu·bil'i·ty (nū·bĭl'ĭ·tĭ), n.
nu'bi·lous (nū'bĭ·lŭs), adj. [L. nubilus, fr. nubes cloud.] Cloudy; foggy; misty; figuratively, obscure; vague.
Nu'bi·lum (nū'bĭ·lŭm), n. [L., cloud, cloudy sky, neut. of nubilus cloudy.] Astron. A coarse, extended cluster of stars in the constellation Cancer (in the head of the Crab); Praesepe.
nub yarn. A kind of yarn with recurring twists or knots, used in weaving chinchilla, ratiné, etc.
nu'cal (nū'kăl), adj. [LL. nucalis.] Of or pert. to a nut.
nu'ca·ment (nū'kȧ·mĕnt), n. [L. nucamenta for cones, fr. nux, nucis, a nut.] Bot. Ament. — nu'ca·men·ta'ceous (-mĕn·tā'shŭs), adj.
nu·cel'lar (nū·sĕl'ĕr), adj. Bot. Of or pert. to the nucellus. nu·cel'lus (-lŭs), n.; pl. -LI (-ī). [NL., fr. L. nucella, dim. of nux, nucis, a nut. See NUCLEUS.] Bot. The mass of thin-walled parenchymatous cells composing the central and chief part of the body of an ovule. It contains the embryo sac, and is surrounded by the external coats of the ovule. See OVULE. nu'cha (nū'kȧ), n.; pl. NUCHAE (-kē). [ML. (whence F. nuque), fr. Ar. nukhā' spinal marrow.] 1. Anat. a Obs. The spinal cord. b The nape of the neck. 2. Zool. In insects, the hind part of the thorax which bears the petiole of the abdomen. nu'chal (nū'kăl), adj. [Cf. F. nucal. See NUCHA.] Anat. & Zool. Pertaining to, or in the region of, the back, or nape, of the neck; in insects, situated on the back of the prothorax just behind the head; also, pertaining to the nucha. nu'chal (nū'kăl), nu·cha'le (nū·kā'lē), n. Zool. A nuchal element, as a scale or bone.
nu·chal'gi·a (nū·kăl'jĭ·ȧ), n. [NL. See NUCHA; -ALGIA.] Med. Pain in the back of the neck.
nuchal ligament. The ligamentum nuchae.
nuchal lines. See OCCIPITAL BONE. nuci-. [See NUCLEUS.] A combining form, Latin nuci-, from nux, nucis, meaning nut, as in nu'ci·cul'ture, nu·cif'er·ous, nu'ci·form, nu·cif'o·rous. See CULTURE, etc. nu'cle·al (nū'klē·ăl), adj. Nuclear.
nu'cle·ar (nū'klē·ĕr), adj. 1. Of, pertaining to, constituting, or like, a nucleus. 2. Chem. Designating atoms or groups attached directly to a nucleus or ring. Cf. SIDE CHAIN. See NUCLEUS. nuclear atom. See ATOMIC MODEL. nuclear complex. Psychoanalysis. The Oedipus complex, regarded as the nucleus of the neuroses. nuclear membrane. Biol. See NUCLEUS, 7. nuclear plate. Biol. a The equatorial plate. b The dividing wall of the nucleus in free cell formation. c The wall that divides the nucleus in some forms of amitosis. nub'bing chit. Var. of NUBBING CHEAT. [Dial.] nub'by (nŭb'ĭ), adj. = NUBBLY. nu'bil. Nubile. Ref. Sp.
nubk (nŭbk). Var. of NABK. nuche, n. [F. nuque, fr. earlier nuche.] Nucha. Obs.
nu'cin (nū'sĭn), n. [L. nux, nucis, a nut.] Chem. = JUGLONE. nuck (nŭk). Scot. var. of NOOK. nuckle. ✝ KNUCKLE nuck'ler. Var. of KNUCKLER. nucle-. = NUCLEO-.

nuclear sap. Biol. The more fluid ground substance of nucleoplasm.

nuclear spindle. Biol. The spindle-shaped figure formed in mitosis.

nu'cle-ar'y (nū'klē-ĕr'ĭ or, esp. Brit., -ēr-ĭ), adj. Of the nature of a nucleus.

nu'cle-ase (nū'klē-ās), n. [nuclein + -ase.] Biochem. Any of the enzymes found in plants and animals that accelerate hydrolysis of nucleins and nucleic acids.

nu'cle-ate (nū'klē-āt), adj. [L. nucleatus having a kernel.] Nucleated.

nu'cle-ate (-āt), v. t. & i.; -AT'ED (-āt'ĕd; -ĭd; 119); -AT'ING (-āt'ĭng). [LL. nucleare to become kernelly.] To form (into) a nucleus; to gather as a nucleus. — nu'cle-a'tion (-ā'shŭn), n. — nu'cle-a'tor (nū'klē-ā'tĕr), n.

nu'cle-ate (-āt), n. Biochem. A salt or ester of nucleic acid.

nuclei-. A combining form for nucleus, as in nu'cle-if'er-ous, nu'cle-i-form' (nū'klē-ĭ-fôrm'; nū-klē'ĭ-fôrm).

nu'cle'ic ac'id (nū-klē'ĭk). Biochem. Any of a group of white amorphous acids, combinations of a sugar or a derivative of a sugar with phosphoric acid and a base, widely distributed in nuclear material.

nu'cle-in (nū'klē-ĭn), n. Biochem. Any of a group of colorless amorphous substances obtained from cell nuclei, esp. the chromatin portion, by the peptic digestion or hydrolysis of cells or of nucleoproteins. They are mixtures of nucleic acid and proteins rich in phosphorus.

nu'cle-in-ase (-ās), n. [nuclein + -ase.] Biochem. An enzyme that accelerates hydrolysis of nuclein.

nuclein base. Biochem. Any base obtained from nucleic acid or its derivatives by hydrolysis.

nu'cle-o- (nū'klē-ō-), nucle-. A combining form for nucleus, denoting connection with, or relation to, a nucleus or nuclei, as in nu'cle-o-fu'gal, nu'cle-o-pet'al (see -FUGE, -PETAL); specif., nuclein, as in *nucleo*albumin.

nu'cle-o-al-bu'min (-ăl-bū'mĭn), n. [nucleo- + albumin.] Biochem. Phosphoprotein.

nu'cle-o-his'tone (-hĭs'tōn), n. [nucleo- + histone.] Biochem. A phosphorized substance obtained from the thymus gland, yielding on cleavage histone and other products.

nu'cle-oid (nū'klē-oid), adj. [nucle- + -oid.] Like a nucleus.

nu'cle-o-id'i-o-plas'ma (nū'klē-ō-ĭd'ĭ-ō-plăz'mȧ), n. [NL., fr. nucleo- + idioplasma.] Biol. Formative nucleoplasm.

nu'cle'o-lar (nū-klē'ō-lĕr), adj. Biol. Of or pertaining to, or of the nature of, a nucleolus.

nu'cle-o-lat'ed (nū'klē-ō-lāt'ĕd; -ĭd; 119), adj. Also nu'cle-o-late (nū'klē-ō-lāt). Having a nucleolus or nucleoli.

nu'cle-ole (nū'klē-ōl), n. [See NUCLEOLUS.] A nucleolus.

nu'cle-o-li'nus (nū'klē-ō-lī'nŭs), n.; pl. -LINI (-nī). [NL. See NUCLEOLUS.] Biol. A body contained within a nucleolus.

nu'cle'o-lo-cen'tro-some (-sĕn'trō-sōm), n. Biol. A centrosome in a nucleus.

nu'cle'o-loid (nū-klē'ō-loid), adj. Resembling a nucleolus.

nu'cle'o-lus (nū-klē'ō-lŭs), n.; pl. -LI (-lī). [LL., a little nut, dim. of nucleus.] a A comparatively large and conspicuous, usually rounded body, found in the nucleus of most cells. More than one may be present. Under the term nucleolus have been included a variety of bodies the nature and functions of which are in most cases not understood. Those which stain with cytoplasmic stains have been distinguished as true nucleoli, or plasmosomes; others (which appear to be nodes or knots in the chromatic network, and stain with nuclear stains) as karyosomes; while in a few cases (as certain Protozoa) they appear to be true intranuclear centrosomes. The nucleolus of the germinal vesicle is called the germinal spot. b Obs. A micronucleus.

nu'cle-o-mi'cro-some (nū'klē-ō-mī'krō-sōm), n. [nucleo- + microsome.] Biol. A nuclear, as distinguished from a cytoplasmic, granule. Strasburger.

nu'cle-one, nu'cle-on (nū'klē-ŏn), n. [From NUCLEUS.] Biochem. A substance, as phosphocarnic acid, held to be related to the nucleins and yielding peptone.

nu'cle-o-plasm (nū'klē-ō-plăz'm), n. [nucleo- + -plasm.] Biol. a The reticular substance of the nucleus of an egg. b Karyoplasm. c The ground substance of a cell nucleus. See NUCLEUS, 7. — nu'cle-o-plas'mic (-plăz'mĭk), adj. — nu'cle-o-plas-mat'ic (-plăz-măt'ĭk), adj.

nu'cle-o-pro'te-in (-prō'tē-ĭn), n. Also nu'cle-o-pro'te-id (-ĭd). [nucleo- + protein, proteid.] Biochem. Any of a class of conjugated proteins found in nearly all cell nuclei, in protoplasm, etc., yielding, with alkalies, protein and nucleic acid as cleavage products and, by pepsin digestion, true nucleins; — formerly extended by some to include the phosphoproteins.

nu'cle-o-side (nū'klē-ō-sīd; -sĭd), n. Also -sid. [See NUCLEO-; -IDE.] Biochem. Any of a class of compounds of a carbohydrate and a purine or pyrimidine base obtained from nucleic acids. Cf. GUANOSINE.

nu'cle-o-tide (-tīd; -tĭd), n. Biochem. Any of a class of compounds consisting of a carbohydrate combined with a purine or pyrimidine base and phosphoric acid, as inosinic acid, guanylic acid.

nu'cle-us (nū'klē-ŭs), n.; pl. NUCLEI (-ī), also NUCLEUSES (-ĕz; -ĭz; 119). [L., a kernel, dim. fr. nux, nucis, nut. See NUT; cf. NEWEL, NOUGAT.] 1. A kernel, as of a nut or seed. 2. A central mass, part, or point about which matter is gathered or concentrated, or to which accretion is made; the central or focal portion; focus; core.

It must contain within itself a nucleus of truth. I. Taylor.

3. Archaeol. = CORE, n., 5.
4. Anat. A mass of gray matter, or group of nerve cells in the central nervous system, esp. in the brain.
5. Astron. a The small, brighter, and denser portion of the head of a comet. b Obs. The umbra of a sunspot.
6. Beekeeping. A small mass of bees and combs of brood, used in forming a new colony or in rearing queens.
7. Biol. An organ present in the protoplasm of most plant and animal cells, and regarded as an essential agent in their constructive metabolism, growth, and reproduction and in the hereditary transmission of characters. It typically consists of a rounded or ovoid mass of protoplasm enclosed in a delicate membrane (nuclear membrane) and composed of a hyaline ground substance containing besides one or more nucleoli a network of feebly staining material (linin). In this network are embedded granules of chromatin. During ordinary cell reproduction the nuclear membrane disappears and the chromatin is distributed to the new cells (see MITOSIS). Many protozoans have two nuclei, of which the smaller (micronucleus) is especially concerned in mitotic reproduction. In many cases multiplication of the nucleus is not followed by division of the cell body, resulting in a multinucleate cell, or coenocyte.
8. Bot. a Obs. A nucellus. b The bilum of a starch granule. c In lichens and ascomycetous fungi, the center of an apothecium or perithecium. d Rare. A bulbet.
9. Geol. The interior of the earth. See CRUST, 7.
10. Gram. = KERNEL, 6.
11. Math. See INTEGRAL EQUATION.
12. Meteorol. A particle upon which water vapor condenses in free air.
13. Org. Chem. A characteristic and stable complex of atoms to which other atoms may be variously attached.
14. Physics & Chem. The central portion of an atom. It contains a positive charge equal to the negative charge of the electrons. It may consist of a single proton, as the nucleus of hydrogen (two protons in heavy hydrogen); or of protons and electrons, as the nucleus of helium with its four protons and two electrons; or of protons, electrons, and alpha particles. Cf. NEUTRON.
15. Zool. a The earliest formed part of a shell, operculum, or other similar structure. b A visceral mass containing the stomach and other organs in certain Tunicata. c = MADREPORITE, 2. d The eccentrically situated mass around which the rings of a cycloid or ctenoid scale are arranged.

‖nu'cle-us am-bi'gu-us (nū'klē-ŭs ăm-bĭg'ū-ŭs). [NL.] Anat. An elongated nucleus in the medulla oblongata, giving rise to motor fibers of the glossopharyngeal, vagus, and accessory nerves distributed to the pharynx and larynx.

‖nu'cle-us cau-da'tus (kô-dā'tŭs). [NL.] Anat. The CAUDATE NUCLEUS.

‖nu'cle-us cu'ne-a'tus (kū'nē-ā'tŭs). [NL.] Anat. In the medulla oblongata, the nucleus in which the fibers of the fasciculus cuneatus terminate.

‖nu'cle-us den-ta'tus (dĕn-tā'tŭs). [NL.] Anat. The corpus dentatum.

‖nu'cle-us dor-sa'lis (dôr-sā'lĭs). [NL.] The column of Clarke.

‖nu'cle-us gra'ci-lis (grăs'ĭ-lĭs). [NL.] Anat. In the medulla oblongata, the nucleus in which the fibers of the fasciculus gracilis terminate.

‖nu'cle-us ha-be'nu-lae (hȧ-bĕn'ū-lē). [NL.] Habenular nucleus or ganglion. See HABENULA.

nucleus of Bechterew. = BECHTEREW'S NUCLEUS. See VESTIBULAR NUCLEUS.

nu'cle-us of Pan'der (păn'dĕr). [After C. H. Pander (1794–1865), Russian zoologist.] Embryol. In a bird's egg, the expanded upper end of the flask-shaped mass of white yolk.

‖nu'cle-us pul-po'sus (pŭl-pō'sŭs) [NL.] Anat. An elastic pulpy mass in the center of each intervertebral fibrocartilage, regarded as a remnant of the notochord.

‖nu'cle-us ru'ber (rōō'bĕr). [NL.] Anat. The red nucleus.

Nu'cu-la (nū'kū-lȧ), n. [L., little nut, dim. of nux, nucis, a nut.] Zool. A genus of marine bivalves (order Protobranchia), having a small nutlike equivalve shell and very large labial palpi. It is the type of a family, Nu-cu'li-dae (nū-kū'lĭ-dē), and a suborder Nu'cu-la'ce-a (nū'kū-lā'shē-ȧ). — nu'cu-lid (nū'kū-lĭd), n. & adj. — nu'cu-li-form' (-lĭ-fôrm'), adj. — nu'cu-loid (-loid), adj. & n.

nu'cu-la'ni-um (nū'kū-lā'nĭ-ŭm; 159), n.; pl. -NIA (-ȧ). Also nu'cu-lane (nū'kū-lān). [NL., fr. L. nucula little nut.] Bot. An indehiscent fleshy fruit resembling a berry except in being superior. The grape is an example.

nu'cule (nū'kūl), n. Bot. a A nutlet. b The oögonium in Chara.

Nu'da (nū'dȧ), n. pl. [NL., fr. L. nudus naked.] Zool. A class of ctenophores without tentacles, including but one order, Beroida.

nud'dle (nŭd''l), nŏŏd''l), v. t. & i. To thrust with the nose, as in suckling; to press close; nuzzle. Now Dial.

nude (nūd; 242), adj. [L. nudus. See NAKED.] 1. Law. Naked; without consideration or, in Roman and Civil law, without a cause; as, a nude pact. See NUDUM PACTUM.
2. Mere; plain; manifest. Obs.
3. Bare; devoid of covering, as hair, investment, furnishings, etc.; barren; as, a nude bud, room, or mountain.
4. Naked; unclothed; as, a nude person or statue.
5. Of the color nude.
Syn. — Naked, bare, denuded, stripped.

nude, n. [Obs. F. nud.] 1. A nude or undraped figure.
2. With the. The undraped human figure, or a representation of it in art; also, the state of being unclothed.
3. A color, red-yellow in hue, of low saturation and high brilliance; — called also Seasan. Cf. COLOR.

nudge (nŭj), v. t.; NUDGED (nŭjd); NUDG'ING (nŭj'ĭng). [Cf. dial. nug, nudge, a lump, a block, nog a rough block, nodge a nudge, to nudge, Nor. dial. nugga to push, nyggja to push.] To touch or push gently, as with the elbow, in order to call attention or convey an intimation. — v. i. To give a nudge. — nudg'er (nŭj'ĕr), n.

nu'di- (nū'dĭ-). A combining form, Latin nudi-, from nudus, meaning naked, bare, as in *Nudi*branchia.

nu'di-branch (nū'dĭ-brăngk), n. Zool. One of the Nudibranchia. — adj. Of or pertaining to the Nudibranchia.

Nu'di-bran'chi-a (nū'dĭ-brăng'kĭ-ȧ), Nu'di-bran'chi-a'ta (-ā'tȧ), n. pl. [NL. See NUDE; -BRANCHIA.] Zool. A suborder comprising a great variety of marine gastropod mollusks (order Opisthobranchia) without shell in the adult state and without true ctenidia. They typically have a sluglike body mostly with handsomely colored, often branching, respiratory processes (cerata) on the back. The nervous system is concentrated. — nu'di-bran'chi-an (-ăn), adj. — nu'di-bran'chi-ate (-brăng'kĭ-āt), adj. & n.

nu'di-flo'rous (nū'dĭ-flō'rŭs; 181), adj. [L. nudus naked + -florous.] Bot. Having flowers naked, or without hairs or glands.

nu'di-ped (nū'dĭ-pĕd), adj. [L. nudus naked + -ped.] Having naked feet. — n. A naked-footed animal.

nu'di-tar'i-an (nū'dĭ-târ'ĭ-ăn; 79), adj. Advocating the study of the nude.

nu'di-ty (nū'dĭ-tĭ), n.; pl. -TIES (-tĭz). [Cf. F. nudité.]
1. Quality, state, or fact of being nude, or naked; nakedness.
2. That which is nude; as: a A nude figure, esp. as represented in art. b Obs. pl. The private parts exposed.

‖nu'dum pac'tum (nū'dŭm păk'tŭm); pl. NUDA PACTA (nū'dȧ păk'tȧ). [L., a nude pact.] a Rom. & Civil Law. A pact not enforceable by action. See PACT. b Loosely, a contract without consideration. See CONSIDERATION.

nu-ga'cious (nū-gā'shŭs), adj. [L. nugax, nugacis.] Trifling; trivial. — nu-ga'cious-ness, n.

nu-gac'i-ty (nū-găs'ĭ-tĭ), n.; pl. -TIES (-tĭz). [LL. nugacitas, fr. nugax, -acis, trifling.] Triviality; futility; also, a trivial idea; a frivolity; a futility. "He had been ruminating the fascination of nugacity." Aldous Huxley.

‖nu'gae (nū'jē), n. pl. [L.] Trifles.

nu'ga-to'ry (nū'gȧ-tō'rĭ or, esp. Brit., -tĕr-ĭ), adj. [L. nugatorius, fr. nugari to trifle, fr. nugae jests, trifles.]
1. Trifling; of little or no consequence; worthless.
2. Of no force; inoperative; ineffectual; invalid.
Syn. — See VAIN.

nug-gar' (nŏŏg-gär'), n. [Colloq. Ar. nuqqār.] A kind of cargo boat used on the Nile.

nug'get (nŭg'ĕt; -ĭt; 119), n. [Prob. fr. dial. nug a lump, a block.] 1. A lump; a mass, esp. a native lump of a precious metal; as, a nugget of gold.
2. A sturdy and thickset young beast. Australia.
3. The color bronze yellow.

nug'get-y (nŭg'ĕ-tĭ; -ĭ-tĭ), adj. [From NUGGET.] 1. Like a nugget; occurring in nuggets; also, abounding in nuggets.
2. Short and thickset; compact. Colloq., Australia.

nu'gi- (nū'jĭ-fī), v. t. [nugi- + -fy.] To render trifling or futile; to make foolish. Rare.

nu'gi-fy (nū'jĭ-fī), v. t. [nugi- + -fy.] To render trifling or futile; to make foolish. Rare.

nui'sance (nū'sănz; -s'nz; 242), n. [OF., fr. nuire to harm, hurt, fr. L. nocere. See NOXIOUS.] 1. Hurt; harm; injury; annoyance; as, to do a thing with nuisance to others.
2. Law. An offensive, annoying, unpleasant, or obnoxious thing or practice; a cause or source of annoyance, especially a continuing or repeating invasion or disturbance of another's right. But a single act may be a nuisance. "Anything that worketh hurt, inconvenience, or damage." Blackstone. A nuisance affecting the public or a community in general is a public nuisance; one affecting some particular person or persons, a private nuisance; one both affecting the public and doing special individual damage, a mixed nuisance.
3. A person, action, or thing that annoys by obtrusion; as, he's a perfect nuisance.

nui'sanc-er (nū'sănz-ĕr; -s'n-sĕr), n. Law. One who makes or causes a nuisance. Blackstone.

nuisance tax. A small tax which becomes a nuisance from being passed on for collection in small amounts from the consumer, as one of those levied in the U. S. on toilet articles, proprietary medicines, bank checks, etc.

‖nuit (nwē), n. [F.] Night.

Nu'ku-hi'van (nōō'kōō-hē'vän), n. The Polynesian language of Nukuhiva; Marquesan.

nul (nŭl), adj. [F. See NULL, adj.] Law. No; not any; as, nul tort.

null (nŭl), adj. [F. or L.; F. nul, fr. L. nullus not any, none, fr. ne- not + ullus any, dim. of unus one. See NO, adv.; ONE. Cf. ANNUL, NONE.] 1. Of no legal or binding force or validity; of no efficacy; invalid; void; nugatory.
2. Amounting to nothing or nil; nonexistent.
3. Of no consequence or value; insignificant.
4. Math. & Symbolic Logic. Empty or having no members; as, the null class; having the character or value of 0; as, the null element; having a zero radius; as, a null sphere.

null, v. t. [From null, adj., after annul.]
1. To make negative; also, to destroy. Obs.
2. To annul; to make void; nullify.

null, n. Var. of KNURL; specif., Furniture, a raised, convex boss or ornament on a flat surface.

null, v., nulled (nŭld), adj. Vars. of KNURL, KNURLED.

nulli. Var. of KNUR.

nulli'a-ble (nŭl'ȧ-b'l), adj. Annullable. Rare.

‖nul'la bo'na (nŭl'ȧ bō'nȧ). [L., no goods.] Law. The return made upon a writ of fieri facias or execution by the sheriff or other officer when he has found no leviable goods.

nul'la–nul'la, nul'lah–nul'lah (-nŭl'ȧ), n. Also nul'lah. [Native name.] A kind of hardwood club used by the Australian aborigines.

Nulla-nullas.

nul'li- (nŭl'ĭ-). A combining form, Latin nulli-, from nullus, meaning none, as in *nulli*fidian, *nulli*parous.

nul'li-bic'i-ty (nŭl'ĭ-bĭs'ĭ-tĭ), n. Also nul'li-bi'e-ty (-bī'ĕ-tĭ). [L. nullibi nowhere.] State of being nowhere. Rare.

num'ber (nŭm'bĕr), n. [ME. nombre, noumbre, fr. OF. nombre, fr. L. numerus. See NIMBLE; cf. NUMERATE, NUMERO, NUMEROUS.] 1. The or a total, aggregate, or amount of units (whether of things, persons, or abstract units); arithmetical aggregate; as, odd or even numbers.
2. A character or symbol, as a figure or word, or a group of figures or words, representing graphically an arithmetical sum; a numeral; as, the number 45; four is a number. A perfect number, as 6, is equal to the sum of its various divisors, as 1, 2, 3. An imperfect number is either greater (called then deficient, or defective, number) or less (called then abundant number) than the sum of its several divisors. A number is sometimes used, as in cabalistic or apocalyptic writings (Rev. xiii. 18), as a symbol to be interpreted by the word or words the numerical values of whose letters make up its sum. Cf. BEAST.
3. pl. The study or science of abstract units and their computation; arithmetic; as, skill in numbers.
4. A particular numeral by which a thing or person is designated in a series or collection; as, a conductor's or a policeman's number; a house number.
5. a Also pl. The full count or complement (of a particular company or class of persons); as, to repair his numbers. b An aggregate, collection, or company; an assemblage; — with adjectives, such as great, small, considerable, etc. c A certain indefinitely large aggregate, collection, or company, as of persons, not actually or accurately counted; a considerable number; many; as, grown to a number; — also pl. with intensive force; as, they arrived in numbers.
☞ When number is used collectively, it is regularly followed by the singular verb; as, an increasing number of patrons has forced me to enlarge the store; a limited number of cars is available. When number is used distributively, it is regularly followed by the plural verb; as, a number of people have already arrived; a number of accidents always occur on slippery pavements.
6. a Quantity, as made up of units; the category of discrete quantity; as, the difference between the notions "many" and "few" is one of number. b Possibility of numbering; — commonly in negative expressions; as, times without number, or out of number.
7. O

O, o (ō), n.; pl. O's, o's, Os, os, OES (ōz). 1. The fifteenth letter of the English alphabet. It comes through the Latin from the Greek, which took it from the Phoenician, where it represented a consonantal sound, that of the Semitic 'ayn (see 'AYIN). The Greeks not having this consonantal sound, appropriated the symbol for the o vowel, short and long, which they later differentiated as omicron and omega, a distinction not formally preserved in Latin. O stands for various sounds in English, the chief of which are its long, or name, sound, as in bone, its short sound, as in nod, and the sounds heard in the words orb, son, do (dōō), and wolf (wŏŏlf). With other vowels it forms several digraphs and diphthongs. See Pron., §§ 179–204. In cognate words English o (from Anglo-Saxon o) corresponds to German o, Latin u, Greek y, Sanskrit u as in bottom, AS. botm, G. boden, L. fundus, Gr. pythmēn, Skr. budhna; to Anglo-Saxon o, German a, Greek a, as in on, AS. on, G. an, Gr. ana; to Anglo-Saxon ō, German u, Latin a, Greek a, Sanskrit ā, as in brother, AS. brōthor, G. bruder, L. frater, Gr. phratēr, Skr. bhrātr; to Anglo-Saxon ā, German ei, Gothic ai, as in stone, AS. stān, G. stein, Goth. stains. See ALPHABET, n., 1.

2. a An instance of the letter O, o, printed, written, painted, etc. b A printer's type, a stamp, etc., for the letter O, o. c The sound, or any sound, of the letter O.

Mouthing out his hollow oes and aes. Tennyson.

d [cap.] In medieval Roman numerals, 11, or, in the form Ō, 11,000.

3. Anything having the shape of the letter O; a circle or oval. "This wooden O [Globe Theater]." Shak.

4. A cipher; zero; hence, one amounting to nothing.

5. pl. Round spangles, as in dress of the 17th century. Obs.

6. As a symbol, used to denote or indicate: a Anyone or anything arbitrarily or conveniently so designated, esp. as the fourteenth or (see K, n., 4) fifteenth in order or class. b Logic. The particular negative proposition (some A is not B). c Psychol. The observer, who is also the subject, in an introspective experiment.

7. As an abbreviation: see Abbreviations, in Appendix.

O, o, adj. 1. Fourteenth or (see K, adj., 1) fifteenth in order or class; as, section O.

2. Having the general form of capital O; circular; oval.

O'. [Ir. ō a descendant.] A prefix to ancient Irish family names, followed by the genitive case of the name of the ancestor; as, *O'*Neill (nom. Niall) a descendant of Niall. Cf. MAC.

☞ Before surnames of females, O' is replaced, in Irish, by ní, daughter. It prefixes h before a vowel; as, O h-Airt, *O'*Hart. The apostrophe is due to the mistaken notion that O stands for "of."

O (ō), interj. [Cf. F. ô, L. o, Gr. ō, hō. Cf. OH.] An exclamation used: a In calling or directly addressing a person or personified object. b To express pain, grief, surprise, desire, fear, etc.; — sometimes followed by that, with ellipsis. "O [I wish] that Ishmael might live before thee!" Gen. xvii. 18.

For ever, O Lord, thy word is settled in heaven. Ps. cxix. 89.

☞ O is commonly used with the vocative, and precedes the name of the person or thing addressed, with no point of punctuation; as, O John! O dwellers in the desert! O is often also used in mere exclamations, but perhaps less commonly than oh. Oh is also sometimes used in direct address, but is then followed by a comma; as, Oh, mother; Oh, Janice.

o' (ō; ŏ), prep. Formerly o. [See 1st & 2d A, prep.] A shortened form of of or on. Colloq. or Dial. "Turning o' the tide." Shak.

o-. Chem. a [cap. & often italic] Distinguishing certain derivatives of organic compounds in which hydrogen directly united to oxygen is replaced; as, O-methylphenol (anisole). b See ORTHO-; — the usual sense.

-o. A suffix to the first element in compound words taken from, or imitative of, Greek, where it is the stem vowel of the first element, or stands for another stem vowel, or sometimes is a secondary addition to a stem ending in a consonant, as in aristocracy, philosophy, Syrophoenician. When the following word element begins with a vowel, -o- is usually elided, as in aristarchy, philanthropy, cytaster, osteitis, cyclorama. It expresses: a Adverbial modification; -ly; — used with adjectives, as in dolichocephalic. b Mutual association; and; as in Greco-Roman, Franco-Prussian. c Any of various prepositional relations, esp. of, by; — used with nouns, as in cytogenesis, osteotomy, Anglophobia, photography.

☞ From frequent association with certain terminal elements, -o- sometimes becomes a part of them, as in -oid, -ology. Cf. -i-.

-o. A combining form, from the Latin ablative and adverbial ending -o, equivalent to -ly and and, as in dorso-, proximo-.

o'a·dal (ō′ä·dăl), n. [Tamil ōḍal; cf. Nepali odāl, fr. skr. uddāla(ka).] An East Indian tree (Sterculia villosa), whose fiber is used in ropemaking.

oaf′dom (-dŭm), n. [See -DOM.] State of an oaf; doltishness.

oaf′ish (ōf′ĭsh), adj. Like an oaf; simple. — oaf′ish·ly, adv. — oaf′ish·ness, n.

oak (ōk), n. [ME. oke, ook, ok, ak, fr. AS. āc; akin to D. eik, G. eiche, OHG. eih, ON. eik, Gr. aigilōps.] 1. a Any tree or shrub of the genus Quercus and of the related genus Lithocarpus. The oaks have simple alternate, often evergreen, leaves, varying from linear and entire to broadly obovate, the margin variously indented, lobed, or incised. The fruit is a rounded nut (acorn) more or less invested by a scaly involucre (cup). Many of the oaks are fine forest trees with timber of great economic value. Cork is furnished by the cork oak (which see). The cups and bark of many species contain tannin, and are used in tanning, dyeing, etc. The oak of English history and literature is chiefly the British species Q. robur. See QUERCUS. b The wood of these trees. The best oak timber is hard, tough, and durable, with a handsome grain, due to the prominent medullary rays. In England, oak is derived mostly from the British oak. In North America, oak lumber is sold as white oak, derived mostly from Q. alba, stellata, bicolor, and macrocarpa, and as red oak, derived from Q. borealis, velutina, palustris, and phellos.

Leaves and Acorns of Various Oaks. 1 Willow Oak (Q. phellos); 2 White Oak (Q. alba); 3 Black Oak (Q. velutina); 4 Red Oak (Q. borealis); 5 Chestnut Oak (Q. prinus); 6 Bur Oak (Q. macrocarpa); 7 Swamp White Oak (Q. bicolor). All reduced.

2. a Any of various plants suggestive of the oak in foliage or otherwise; — usually with qualifying adjective or attributive; as, poison oak, ground oak, etc. b In Australia, specif., any species of Casuarina. See SHE-OAK.

3. Oak leaves worn in a wreath.

4. A strong door, often made of oak. Hence, to sport one's oak, to close one's outer door, signifying either that one is out or that one does not desire callers. When one is willing to receive callers, only a light inner door is closed. Eng. University Slang.

5. Woodwork, furniture, or the like, of oak.

6. A brown, yellowish red-yellow in hue, of medium saturation and medium brilliance. Cf. COLOR.

HUGUENOT.] 1. A solemn appeal to God, or, in a wider sense, to any sacred or revered person or sanction (as the temple, the altar, the blood of Abel, the Koran, a tribal superior, etc.), for the truth of an affirmation or declaration, or in witness of the inviolability of a promise or undertaking; also, the affirmation or promise, or the like, supported by the oath, or the form of expression in which it is made. In law, judicial oaths are those duly made as a part of judicial proceedings, and a willfully false statement made in violation of such an oath is perjury (which see); other oaths are extrajudicial oaths. The violation of promissory oaths taken under legal authority, such as oaths of office (called official oaths), the oath of allegiance, etc., does not involve the crime or penalties of perjury. At common law, a witness is sworn according to the peculiar ceremonies of his own religion or in such manner as he deems binding on his conscience.
2. A solemn affirmation or declaration not invoking the deity or any superior sanction; — often used in statutes of any affirmation or other mode authorized by law for attestation of the truth or inviolability of what is stated.
3. A careless or blasphemous use of the name of the divine Being, or anything divine or sacred, by way of appeal or as a profane exclamation, ejaculation, or imprecation.
Syn. — See CURSE.

See 1st DURE.] 1. Hardened in feelings, esp. against moral or mollifying influences; unyielding; persistent; hardhearted; also, stubbornly wicked. "The obdurate conscience of the old sinner." Scott.
2. Hard; harsh; rugged; rough; intractable.
Syn. — Firm, unbending, inflexible, stubborn, obstinate, unfeeling, insensible, unsusceptible. — OBDURATE, INDURATED, CALLOUS, INURED, HARDENED agree in the idea of being or growing hard. OBDURATE has almost entirely lost its physical connotation, and implies stubborn resistance to entreaty or softening influences (cf. OBSTINATE); as, "the obdurate heart of . . . Pharaoh" (Pope); "windows fast and obdurate" (R. Browning). INDURATED usually retains its physical sense (as, an indurated swelling, indurated clay), but sometimes occurs figuratively; as, "her husband's indurated conscience" (H. James). CALLOUS, both literally and figuratively, implies a hardening or deadening of the sensibilities as a result of constant pressure or friction, or of repeated experience; as, "Till, his relish grown callous, almost to disease, who peppered the highest was surest to please" (Goldsmith). INURED implies such toughening from use as lessens susceptibility to pain or inconvenience; as, "no hackneyed writer, inured to abuse, and callous to criticism" (Mad. D'Arblay). HARDENED, in its figurative senses, implies greater insensibility to hardship than inured; morally, it suggests esp. a settled disregard for the claims of duty or sympathy (cf. reprobate, under ABANDONED); as, hardened against cold, a hardened criminal. Cf. INFLEXIBLE.
Ant. — Yielding, flexible, susceptible, ductile.

2. R.C.Ch. A list of the dead, or a register of anniversary days when service is performed for the dead.

o·bit'u·ar'y, adj. [See OBITUARY, n.] Of, pertaining to, or recording, the death of a person or persons. — o·bit'u·ar'i·ly (-ĭ·lĭ), adv.

ob·ject' (ŏb·jĕkt'), v.; OB·JECT'ED; OB·JECT'ING. [L. objectus, past part. of objicere, obicere, to throw or put before, to oppose, fr. ob (see OB-) + jacere to throw. See JET, v.] Transitive: 1. Archaic. a To set before or against; to bring into opposition; to oppose or interpose. b To bring or place in view; to expose; hence, to adduce.

2. To offer in opposition, as by way of accusation or reproach; to adduce as an objection or adverse reason; as, he objected that the statement was misleading.

3. Obs. a To expose, as to danger. b To impute.

—, Intransitive: To make opposition in words or argument, or merely to feel averse; — usually followed by to; as, do you object to being left alone?

Syn. — Demur, protest. Ant. — Agree, assent.

ob'ject (ŏb'jĕkt; -jĭkt; 119), n. [L. objectus, past part., neut. objectum, a thing thrown or put before. See OBJECT, v.] 1. An objection; also, an obstacle or hindrance; an obstruction. Obs.

2. That which is put, or which may be regarded as put, in the way of some of the senses; something visible or tangible; as, he observed an object in the distance.

When several [sensations] are received simultaneously, as the smell, the taste, the color, the form, etc., of a fruit, their association together constitutes our idea of an object; when received successively, their association makes up the idea of an event. J. Martineau.

3. Something which, when seen, arouses feelings of pity, amusement, disgust, or the like; a sight; a spectacle.

4. That by which the mind, or any of its activities, is directed; that on which the purposes are fixed as the end of action or effort; that which is sought for; end; aim; motive; final cause. "Let our object be, our country, our whole country, and nothing but our country." D. Webster.

5. Representation; appearance; show. Obs.

6. Gram. a A noun or noun equivalent denoting in verb constructions that on or toward which the action of a verb is directed either actually or as conceived (I struck the ball; I saw what had happened). Transitive constructions of the verb give rise to several distinctions among object words; thus: the direct object, denoting that which is immediately acted on; — in Latin taking the accusative (gratias ago, I give thanks); the indirect object, denoting that which the action affects less immediately or indispensably; — in Latin taking the dative (tibi gratias ago, I give you thanks; throw John the ball); the cognate accusative or object, an object word which nearly or quite repeats the idea of the governing verb, the latter being otherwise intransitive (eam vitam vivere, to live that life); the secondary object, a complementary object after certain verbs that take also a direct object (mother taught me French; I asked teacher a question); the retained object, preserving the object relation in the passive construction, where the verb in the active takes two object words, of which one becomes the subject of the passive (a book was given me; I was taught French by my mother). b A noun or noun equivalent felt as bearing to one of certain adjectives a relation analogous to that of object to verb (worth the trouble; like his brother). c A noun or noun equivalent in a prepositional phrase, where the preposition is (not very appropriately) felt as "governing" the noun.

7. Philos. That which is set, or which may be regarded as set, before the mind so as to be apprehended or known; that of which the mind by any of its activities takes cognizance, whether a thing external in space or a conception formed by the mind itself; as, an object of knowledge, wonder, fear, thought, study, etc. In philosophical discussions, object usually stands in antithesis to subject, ego, or self-consciousness, and its meaning may be extended to designate the totality of external phenomena, as constituting the notself. Philosophically, object is only one term in the subject-object relation, that is, it is never considered apart from some relation to a subject, but in ordinary usage it is often equivalent to thing, or physical entity conceived as totally independent. With the Scholastics, who gave the term its chief meaning, the object is essentially an object of thought, and is distinguished as formal or material, the formal object being an abstraction, or peculiar aspect of a thing, the material object being the thing considered as a complex whole.

Syn. — See INTENTION.

ob′sti·nate (ŏb′stĭ·nĭt), adj. [L. obstinatus, past part. of obstinare to set about a thing with firmness, to persist in, fr. ob (see OB-) + a word from the root of stare to stand. See STAND; cf. DESTINE.] 1. Pertinaciously adhering to an opinion, purpose, or course; not yielding to reason, arguments, or other means; — usually implying unreasonableness; as, obstinate in argument; an obstinate resolve.

2. Not yielding; not easily subdued or removed; as, obstinate fever; obstinate obstructions.

Syn. — Firm, headstrong, perverse, willful; mulish, opinionated, pig-headed; ungovernable, unmanageable. — OBSTINATE, DOGGED, STUBBORN, PERTINACIOUS, INTRACTABLE, REFRACTORY, RECALCITRANT, UNRULY agree in the idea of persistency, often in a bad sense. OBSTINATE implies persistent adherence, esp. against persuasion or attack, to an opinion, purpose, or course; as, "so yielding doubtful points that he can be firm without seeming obstinate in essential ones" (Lowell); "a few hard and obstinate things called facts" (T. L. Peacock). DOGGED adds the implication of downright and tenacious, sometimes sullen, persistence; as, "a dogged veracity" (Johnson); "a dogged perseverance" (Thackeray). STUBBORN usually implies a certain (often native) fixedness or doggedness of character; as, "stubborn as a mule" (Smollett); "Their furrow oft the stubborn glebe has broke" (T. Gray). PERTINACIOUS lacks, as compared with obstinate, the implication of resistance, and as compared with stubborn, the suggestion of inherent quality; it frequently connotes a persistence that is annoying or irksome; as, pertinacious as a mosquito, a pertinacious beggar. INTRACTABLE and REFRACTORY imply resistance to direction, intractable more commonly referring to passive resistance, refractory to that which is active; as, "The phrase would still remain a stiff intractable Latinism" (Landor); an intractable child, temper, soil; "It becomes my duty to struggle against my refractory feelings" (Mad. D'Arblay); a refractory horse, pupil, ore. RECALCITRANT implies obstinate or violent reluctance to obey an order or follow a suggestion; as, "His father became recalcitrant and cut off the supplies" (Stevenson). UNRULY suggests esp. that which is waywardly ungovernable; as, "a playful and unruly boy" (Landor); "Whatever my unruly tongue may say" (J. R. Green). Cf. OBDURATE, INFLEXIBLE, CONTUMACIOUS, WAYWARD, INVETERATE, RESTIVE.

Ant. — Yielding, pliant, ductile, tractable.

Syn. — Get, achieve, secure. — OBTAIN, ATTAIN, ACQUIRE, PROCURE, GAIN, WIN, EARN agree in the idea of getting. OBTAIN implies effort directed toward the acquisition of something whose possession is desired; one ACQUIRES that of which one obtains, often gradually, permanent possession; to ATTAIN (less frequently applied to material things) is esp. to arrive at the object of one's ambition or the goal of one's endeavor; as, "Ye desire to have, and cannot obtain" (James iv. 2); "He had become a hard reader, and so acquired a great deal of knowledge" (H. C. Robinson); "A balance and regulation of mind which is not often attained without fruitful effort" (M. Arnold). To PROCURE is to come into possession of something, often temporarily, esp. as a result of search, request, or purchase; as, "all the tracts my father was at the pains to procure and study in support of his hypothesis" (Sterne). One GAINS esp. what is profitable or advantageous; to WIN is to gain esp. against opposition or competition; to EARN is to gain by one's own exertions; as, "Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire" (Shak.); "Woo me and win me" (Tennyson); to win one's spurs; a hard-earned victory. Cf. ACQUIREMENT, EFFECT.

oc·cip'i·tal (ŏk·sĭp'ĭ·tăl), adj. [MLL. occipitalis.] Anat. Of or pertaining to the occiput or the occipital bone.

oc·cip'i·tal, n. a The occipital bone. b An occipital plate or scale, as on the head of certain reptiles.

occipital angle. Craniom. The angle formed by the plane of the foramen magnum and a line from the opisthion to the inferior border of the orbit (in Daubenton's usage), or to the nasion (in Broca's).

occipital artery. Anat. A branch of the external carotid supplying the muscles, etc., of the back of the neck and head.

occipital bone. Anat. The compound bone which forms the posterior part of the skull and surrounds the foramen magnum, bearing the condyle or condyles for articulation with the atlas. In the higher vertebrates it is usually composed of four more or less completely united elements. In man it is much curved and of trapezoid outline, ending in front of the foramen magnum in the basilar process, and bearing on its outer surface behind the foramen magnum two curved transverse ridges (the superior and inferior nuchal lines) besides a median crest and protuberance.

occipital condyle. Anat. & Zool. An articular surface on the occipital bone by which the skull articulates with the atlas.

occipital convolutions. See OCCIPITAL LOBE.

occipital crest. Anat. & Zool. a Either of the two ridges connecting the occipital protuberances and foramen magnum. b A transverse ridge at the upper posterior border of the skull of many animals, between the occipital and parietal segments. c In birds, a crest of feathers on the back of the head.

occipital foramen. a Anat. The foramen magnum. b Zool. The opening at the back of an insect's head through which the alimentary canal and other organs pass to the thorax.

oc·cip'i·ta'lis (ŏk·sĭp'ĭ·tā'lĭs), n. [NL.] Anat. The muscle at the back of the head, forming part of the occipitofrontalis.

occipital lobe. Anat. The posterior lobe of the cerebral hemisphere, indistinctly separated from the parietal lobe in front and the temporal lobe below. It has the form of a three-sided pyramid. Its external surface is divided by the superior and middle occipital sulci into the superior, middle, and inferior occipital convolutions.

occipital plane. Craniom. The plane of the foramen magnum.

occipital plate. Zool. A scute on the back of the head of certain reptiles.

occipital point. Craniom. The point on the occiput farthest removed from the glabella.

occipital protuberance. Anat. Either of two prominences on the occipital bone. The external (called in craniometry the inion) is on the outer surface midway between the upper border and the foramen magnum. It gives attachment to the ligamentum nuchae. The internal is similarly situated on the inner surface.

occipital segment. See CRANIAL SEGMENTS.

occipital sinus. Anat. A venous sinus lodged in a groove on the internal occipital crest.

occipital triangle. Anat. See TRIANGLES OF THE NECK.

oc·cip'i·to- (ŏk·sĭp'ĭ·tō-). [See OCCIPUT.] Anat. A combining form for occiput, denoting occipital and, as in occipitofrontal, pert. to the occiput and the forehead. For words below see the word with which occipito- is combined.

occipitoanterior	occipitofacial	occipitootic
occipitoatlantal	occipitofrontal	occipitoparietal occipitoatloid	occipitohyoid	occipitoposterior occipitoaxial	occipitoiliac	occipitoscapular occipitoaxoid	occipitomastoid	occipitosphenoid occipitobasilar	occipitomental	occipitosphenoidal occipitobregmatic	occipitonasal	occipitotemporal occipitocalcarine	occipitonuchal	occipitothalamic

oc·cip'i·to·fron·ta'lis (-frŏn·tā'lĭs), n. [NL.] Anat. A fibrous layer covering each side of the vertex of the skull from the eyebrow to the occiput. Its anterior and posterior portions are muscular and constitute the frontalis and occipitalis muscles, respectively.

oc·cip'i·to-pa·ri'e·tal in'dex (-pȧ·rĭ'ĕ·tăl; -t'l). Ratio of the breadth of the skull between the asterions to its greatest breadth.

oc'ci·put (ŏk'sĭ·pŭt; -pŭt), n.; pl. OCCIPITA (ŏk·sĭp'ĭ·tȧ). [L., fr. ob (see OB-) + caput head. See CHIEF.] 1. Anat. The back part of the head or skull.
2. Zool. The back part of the head of insects.

5. Land held by a tenant; a holding. Eng.
Syn. — Business, profession.—OCCUPATION, EMPLOYMENT, PURSUIT, CALLING, VOCATION. One's OCCUPATION is that to which one's time is devoted, or in which one is regularly or habitually engaged; EMPLOYMENT, which is often interchangeable with occupation, may also suggest what one does in another's service; as, "Othello's occupation 's gone" (Shak.); "Whoever the king favors, the cardinal instantly will find employment" (Shak.). A PURSUIT is an occupation directed, esp. voluntarily, to a given end; as, "a plain English merchant . . . strongly attached to literary pursuits" (De Quincey). CALLING is now generally used in the sense of one's regular business or profession; VOCATION (cf. VOCATION), the more elevated term, is often exactly equivalent to calling; but it sometimes retains the suggestion of an employment to which one is destined by nature, or called, as it were, by some higher power; as, men who have risen from the humblest callings; to follow one's vocation. Cf. TRADE, OFFICE, WORK, WORKMAN.

oc'cu·pa'tion·al (ŏk'ū·pā'shŭn·ăl; -'l), adj. Of or pertaining to (an) occupation. — oc'cu·pa'tion·al·ly, adv.

2. To meet one's eye; to be found or met with; to present itself; to appear; hence, to befall in due course; to happen; as, if opportunity occurs; do not let it occur again.
3. To meet or come to the mind; to suggest itself.
There doth not occur to me any use of this experiment for profit. Bacon.
4. Eccl. To fall on the same day; — said of festivals. Cf. CONCUR, v. i., 6.
Syn. — OCCUR, HAPPEN are often used without distinction. But OCCUR is the more formal word of the two, and applies esp. to that which is thought of as definitely taking place as an event; HAPPEN is the more general term for that which in any way comes to pass; as, when did it happen? cf. when did it occur? His death occurred at midnight; I don't know what happened (cf. what occurred) after I left.

oc·cur'rence (ŏ·kûr'ĕns; 245), n. [Cf. F. occurrence. See OCCUR.] 1. Obs. a A casual meeting. b That which occurs, esp. adversely.
All the occurrence of my fortune. Shak.
2. Appearance or happening; as, the occurrence of a fire.

See DIAGONAL.] 1. A (plane) polygon of eight angles, and therefore eight sides. The area A of a regular octagon of side a may be found from the formula $A = 4.828\ a^2$.

2. Anything of octagonal form or section.

oc·tag'o·nal (ŏk·tăg'ō·năl; -n'l), adj. Having eight angles and eight sides. — oc·tag'o·nal·ly, adv.

oc'ta·he'dral (ŏk'tȧ·hē'drăl), adj. [See OCTAHEDRON.] Having eight plane faces; of, pertaining to, or formed in, octahedrons; as, octahedral crystals.

octahedral borax. See BORAX.

octahedral cleavage. Mineral. Cleavage parallel to the octahedral faces.

octahedral group. Math. The group of the 24 permutations of 4 elements; — so called as representing the rotations that bring a regular octahedron or cube out of and back into itself.

oc'ta·he'drite (-hē'drīt), n. Mineral. A tetragonal form of titanium dioxide, TiO_2; — called also anatase.

oc'ta·he'droid (-droid), n. Math. A regular polyhedroid bounded by eight equal cubes.

oc'ta·he'dron (-drŭn), n.; pl. -DRA (-drȧ). [Gr. octaedron, fr. oktaedros eight-sided, fr. okta- (for oktō eight) + hedra seat, base. See EIGHT; CHAIR.] Geom. A solid formed by eight faces. The regular octahedron is bounded by eight equal equilateral triangles. The volume V of a regular octahedron of side a can be found from the formula $V = .471a^3$.

oc·tam'er·ous (ŏk·tăm'ẽr·ŭs), adj. [octa- + -merous.] Bot. & Zool. Having or designating organs or parts arranged in eights. — oc·tam'er·ism (-lz'm), n.

oec'u·me'ni·an (ĕk'ū·mē'nĭ·ăn; ē'kū-; 159), adj. Ecumenical. Rare.

oec'u·men'ic (ĕk'ū·mĕn'ĭk; ē'kū-), oec'u·men'i·cal (-ĭ·kăl), adj. Ecumenic; ecumenical. — oec'u·men'i·cal·ism (-īz'm), n. — oec'u·me·nic'i·ty (-mē·nĭs'ĭ·tĭ), n.

oe'cus (ē'kŭs), n. [L., room, hall, fr. Gr. oikos house, room.] Class. Arch. An apartment, room, hall, or the like, in a dwelling house; sometimes, a small dining room adjoining a main dining room in a dwelling house.

Oe'de·mer'i·dae (ē'dē·mĕr'ĭ·dē), n. pl. [NL., fr. Gr. oidein to swell + mēros thigh.] Zool. A family of soft-bodied, elongate beetles with heteromerous instead of isomerous tarsi. The adults are usually strikingly colored and frequent flowers. The larvae feed on decaying wood. — oe'de·me'rid (-mē'rĭd), adj. & n.

Oe'dic·ne'mus (ē'dĭk·nē'mŭs), n. [NL., fr. Gr. oidein to swell + knēmē leg, tibia.] Zool. Syn. of BURHINUS. — oe'dic·ne'mine (-mĭn; -mīn; 156), adj.

Oed'i·pe'an (ĕd'ĭ·pē'ăn; ē'dĭ-), adj. Of or pert. to Oedipus.

Oed'i·pus (ĕd'ĭ·pŭs; ē'dĭ·pŭs; the second pron. is usual in Brit. use), n. [L., fr. Gr. Oidipous.] Son of Laius and Jocasta, king and queen of Thebes. At Oedipus's birth an oracle foretold that Laius would be killed by his son. The child was given to a herdsman to expose, who instead committed him to a comrade, and eventually Oedipus was adopted by Polybus, king of Corinth. When grown, an oracle having warned him that he would kill his father and marry his mother, Oedipus left home. On the journey he met Laius and, unaware of his relationship, slew him in an altercation. Later he solved the riddle of the Sphinx, thereby freeing Thebes from distress, and was made king of the city. He married Jocasta, by whom he became father of Eteocles, Polynices, Antigone, and Ismene. Eventually, his parentage being discovered, Jocasta hanged herself and Oedipus tore out his eyes. See ANTIGONE, CREON, ETEOCLES.

Oedipus at Colonus. A tragedy by Sophocles, produced 401 B.C. after the death of the dramatist. The action is laid in the grove of the Eumenides at Colonus, to which the blind Oedipus is led by his daughter Antigone. In the grove he dies, or, according to another tradition, is taken without death directly by the Eumenides.

Oedipus complex. Psychoanalysis. A complex arising in early childhood and involving a primary attachment to the parent of opposite sex, with hostility to the other; — sometimes used to mean its appearance in males only. See ELECTRA COMPLEX.

Oed'i·pus Ty·ran'nus (tĭ·răn'ŭs). A tragedy by Sophocles. The action takes place at Thebes and the story treats of Oedipus's discovery of the truth about his parentage and his marriage. See OEDIPUS.

Oe'do·go'ni·a'ce·ae (ē'dō·gō'nĭ·ā'sē·ē), n. pl. [NL. See OEDOGONIUM.] Bot. A small family of filamentous green algae having a characteristic method of growth which gives rise to series of narrow caplike cells occurring at various intervals in the filaments. They develop large zoospores with a crown of cilia and also oogonia and antheridia. The latter are sometimes on the same plant, but frequently on separate plants, the male plants being often of only a few cells and parasitic on the female filaments (see DWARF MALE). The family is included among the Chaetophorales or made a separate order. Oe'do·go'ni·a'les (-lēz). See STEPHANOKONTAE. — oe'do·go'ni·a'ceous (-shŭs), adj.

Oe'do·go'ni·um (ē'dō·gō'nĭ·ŭm), n. [NL., fr. Gr. oidein to swell + gonos seed.] Bot. A genus of fresh-water green algae typifying the family Oedogoniaceae, having long unbranched filaments, usually free-floating when mature but attached by special basal cells when young.

of (ŏv; 71), prep. [AS. of of, from, off; akin to D. & OS. af, G. ab off, OHG. aba from, away, ON., Dan., Sw., & Goth. af, L. ab, Gr. apo, Skr. apa; cf. Hittite appa back, off, away, again. Cf. OFF, A-, AB-, AFTER, APO-, POSITION.] In the most general sense: proceeding from; belonging to; relating to; connected with; concerning. Of from its primary sense from, away from (a sense retained in its independently developed variant, off) had already developed in Anglo-Saxon various uses in expressions involving the idea of moving or resulting from, as those of separation, derivation, source, agent, means, material, etc. The extension of these derived applications was much affected by its early use in translating the Latin ab, dē, ex, and as corresponding to the French de. The latter influence largely brought about its use in many phrase constructions, esp. with verbs and adjectives, notably as replacing the genitive (which see). Its uses including the chief derived uses from both Anglo-Saxon and French sources, usually denoting that from which something proceeds in fact or in thought or with which something has or has had a connection, are: — 1. Indicating the place or thing from which anything moves, comes, goes, or is directed or impelled; from; away from. Obs., replaced by off. "With the least drawing blood of another." Purchas.

2. Indicating that from which there has been transition, actual or supposed, as an anterior time or state. Archaic.

I, of brute, human; ye, of human, gods. Milton.

3. Indicating that from which position or reckoning is defined; from. Obs. exc. in certain phrases, such as north of, within an hour of, upwards of, wide of, and archaically in of old, from long ago; as, within a foot or two of him. Cf. def. 18.

4. Indicating that from which a person or thing is delivered, or with respect to which a person or thing is or is made destitute; from; — partly replaced by from, and now used only with certain verbs or adjectives; as, to cure, ease, empty, rid, deprive, or strip of; quit, rid, bare, destitute, empty of.

The man recovered of the bite. Goldsmith.

5. Indicating origin, source, or the like; thus: a From by birth or descent; as, he was born of a race of kings; he is of noble blood. b From as the place of birth, production, or distribution; having as its base of operation, point of initiation, or source as of issuance or derivation; as, of or pertaining to Italy, its people, or its language. c From as possessor, giver, seller, loser, etc.; as, to buy or rent of a dealer. d From as cause or occasion; as, to wish him joy of a son. e From as one who or that which is looked to for something; as, to ask a favor of one; to require or expect too much of one. f From undergoing or coping with; through; — introducing it, denoting the circumstances referred to; as, to have a hard life of it.

For it was of the Lord to harden their hearts. Josh. xi. 20.

7. Indicating the agent, or person by whom or thing by which anything is done or made: (1) after such past participles as loved, ordained, abandoned, forgotten; — now most frequently in archaic style; as, murderers go unwhipped of justice. "He is despised and rejected of men" (Is. liii. 3) (2) after an adjective or adjective phrase characterizing the act or conduct; as, it was kind of him to offer it (3) after a noun, indicating the maker or author, or, when the noun is one of action, the doer, often with the force of the subjective genitive; as, the Epistles of Paul; the plays of Shakespeare; the love of God, that is, God's love for us. Cf. def. 12.

It was a mad . . . trick of him to steal from the state. Shak.

(4) after a noun, Poet., indicating that agency or action by which anything is produced or brought about.

Thro' one wide chasm of time and frost. Tennyson.

8. Indicating means or instrument; with; on. Archaic.

Pave it all of silver and of gold. Chaucer.

9. Indicating the material, substance, parts, or elements composing or used in making anything, or the contents held; as, a throne of gold; a cup of water; an army of ten thousand men; a distance of five miles; a genus of plants or animals; Her., barry of six, that is, having six bars.

10. Indicating a particular example belonging to a class denoted by the limited noun, or an appositional relation; as, the continent of America; the city of Rome; specif., Now Rare, identified with; embodied or typified in; in.

11. Indicating that which is treated or dealt with as subject in relation to thought, feeling, or acting, or to which reference is made; about; relating to; with reference to; as regards; as, to boast of one's achievements; to tell, judge, or doubt of a matter; what has become of him? Formerly also after nouns; as, a treatise of government.

12. Indicating the object after a noun denoting an action or agent, or the object of action or sensuous perception suggested by certain nouns; — corresponding to the objective genitive; as, the commission of a crime; the feeding of an army; the love of God, that is, our love for God; a swallow of wine; a sight of squalor. Cf. def. 7.

13. In many verbal and adjective constructions, denoting a relationship that is hardly more than a grammatical construction, or one that approaches, but is not clearly identifiable with, some one of the foregoing applications; — representing an Anglo-Saxon or Latin genitive dependent on a verb or adjective; as, he smelled of the flower; to accuse of treason; you have the advantage of me; guilty of homicide; observant of change; astride of a horse.

14. Indicating that with respect to which an attribute is ascribed, with regard to which a fact is affirmed, or to which a measure of time or extent is applied; in respect to; in; — now to a considerable extent replaced by in; as, slow of speech; forty years of age; after hours of study; thousands of miles of travel.

False of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand. Shak.

15. Indicating an attribute or distinctive mark which characterizes a person or thing; — corresponding to the descriptive genitive, denoting a quality, quantity, age, price distinguishing or specifying fact or thing, or the like, and sometimes passing into or connected with other senses; as, a man of courage; she was all of a tremble; a ship of a hundred tons; a boy of ten years; a time of drought; a sword of their manufacture; a book of his selection.

16. Indicating the aggregate or whole which includes the part denoted by the limited word or words or a part referred to, considered, affected, etc.; belonging to a number or quantity mentioned; from amongst; — corresponding to the partitive genitive; as, most of the company; "the poor of his people" (Is. xiv. 32); the flower of the family; the King of kings; of the applicants two passed; he is of the aristocracy. Specif.: a Indicating that to which a measure of quantity or extent is applied in limitation; as, a ton of coal; a year of life; one half of his salary. b Indicating that from which some is removed or expended by the action represented in a preceding verb, such as give, take, partake, buy, eat; as, to give of one's time and energy; to buy recklessly of the peddler's wares.

It is a duty to communicate of those blessings we have received. Franklin.

☞ Sometimes the partitive word may include the whole, as in, all of them; "a hundred upon poor four of us" (Shak.); rarely, by a curious idiom, the partitive word is a superlative or a noun or pronoun denoting an example of a whole which is logically exclusive of the part, either from the nature of the case; as in, "the fairest of her daughters Eve" (Milton); or by the use of other, else, or the like, as a qualifier; as in, "Of all men else I have avoided thee" (Shak.).

17. Indicating the possessive relationship, otherwise expressed by the possessive case; belonging or pertaining to, or connected with (a place, time, person, or thing); as, the right of the possessor; the gate of heaven; the mistletoe of Europe; in the days of Herod; the genius of the language; the cube of a number. See POSSESSIVE, adj.

18. Indicating a point or space in time relating either to a single or to a usual action or occurrence; thus: at some point or points within the limits of time describing; during; on; — often governing, without distinction of meaning, a singular with an indefinite article or a plural without an article, also used frequently in the phrases of late, of old (cf. def. 3), of yore; as, he plays golf of a Sunday; to sleep well of nights; of late years.

19. Before (an hour by the clock); as, quarter of ten. Chiefly Colloq.

20. In obsolete senses and idiomatic uses after certain verbs, now represented by other prepositions except occasionally in dialect speech; as: a On; as, a plague of all cowards. "He came of an errand." Shak. b In; as, to fail of a matter. c At. d To; as, to set fire of it. e By; as, to sit of oneself. f With; as, what was done of them?

of-. [AS. See OF, prep., OFF.] A prefix, now replaced by off-, used with verbs in the sense of away, off, but frequently adding sense of destroying, injuring, or overcoming.

of-. The form taken by OB- before f, as offend.

off (ôf; 185), adv. [ME. of, orig. the same word as E. of, prep., AS. of, adv. & prep. See OF.] In a general sense, denoting from, or away from, something. Specifically used: 1. From a place or position; away; to a distance; as, to march off; to fly off; also, so as to prevent close approach; to beat off; along and from a surface, esp. in a slanting or oblique direction; as, to slide off. Hence, a Naut. Away from the land, shore, ship, or wind; as, nothing off (see NOTHING OFF); the ship stood off. b Into an unconscious state; as, to drop off for a few minutes.

3. To a state or point of discontinuance, exhaustion, or completion; to a finish; as, the pain passed off; water cools off; to break off abruptly; also, so as to result in lessening; as, to throw off ten dollars; profits fell off.

The true ohm, or theoretical ohm, is a resistance equal to 10^9 units of resistance of the C. G. S. system of electromagnetic units. The international ohm, defined by the International Electrical Congress at Chicago in 1893, is substantially equal to the true ohm and is now legalized by Great Britain, the United States, and various other states. It is the resistance offered to an unvarying electric current by a column of mercury at the temperature of melting ice, 14.4521 grams in mass, of a constant cross-sectional area, and of the length of 106.3 centimeters. The practical ohm, as originally defined in 1863 and called the British Association unit or ohm, is equal to .9866 international ohm. The so-called legal ohm (defined by the Paris Congress of 1884) is equal to .9972 international ohm. ohm'age (ōm'ĭj), n. Elec. The resistance of a conductor expressed in ohms.

ohm'-am'me'ter, n. A combined ohmmeter and ammeter.

ohm'ic (ōm'ĭk), adj. Elec. Of or pert. to an ohm; measured in ohms.

ohmic resistance. Elec. True (electrical) resistance when necessary to distinguish from certain other quantities, as reactance, apparent resistance, etc.

ohm'me'ter (ōm'mē'tẽr), n. [ohm + -meter.] Elec. An instrument for indicating directly resistance in ohms.

Ohmmeter. 1 Variable Resistor; 2 Milliammeter; 3 Battery; 4 Circuit-closing Switch; 5, 6 Posts; 7 Unknown Resistance. 1 is adjusted to full-scale deflection of 2 when 5 and 6 are short circuited. Insertion of 7 between 5 and 6 causes 2 to show a lower reading. The scale of 2 is then calibrated to read directly in ohms.

ohm'mi·le', n. Elec. A resistance of one ohm per mile.

Ohm's law (ōmz). 1. Elec. The law that the strength or intensity of an unvarying electrical current is directly proportional to the electromotive force, and inversely proportional to the resistance of the circuit. The law does not hold for alternating currents unless modified so as to include the effects of counter electromotive force. 2. Acoustics. The statement that the human ear in perceiving a complex sound receives not a sensation of a single sound but sensations of the separate components of the complex wave causing the sound.

o·ho' (ō·hō'), interj. [O + ho, interj.] An exclamation expressing taunting or amused surprise.

-o'ic (-ō'ĭk). Chem. A suffix from benzoic, used in naming acids and related compounds, as in capr*oic,* naphth*oic.*

-oid (-oid; see note, below). [Gr. -o-eidēs; cf. F. -oïde, L. -oïdes. See 1st -ODE.] A suffix meaning like, resembling, in the form of, as in adenoid, colloid, Caucasoid, asteroid, spheroid. It forms adjectives, which are often used substantively. Cf. -FORM, -LIKE. In zoology words in -oid are often used also as sing. for -oidea, as in echin*oid.*

☞ In Greek and Latin the o and i are pronounced separately, and such pronunciations as ăn·thrō'pō·Id (for anthropoid) are occasionally heard among scholars.

-oidal. A suffix, -oid + -al, forming adjectives corresponding to nouns ending in -oid, as in ellips*oidal,* metall*oidal.*

-oi'de·a (-oi'dē·ä; see note, below). [NL. See -OID.] Zool. A combining form used to denote a class or, esp. in entomology, a superfamily, as in Echin*oidea,* Musc*oidea,* Geomet*roidea.* Also, esp. formerly, -oi'da (-dä), -oi'de·ae (-dē·ē), -oi'de·i (-dē·ī). Nouns denoting individual members are formed in -oid, derivative adjectives in -oi'de·an (-oi'dē·ăn).

☞ As Latin these endings -oida, -oidea, -oideae, -oidei (-oideus) are properly pronounced -ō'ĭ·dä, -ō·Id'ē·ä, etc., but scientific terms formed with them are generally pronounced -oi'dä, -oi'dē·ä, etc., on the analogy of -oid, although some scholars insist on the etymological pronunciation.

-oi'de·us (-oi'dē·ŭs). Anat. A New Latin suffix, -oid + Latin -eus (see -EOUS); — used esp. in names of muscles, as in rhomb*oideus.*

o·id'i·oid (ō·Id'ĭ·oid), adj. Resembling or pertaining to fungi of the genus Oïdium.

o·id'i·o·my·co'sis (ō·Id'ĭ·ō·mī·kō'sĭs), n. [NL. See OIDIUM; MYCOSIS.] Med. Infection with fungi of the genus Oïdium. — o·id'i·o·my·cot'ic (-kŏt'ĭk), adj.

O·id'i·um (ō·Id'ĭ·ŭm), n. [NL., dim. fr. Gr. ōion egg.] 1. Bot. a A form genus of imperfect fungi of the family Moniliaceae. Many species are now considered to represent conidial stages of various powdery mildews. Cf. 1st THRUSH, 1. O. lactis occurs on milk and dairy products. See BLASTOMYCES. b [not cap.; pl. -IA (-ä).] A fungus of this genus; also, one of the concatenate conidia found in this group. 2. [not cap.; pl. -IA (-ä).] Plant Pathol. Any disease, esp. that of the grape, caused by a fungus of the genus Oïdium; powdery mildew. Cf. OIDIOMYCOSIS.

o·i'i (ō·ē'ē), n. [Maori.] A muttonbird (Puffinus griseus) of New Zealand.

oi·kol'o·gy (oi·kŏl'ō·jĭ), n. [Gr. oikos house + -logy.] 1. Var. of ECOLOGY. 2. The science of housekeeping; household economics.

oi'ko·plast (oi'kō·plăst), n. [Gr. oikos house + -plast.] Zool. One of the ectodermal cells which secrete the gelatinous layer in the Appendicularia.

oil (oil), n. [ME. oile, fr. OF. oile, oille (F. huile), fr. L. oleum, fr. Gr. elaion olive oil. See OLIVE; cf. PETROLEUM.] 1. a Any of a large class of unctuous combustible substances which are liquid, or at least easily liquefiable on warming, and soluble in ether, but not in water. They are usually lighter than water and soluble also in alcohol. They leave a greasy stain (not always permanent) on paper, cloth, etc. According to their origin, oils are classed as vegetable, animal, and mineral, oils; according to their behavior on heating, as fixed, or fatty, and volatile, or essential, oils. Most fixed oils belong chemically to the fats, though a few may be regarded as waxes. See FAT, n., 8; WAX, 2 a. The fixed oils are classed as drying, semidrying, and nondrying, according to the degree to which they are converted into solids by absorbing oxygen when exposed in thin films to the air. By hydrogenation (hardening) carried out on a large scale many fixed oils are converted into more valuable solid fats. See HARDEN, v. t., 7. The various oils are used as lubricants and illuminants, as fuel, as food, in making soap and candles, in perfuming and flavoring, etc. b Specif., petroleum.

☞ See TABLES OF OILS AND FATS, on p. 1693.

Syn. — OLD, ANCIENT, VENERABLE, ANTIQUE, ANTIQUATED, ARCHAIC, OBSOLETE. That is OLD (opposed to young, new; see AGED) which has lived or existed long, or which has been long in use or has stood for a long time in a particular relation to something; that is ANCIENT (opposed esp. to modern) which lived, existed, or happened long ago, or which has existed or come down from remote antiquity; as, "O heavens, if you do love old men, . . . if yourselves are old" (Shak.); old wine, books, friends; old as the hills; "From the ancient world those giants came" (Milton); "some illustrious line so ancient that it has no beginning." (Gibbon). But ancient and old are often interchangeable; as, "It is an ancient mariner" (Coleridge); "Old, unhappy, far-off things, and battles long ago" (Wordsworth). VENERABLE, as here compared (cf. AUGUST), suggests the hoariness and dignity of age; as, "an old man . . . [who] appeared the more ancient from his gray locks, that were truly venerable" (Smollett); "the venerable priest . . . lifting up his aged hands" (Keats). ANTIQUE (in present usage) applies to that which has come down from ancient (esp. classical) times, or which is in some way related to them; that is ANTIQUATED which has gone out of vogue or fashion; the word often implies a slight touch of contempt; as, "the famous antique statue of the huntress Diana" (Thackeray); "Our admiration of the antique is not admiration of the old, but of the natural" (Emerson); "He kissed the young man upon the forehead in a gracious, distant, antiquated way" (Stevenson). That is ARCHAIC which has the characteristics of an earlier, sometimes of a primitive, period; that is OBSOLETE which has gone out of use; "It [the Divine Comedy] is yet the first book of modern times which has such quality as to possess perpetual contemporaneousness. It has become in part archaic, but it does not become antiquated" (C. E. Norton); "Dictionary of Archaic and Provincial Words" (Halliwell); an archaic bas-relief; "All your opinions will be out of date, your jokes obsolete" (Lamb); "As [a writer's] language grows obsolete, his thoughts must grow obscure" (Dryden). Cf. PRIMARY.

oleo oil. A yellow oil of buttery consistency expressed from certain animal fats (esp. the high grade of beef tallow known as premier jus), the greater portion of the solid fat (oleo stearin) being left behind. It is used in making oleomargarine.

o′le·op′tene (ō′lē·ŏp′tēn), n. [oleo- + Gr. ptēnos fleeting.] Chem. Elaeoptene. Rare.

o′le·o·re′frac·tom′e·ter (ō′lē·ō·rē′frăk·tŏm′ē·tĕr), n. A refractometer for use with oils.

o′le·o·res′in (ō′lē·ō·rĕz′ĭn; -'n), n. [oleo- + resin.] 1. A natural product consisting essentially of essential oil and resin, as copaiba, elemi, etc. See resin; cf. balsam, 1 a.

2. Pharm. A liquid or semiliquid preparation extracted (as from capsicum, cubebs, or ginger) by means of ether, consisting essentially of fixed or volatile oil holding resin in solution. — o′le·o·res′in·ous (-I·nŭs), adj.

o′le·o·sac′cha·rum (ō′lē·ō·săk′ȧ·rŭm), n. [NL. See oleo-; saccharine.] Pharm. A homogeneous mixture made by triturating sugar with two per cent of volatile oil.

o′le·o·ste′a·rate (-stē′ȧ·rāt), n. A compound which is both an oleate and a stearate.

o′le·o·ste′a·rin (-stē′ȧ·rĭn; -stē′r′Ĭn), n. Also -ste′a·rine (-rĭn; -rēn). [oleo- + stearin.] The solid residue of tallow after removal of oleo oil or tallow oil; beef stearin. Its chief use is in lard substitutes.

o′le·o·tho′rax (-thō′răks), n. [oleo- + thorax.] Med. A state in which oil is present in the pleural cavity. Cf. pneumothorax.

o′le·ous (ō′lē·ŭs), adj. Also o′le·ose (-ōs; ō′lē·ōs′). [L. oleosus.] Oily. Rare. — o′le·os′i·ty (-ŏs′I·tĭ), n. Rare.

ol′er·a′ceous (ŏl′ĕr·ā′shŭs), adj. [L. oleraceus, holeraceus, fr. olus, oleris, holus, -eris, garden or potherbs.] a Having the qualities of potherbs; esculent. b Obs. Of or pertaining to the Ol′er·a′ce·ae (-sē·ē), in Linnaeus's proposed natural system.

ol′er·i·cul′ture (ŏl′ĕr·I·kŭl′tŭr), n. [L. olus, oleris, potherb + E. culture.] Culture of edible vegetables. — ol′er·i·cul′tur·al (-kŭl′tŭr·ăl), adj. — ol′er·i·cul′tur·al·ly, adv.

Ō′lē′ron′ (ō′lā′rôn′), adj. Designating, or pertaining to, the laws of Oléron.

Oléron, Laws of. See Laws of Oléron.

O′le·threu′ti·dae (ō′lē·thrōō′tĭ·dē; 242), n. pl. [NL., fr. Olethreutes, type genus (fr. Gr. olethros destruction) + -idae.] Zool. A large family of small moths including the codling moth, the Oriental peach moth, and others. The typical genus is O′le·threu′tes (-tēz). — o′le·threu′tid (-tĭd), n. & adj.

‖o′le·um (ō′lē·ŭm), n. [L.] 1. Oil; an oil; — chiefly in phrases that are the Latin names of oils (cf. oil, Table I), in o′le·um ab·sin′thi·i (ăb·sĭn′thĭ·ī), oil of wormwood; o′le·um ci′nae (sĭ′nē), oil of wormseed; o′le·um men′thae pi′pe·ri′tae (pĭp′ĕr·ī′tē), oil of peppermint; o′le·um ni′grum (nī′grŭm) (see Celastrus); oleum sinapis volatile (see mustard oil, 1).

2. Fuming sulphuric acid. See sulphuric acid.

ol·fac′ti·ble (ŏl·făk′tĭ·b'l), adj. Also -ta·ble (-tȧ·b'l). Capable of being smelled.

ol·fac′tion (ŏl·făk′shŭn), n. [See olfactory.] Physiol. The sense of smell; act, process, or faculty of smelling.

ol′fac·tol′o·gy (ŏl′făk·tŏl′ō·jĭ), n. [See olfactory; -logy.] The scientific study of smells.

ol′fac·tom′e·ter (ŏl′făk·tŏm′ē·tĕr), n. [See olfactory; -meter.] Any instrument for measuring the sensitivity of the sense of smell and the relative intensities of different odors. — ol·fac′to·met′ric (ŏl·făk′tō·mĕt′rĭk), adj. — ol′fac·tom′e·try (ŏl′făk·tŏm′ē·trĭ), n.

ol·fac′to·ri·ly (-tō·rĭ·lĭ), adv. In or by the sense of smell.

ol·fac′to·ry (ŏl·făk′tō·rĭ), adj. [L. olfactus, past part. of olfacere to smell, fr. odefacere, fr. odere to have a smell + facere to make. See odor; fact.] Of, pertaining to, or connected with, the sense of smell; as, an olfactory nerve or organ. In vertebrates the olfactory organ is situated in the upper portion of the nasal passages (see nose, 9), but in invertebrates the organs which are known or supposed to be organs for smelling are variously placed. The antennae of insects and other arthropods, certain pits on the heads of various worms, and the osphradia of mollusks, are generally considered as olfactory organs.

olfactory area. See area, 7.

olfactory bulb. See olfactory lobe.

olfactory capsule. Zool. A nasal capsule.

olfactory cell. Anat. A sensory cell specialized for smell; in vertebrates, one of the spindle-shaped nerve cells buried in the nasal mucous membrane, each having a round nucleus and two slender processes. The inner process is called an olfactory nerve fiber; the short outer one is commonly called an olfactory hair.

olfactory gyrus. Either of two gyri, lateral and medial, by which the olfactory tract on either side communicates with the olfactory area of the forebrain.

olfactory lobe. A lobe of the brain projecting forward from the anterior lower part of each cerebral hemisphere. In most vertebrates it is well developed, but in man it is reduced and consists of a narrow, elongated body (the olfactory tract) which arises by two roots from the limbic lobe and ends in front in an oval mass known as the olfactory bulb, in which the olfactory nerves terminate.

olfactory nerves. a The special nerves of smell, in man about 20 in number on each side. They arise from the olfactory cells of the nose, pass through the cribriform plate of the ethmoid, and terminate in the olfactory bulb on either side. They constitute collectively the first pair of cranial nerves, as usually enumerated. b Incorrectly, in man and some mammals, the olfactory tracts.

olfactory pit. Zool. a Any olfactory organ having the form of a small depression, as in Amphioxus and various invertebrates. b Embryol. A depression on the head which afterwards becomes converted into a nasal passage; a nasal pit.

ol·fac′ty (ŏl·făk′tĭ), n. An arbitrary unit used in olfactometry for measuring the strength of an odorous stimulus.

Ol′ga (ōl′gȧ), n. [Russ.] Fem. proper name.

Ol′ger Dan′ske (ōl′gĕr dăn′skĕ). [Dan., also Holger Danske, of OF. origin.] Ogier the Dane, the national hero of Denmark, fabled to be sleeping until danger shall wake him.

ol′i·ban (ŏl′ĭ·băn), n. [F., fr. ML. olibanum.] Olibanum. R.

o·lib′a·num (ō·lĭb′ȧ·nŭm), n. [ML., fr. Ar. al-lubān; cf. Gr. libanos, of Sem. origin.] The fragrant gum resin frankincense.

-olic. Chem. a A suffix used in naming certain acids containing a triple bond, as in propi*olic* acid. b A suffix, 1st -ol + -ic, used in naming hydroxy acids, as in glyc*olic* acid.

ol′id (ŏl′ĭd), adj. [L. olidus, fr. olere to smell. See ODOR.] Having a strong, disagreeable smell; fetid.

-o·lide (-ō·lĭd; -lĭd). Also -o·lid. Chem. A suffix, -ol + -ide, in the Geneva nomenclature used after the names of hydrocarbons in naming lactones, as in pentano*lide.*

ol′i·faunt (ŏl′ĭ·fănt), Ni′gel. See NIGEL.

olig-. = OLIGO-, as in: ol′i·ga·can′thous, ol′i·gae′mi·a, ol′i·gan′drous, ol′i·gan′thous, ol′i·ge′mi·a.

ol′i·garch (ŏl′ĭ·gärk), n. [Gr. oligarchēs.] A member of an oligarchy; one of the rulers in an oligarchy.

ol′i·garch (ŏl′ĭ·gärk), adj. [olig- + Gr. archē origin.] Bot. Having few vascular elements; — said of certain monostelic roots.

ol′i·gar′chal (-gär′kăl), adj. Oligarchic.

ol′i·gar′chic (-gär′kĭk), ol′i·gar′chi·cal (-kĭ·kăl), adj. [Gr. oligarchikos; cf. F. oligarchique.] Of, pertaining to, or supporting, oligarchy. — ol′i·gar′chi·cal·ly, adv.

ol′i·gar·chism (ŏl′ĭ·gär·kĭz′m), n. Oligarchy.

ol′i·gar·chist (-kĭst), n. An advocate of oligarchy.

ol′i·gar·chize (-kīz), v. t. To turn into, or subject to, an oligarchy.

ol′i·garch′y (ŏl′ĭ·gär′kĭ), n.; pl. -IES (-kĭz). [Gr. oligarchia, fr. oligos few, little + archein to rule, govern; cf. F. oligarchie. See OLIGO-; -ARCHY.] Government by the few; a form of government in which the power is in the hands of a few, or a state so governed; also, those who form the ruling few. It is commonly distinguished from an aristocracy as being the rule of a few for corrupt or selfish purposes. Cf. ARISTOCRACY, 1.

ol′i·gid′ri·a (ŏl′ĭ·jĭd′rĭ·ȧ), n. [NL., fr. olig- + Gr. hidrōs sweat.] Med. Deficient perspiration.

ol′i·gist (ŏl′ĭ·jĭst), n., or oligist iron. [Gr. oligistos, superl. of oligos few, little; cf. F. oligiste.] Mineral. Hematite; specular iron ore; — so called because it contains less iron than magnetite. — ol′i·gis′tic (-jĭs′tĭk), ol′i·gis′ti·cal (-tĭ·kăl), adj.

ol′i·go- (ŏl′ĭ·gō-), olig-. [Gr. oligos small; akin to Gr. loigos ruin, death, Lith. liga disease, Alban. lik evil, thin.] A combining form, Greek oligo-, olig-, meaning few, but a little, scant, as in *oligo*dontous *oligo*siderite; specif., Med., deficiency, insufficiency; — in nouns denoting condition, as in *oligo*cythemia. The meanings of the words below can be understood from the definitions of their elements.

oligocholia	oligopepsia	oligosialia
oligochylia	oligopetalous	oligospermia oligocystic	oligophosphaturia	oligospermous oligodactylia	oligophyllous	oligostemonous oligodipsia	oligoplasmia	oligotokous oligogalactia	oligopnea	oligotrichia oligohemia	oligopsychia	oligotrophy
oligolactia	oligorhizous

Ol′i·go·cene (-sēn), adj. [oligo- + Gr. kainos new, recent.] Geol. Designating, or pertaining to, a period of the Tertiary between the Eocene and Miocene. See GEOLOGY, Chart, TERTIARY, adj., 4. — n. The Oligocene period or system.

Ol′i·go·chae′ta (-kē′tȧ), n. pl. [NL., fr. oligo- + -chaeta.] Zool. An order of chaetopod worms which includes the earthworms and related species. They are all hermaphrodite, the ovaries and testes being few and compact. There are no definite parapodia, usually no cirri or gills, and only a few setae on each segment. There is no distinct head. The development is direct, without metamorphosis. Most of the Oligochaeta inhabit earth or fresh water; a few are marine. — ol′i·go·chaete′ (ŏl′ĭ·gō·kēt′), adj. & n. — ol′i·go·chae′tous (-kē′tŭs), adj.

ol′i·go·chrome′ (ŏl′ĭ·gō·krōm′), adj. [oligo- + -chrome.] Painted or otherwise decorated in a few colors. — n. A design in few colors.

ol′i·go·chro·me′mi·a, or -mae′mi·a (-krō·mē′mĭ·ȧ), n. [NL., fr. oligo- + chrom- + -emia.] Med. A morbid condition marked by deficiency of hemoglobin in the blood.

ol′i·go·chro·nom′e·ter (-krō·nŏm′ē·tĕr), n. Instrument to measure very small time intervals.

ol′i·go·clase (ŏl′ĭ·gō·klās), n. [oligo- + -clase.] Mineral. A triclinic soda-lime feldspar. See FELDSPAR.

ol′i·go·cla′site (-klā′sīt), n. [oligoclase + -ite.] Petrog. a An altered norite whose feldspar has been changed to saussurite and oligoclase. b A leucocratic differentiation rock composed essentially of oligoclase.

ol′i·go·cy·the′mi·a, -thae′mi·a (-sĭ·thē′mĭ·ȧ), n. [NL. See OLIGO-; -CYTE; -EMIA.] Med. Anemia in which the blood is deficient in red corpuscles. — ol′i·go·cy·the′mic, -thae′mic (-thē′mĭk; -thēm′ĭk), adj.

ol′i·go·den·drog′li·a (-dĕn·drŏg′lĭ·ȧ), n. pl. [NL., fr. oligo- + dendro- + -glia.] Adventitial cells of the central nervous system, characterized by vinelike processes.

ol′i·go·den′dro·gli·o′ma (-dĕn′drō·glĭ·ō′mȧ), n.; pl. -OMATA (-mȧ·tȧ), -OMAS (-mȧz). [NL. See OLIGODENDROGLIA; -OMA.] Med. A tumor of the nervous system composed of oligodendroglia.

ol′i·go·don′tous (ŏl′ĭ·gō·dŏn′tŭs), adj. [oligo- + Gr. odōn, odontos, tooth.] Zool. Having few teeth.

ol′i·go·dy·nam′ic (-dī·năm′ĭk; -dĭ·năm′ĭk), adj. Chem., Physiol., etc. Of certain substances, effective in small quantities; also, designating or characterized by the effect produced by small quantities of such substances.

ol′i·go·hy·dram′ni·os (-hī·drăm′nĭ·ŏs), n. [NL., fr. oligo- + hydramnios.] Med. Deficiency in the amount of amniotic fluid. It may lead to deformity of the fetus.

ol′i·gom′er·ous (-gŏm′ĕr·ŭs), adj. [oligo- + -merous.] Bot. Having one or more whorls with fewer members than others, as some heteromerous flowers. — ol′i·gom′er·y (-ĭ), n.

ol′i·go·me·to′chi·a (-gō·mē·tō′kĭ·ȧ), n. [NL., fr. oligo- + Gr. metochē participle.] Use of few participles or participial constructions; — opposed to polymetochia. — ol′i·go·me·to′chic (-kĭk), adj.

ol′i·go·my·o′dae (-mī·ō′dē), Ol′i·go·my·o′di (-dī), n. pl. [NL., fr. oligo- + Gr. mys, myos, muscle.] Zool. A group of birds, nearly equiv. to Picarii, or to Mesomyodi.

ol′i·go·my·o′di·an (-dĭ·ăn), adj. a Having few syringeal muscles. b Pertaining to the Oligomyodae.

ol′i·go·my′oid (-mī′oid), ol′i·go·my·oi′de·an (-mī·oi′dē·ăn), adj. [oligo- + Gr. mys, myos, a muscle + -oid.] Oligomyodian.

Ol′i·go·neph′ri·a (-nĕf′rĭ·ȧ), n. pl. [NL., fr. oligo- + Gr. nephros kidney.] Zool. A division of insects having few Malpighian tubes, as the Thysanura, Hemiptera, Lepidoptera, etc. — ol′i·go·neph′rous (-rŭs), adj. — ol′i·go·neph′ric (-rĭk), adj.

ol′i·go·nite′ (ŏl′ĭ·gō·nīt′; ō·lĭg′ō-), n. [G. oligonspat (fr. Gr. oligon, neut. of oligos little) + -ite; — so called from its poverty in iron.] Mineral. A manganiferous variety of siderite.

ol′i·goph′a·gous (ŏl′ĭ·gŏf′ȧ·gŭs), adj. [oligo- + -phagous.] Eating only a few specific kinds of food; — applied, specif., Zool., to certain insects having only a few, usually related, food plants.

ol′i·go·phre′ni·a (ŏl′ĭ·gō·frē′nĭ·ȧ), n. [NL., fr. oligo- + -phrenia.] Mental deficiency. — ol′i·go·phren′ic (-frĕn′ĭk), adj. & n.

ol′i·go·proth′e·sy (-prŏth′ē·sĭ), n. [oligo- + Gr. prothesis a preposition.] Rhet. Avoidance of prepositions in composition. — ol′i·go·pro·thet′ic (-prō·thĕt′ĭk), adj.

ol′i·go·py′rene (-pī′rēn), adj. [oligo- + pyrene.] Containing less than the normal amount of chromatin; — said of sperm cells.

ol′i·go·sid′er·ite (-sĭd′ĕr·īt), n. [oligo- + siderite.] Mineral. A meteorite characterized by presence of but a small amount of metallic iron. — -sid·der′ic (-sĭ·dĕr′ĭk), adj.

ol′i·go·site (ŏl′ĭ·gō·sīt), n. Petrog. = OLIGOCLASITE, n., b.

ol′i·go·syl′la·bic (-sĭl′ȧ·b′ĭ), n. A word of few syllables. — ol′i·go·syl·lab′ic (-sĭ·lăb′ĭk), adj.

ol′i·go·syn·thet′ic (-sĭn·thĕt′ĭk), adj. [oligo- + synthetic.] Philol. Adding but few derivative elements to a stem.

ol′i·go·troph′ic (-trŏf′ĭk), adj. [oligo- + -trophic; with ref. to food for animal life.] Having abundant oxygen in the lower stratum in summer; — said of lakes.

ol′i·go·trop′ic (-trŏp′ĭk), adj. [oligo- + -tropic.] Zool. Visiting only a few species of flowers for nectar; — said of certain bees. Cf. MONOTROPIC, POLYTROPIC.

ol′i·gu·re′sis (-gū·rē′sĭs), n. Also -gu·re′si·a (-sĭ·ȧ). [NL., fr. olig- + uresis.] Med. Deficiency in the excretion of urine. — ol′i·gu·ret′ic (-rĕt′ĭk; -rē′tĭk), adj.

ol′i·gu′ri·a (-gū′rĭ·ȧ), n. [NL., fr. olig- + -uria.] Med. A morbid condition characterized by oliguresis.

o·lin′da bug (ō·lĭn′dȧ; ō·lēn′dȧ). [From Olinda (town), Maui Island.] A weevil (Pantomorus godmani). Hawaii.

O·lin′i·a (ō·lĭn′ĭ·ȧ), n. [NL., after Johan Henrik Olin, Sw. botanist.] Bot. A small genus of African shrubs (order Myrtales), constituting the family O·lin′i·a′ce·ae (-ā′sē·ē). — o·lin′i·a′ceous (-shŭs), adj.

ol′i·o (ō′lĭ·ō; 159), n.; pl. -OS (-ōz). [Sp. olla an earthen pot, a dish of boiled or stewed meat, fr. L. olla a pot, dish. See OVEN; cf. OLLA, OLLA-PODRIDA.] 1. a An olla (def. 2). b A hodgepodge; a heterogeneous mixture.
2. A mixture; a medley; a hodgepodge.
3. A collection of miscellaneous pieces, as pictures, verses, pieces of music, etc.; a medley; a potpourri.
4. Theat. The vaudeville part of a burlesque performance or minstrel show. U. S.

ol′i·to′ry (ŏl′ĭ·tō′rĭ or, esp. Brit., -tĕr·ĭ), adj. [L. olitorius, holi-, fr. olitor, holitor, a kitchen gardener, fr. olus, holus, vegetables.] Pertaining to, or produced in, a kitchen garden; relating to potherbs.

ol′i·to′ry, n. Obs. a A potherb. b A kitchen garden.

O Little Town of Bethlehem. A hymn (1867) by Phillips Brooks.

o·li′va (ō·lī′vȧ), n. = OLIVARY BODY.

O·li′va (ō·lī′vȧ), n. [L., an olive.] Zool. A genus of marine univalve mollusks, the type of a family, O·liv′i·dae (-lĭv′ĭ·dē), of the suborder Stenoglossa. See OLIVE SHELL.

ol′i·va′ceous (ŏl′ĭ·vā′shŭs), adj. [L. oliva olive.] Resembling the olive; of the color olive; olive-green.

ol′i·var′y (ŏl′ĭ·vĕr′ĭ or, esp. Brit., -vĕr·ĭ), adj. [L. olivarius belonging to olives, fr. oliva an olive.] Anat. a Shaped like an olive. b Of or pert. to the olivary body.

olivary body. Anat. An oval prominence on each side of the anterior surface of the medulla oblongata just below the pons. It is formed by the olivary nucleus, a lamina of gray matter the surface of which is covered by a very thin layer of white matter. These structures are sometimes called the inferior olivary body or nucleus, to distinguish them from a smaller and more dorsally situated mass of gray matter, the superior olivary nucleus, which is a group of cells in the auditory path. There is also a small accessory nucleus on the mesial side of the inferior olivary body.

olivary process. Anat. A small eminence behind the optic groove on the sphenoid bone.

ol′i·vas′ter (ŏl′ĭ·văs′tĕr), adj. [OF. olivastre (F. olivâtre), fr. L. oliva olive.] Of the color of the olive. Obs.

ol′ive (ŏl′ĭv), n. [OF., fr. L. oliva, fr. Gr. elai(w)a, of uncert. origin. Cf. OIL, OLEAGINOUS.] 1. A tree (Olea europaea) cultivated from antiquity throughout Asia Minor and southern Europe for its fruit; also, its fruit or its wood. The tree has a low, often gnarled trunk, willowlike leaves, and yellow flowers. Its branches are familiar emblems of peace. The fruit is an important source of oil, and is eaten as a pickle or relish when green. The ripe olive is bluish black in color, and is also eaten. The wood is hard and yellow, often handsomely variegated, and is used in turnery.

Olive. 1 Flowering Branch; 2 Fruit. (⅓)

2. Any other species of Olea; also (with a qualifying term), any of numerous shrubs and trees of the same or other families, more or less resembling the true olive.

3. Of or pertaining to Olympia in ancient Elis, in the western part of the Peloponnesus. The Olympian games formed the most notable of the four great Panhellenic festivals (the others being the Isthmian, Nemean, and Pythian). The festival was held every fourth year, in the first month after the summer solstice. They claimed a continuous celebration from the year 776 B.C., and this date came to be adopted by the Greeks as the primary date of their chronology, which was reckoned in Olympiads (see OLYMPIAD, 1). A general peace was maintained throughout the festival, and for a week before it began and after it ended. The games were of the usual type (see AGON a), the prize of the victor consisting of a crown of wild olive, a palm branch, and the right to erect a statue in the Altis, or central enclosure of the sacred precincts. Zeus was the chief deity to whom the festival was devoted. A modified revival (always called Olympic games), of the ancient Olympian games, consisting of international athletic games, races, etc., is now held once in four years, the first having been at Athens in 1896.

O·lym'pi·an, n. 1. An inhabitant of Olympus; esp., Gr. Relig., one of the deities supposed to dwell upon Olympus, forming a circle of gods of the highest rank under the direct oversight of Zeus. As generally constituted, the Olympians formed a group of twelve, though the same deities were not always chosen to make up this group. Besides Zeus, the Olympian gods included Apollo, Ares, Hermes, Hephaestus, and Poseidon, generally also Dionysus, and sometimes Hercules. The goddesses were, Aphrodite, Artemis, Athena, Demeter, and Hera, and sometimes Hestia. The Olympians were sharply distinguished from the Chthonian gods. Their color was white; their temples faced the east; sacrifices to them were shared by their worshipers in a sacrificial meal, or sacrament. The color preferred by the Chthonian gods was black or blood color, their temples faced westward, and their rites were often held at night and the sacrifices were burnt whole. The distinction, however, was modified by the fact that many Olympians possessed Chthonian forms or attributes under which they were worshiped.

om'i·nous (ŏm'ĭ·nŭs), adj. [L. ominosus, fr. omen. See OMEN.] Of or pertaining to an omen or omens; being or exhibiting an omen; significant; portentous; — now chiefly in an unfavorable sense: foreboding or foreshowing evil; inauspicious; as, an ominous dread. "Ominous smiling silence." Browning.

Syn. — OMINOUS, PORTENTOUS, SINISTER. That is OMINOUS which foreshadows or foretells the future or (esp.) which is ill-omened or menacing; as, "I should have thought it ominous of declining powers, it is in so sober a tone, its coloring so autumnal, its light everywhere that of an evening sun" (Southey); "undeterred by those ominous voices . . . which are apt to beset all great actions" (W. Pater). PORTENTOUS is sometimes applied to that which is ominous of calamity; as, "a lurid light above Helm-crag, . . . a burning of portentous red" (Wordsworth). But portentous often means little more than prodigious, monstrous, wonderful; as, "His gravity was unusual, portentous, and immeasurable" (Dickens). SINISTER (see etym.) heightens the implication of something (often covertly) baleful or malign; as, "The week-old honeymoon looked at them out of its clouds with . . . an aged, sinister, and disastrous aspect" (May Sinclair). Cf. MONSTROUS, FORETELL.

Ant. — Auspicious, favorable. See PROPITIOUS.

on (ŏn; 71), prep. [ME. on, an, o, a, fr. AS. on, an; akin to D. aan, OS. & G. an, OHG. ana, ON. á, Sw. å, Goth. ana, L. an-, in anhelare to pant, Gr. ana, Av. ana. Cf. A-, 1, ANA-, ANON.] The primary signification of on is position of contact with or against a supporting surface, or motion into or toward such position. The senses of simple location and of direction, expressed in Old English by the dative and accusative respectively, were in Middle English undistinguished; hence the phrase on to came into use to emphasize the distinction of the latter sense. On is specifically used in various applications: 1. Indicating position over and in contact with that which supports from beneath; as, the book lies on the table; built on an island; to swear (with hands) on the Bible; to ride on a train (where British usage has in); passage on an ocean liner (where nautical usage has in); also, specif., at, in, or along the surface of; over the projecting edge or point of; in or about the clothing of; as, not a mark on it; hung on a nail; a pistol was found on him.
d Indicating a basis or ground of action, award, opinion, reliance, etc.; as, stated on authority; to rely on one; taxation on imports; on certain conditions; to bet on the red; also, specif., by reason or by virtue of; as, to congratulate one on his victory.
3. Indicating position in respect to place, direction, or time; specif.: a At; — esp. with side, front, north, and other words denoting a particular side or direction; as, the town lies on the east; hence, in phrases such as on the offensive, on one's behalf, on the contrary. (See BOUNDARY, 1, for use in bounding land.) b Within; during; — formerly of any period of time, now esp. of a date or division of time; as, on Monday. c Coinciding with or following the time of, often as a result of; as, cash on delivery; on reaching home, he found a visitor; on his arrival we were disconcerted.
4. Indicating state or process, also condition of privilege or restriction; as, on fire, tap, sale; on the increase; on pension, sick leave, probation.
☞ On is often reduced to a-; as, on fire, afire. See 7th A, prep., b.
5. Indicating manner or arrangement; — now chiefly as followed by certain adjectives; on this wise; on the bias; on the sly, quiet, level, square, etc.
7. Indicating the subject; specif.: a In reference or relation to; with respect to; as, to agree on a price; a monopoly on wheat; a satire on society; at variance on prices. b Now Dial. Of. "Be not jealous on me." Shak. "Have we eaten on the insane root?" Shak.
8. Indicating instrumentality, specif., an object, instrument, or device as a means of recording, producing, or reproducing sounds, words, etc.; as, to cut one's finger on a knife; to play on an organ; to hear a song on the radio.
9. Indicating multiplication or succession in a series; specif., in addition to; besides; — used with the same noun immediately preceding and following; as, heaps on heaps; mischief on mischief; loss on loss.
10. Indicating cost or disadvantage; specif., Chiefly Colloq.: a To the disadvantage, detriment, discomfiture, of; as, the fire went out on him; long hours tell on one; (Slang) to have or get something on one, that is, something concerning one which, esp. when revealed, will prove disconcerting. b At the expense of; as, a drink on the house; a joke on me. c By way of advantage over; as, two inches on him in reach; (Slang) to have nothing on one (see under HAVE, v.).

o·ōg'a·mous (ō·ŏg'ȧ·mŭs), adj. [oö- + -gamous.] Biol. Having gametes exhibiting distinctions of sex; heterogamous. — o·ōg'a·my (-mĭ), n.

o'ō·gen'e·sis (ō'ō·jĕn'ē·sĭs), n. [NL., fr. oö- + -genesis.] Biol. Formation of the egg and its preparation for fertilization and development. — o'ō·ge·net'ic (-jē·nĕt'ĭk), adj.

o·ōg'e·ny (ō·ŏj'ē·nĭ), n. Biol. Oögenesis.

o'ō·gle'a, o'ō·gloe'a (ō'ō·glē'ȧ), n. [NL., tr. oö- + Gr. gloia glue.] Zool. Egg cement.

o'ō·go'ni·al (-gō'nĭ·ăl), adj. Of or pert. to the oögonium.

o'ō·go'ni·o·phore' (-gō'nĭ·ō·fōr'; 181), n. [See OOGONIUM; -PHORE.] Bot. A cell or stalk supporting an oögonium.

o'ō·go'ni·um (-ŭm), n.; pl. -NIA (-ȧ), -NIUMS (-ŭmz). [NL., fr. oö- + Gr. gonos offspring.] 1. Bot. The female sexual organ in oögamous thallophytic plants, corresponding to the archegonium in the ferns and mosses, but without differentiation into neck and venter. It contains one or more eggs, or oöspheres, which develop after fertilization into oöspores. Oögonia are found in the higher algae and in oömycetous fungi. Cf. ANTHERIDIUM, ARCHEGONIUM.

2. Embryol. One of the descendants of a primordial germ cell which give rise to the oöcytes.

o'ō·graph (ō'ō·grăf; 83), n. [oö- + -graph.] A device for drawing the outline of a bird's egg.

o'oid (ō'oid), o·oi'dal (ō·oi'dăl; -d'l), adj. [Gr. ōioeidēs, fr. ōion an egg + eidos form.] Egg-shaped.

o'ō·ki·ne'sis (ō'ō·kĭ·nē'sĭs; ō'ō·kī-), n. [NL., fr. oö- + Gr. kinēsis motion.] Biol. The mitotic phenomena of the maturation and fertilization of the egg.

o'ō·ki·nete' (ō'ō·kĭ·nēt'; -kī·nēt'), n. [See OÖ-; KINETIC.] Zool. In certain Protozoa, as the malaria parasite, a motile stage of the zygote. — o'ō·ki·net'ic (-nĕt'ĭk), adj.

oo·lak' (ōō·lăk'), n. [Hind. ulāk, fr. Turk ulāq gemīsī packet boat, fr. ulāq dispatch + gemī boat.] An East Indian river freight boat.

o'ō·lem'ma (ō'ō·lĕm'ȧ), n. [NL., fr. oö- + Gr. lemma husk, skin.] a Anat. = ZONA PELLUCIDA. b Zool. The vitelline membrane of an egg.

o'ō·lite (ō'ō·līt), n. [oö- + -lite; cf. F. oölithe.] Petrog. a A rock consisting of small round grains, resembling the roe of fish, cemented together. The grains are small concretions. They are usually carbonate of lime, producing a variety of limestone, but sometimes of silica or iron oxide. b [cap.] Geol. The upper part of the Jurassic system (overlying the Lias) in England and in some other parts of Europe; — named from the widespread oölitic texture of its limestones. — o'ō·lit'ic (-lĭt'ĭk), adj.

o'ō·lit'ic lime'stone' (-lĭt'ĭk). Calcareous oölite, a variety of limestone quarried chiefly for building purposes.

o'ō·log'i·cal (ō'ō·lŏj'ĭ·kăl), adj. Also o'ō·log'ic (-lĭk). Zool. Of or pertaining to oölogy. — o'ō·log'i·cal·ly, adv.

ool'ry (ōōl'rĭ), n.; pl. -LIES (-ĭz). A lump or loop of iron, as wootz, when taken as a pasty mass from the crucible. India.

o·ōl'o·gist (ō·ŏl'ō·jĭst), n. a One versed in oölogy. b A collector of birds' eggs.

o·ōl'o·gize (ō·ŏl'ō·jīz), v. t. a To study oölogy. b To hunt for birds' nests and eggs.

o·ōl'o·gy (ō·ŏl'ō·jĭ), n. [oö- + -logy.] The branch of ornithology which treats of birds' eggs, esp. of the collection of birds' eggs, and the study of their shape, coloration, etc.

op'er·a (ŏp'ĕr·ȧ; 59), n.; pl. OPERAS (-ȧz). [It., fr. opera work, composition, opposed to an improvisation, fr. L. opera pains, work, fr. opus, operis, work, labor. See OPERATE; cf. 1st AVERAGE.] 1. A drama of which music forms an essential part; a drama wholly or mostly sung, consisting typically of recitative, arias, choruses, duets, trios, etc., with orchestral accompaniment, preludes, and interludes, together with appropriate costumes, scenery, and action; drama set to music. Modern opera began with Peri's Daphne (1597), written for a circle of Florentine amateurs, enthusiasts of the Renaissance, who thought to revive the musical declamation of the Greek drama. To this end they set aside the contrapuntal style of their time for a simple recitative with orchestral support. The movement was furthered by Monteverde (d. 1643), but the quick popularity of opera was followed by a decline in which either the spectacle or the singing was carried to inartistic excesses. Italian work was dominant, esp. in Germany, throughout the 17th century, though French opera was then founded by Lully (d. 1687), and English by Purcell (d. 1695). In the 18th century, an age of great singers found a vehicle in the masterly operas of Handel (d. 1759). A return to the Florentine ideals of dramatic and musical sincerity signalized the work of Gluck (d. 1787), and a blending of dramatic expressiveness with great melodic beauty, that of Mozart (d. 1791). Since then some of the greater names are: (1) in Italian opera — Rossini, Donizetti, Bellini, and Verdi; (2) in French — Cherubini, Spontini, Auber, Meyerbeer, Gounod, Bizet, and Debussy; (3) in German — Beethoven, Spohr, Weber, Wagner, and Richard Strauss; (4) in Russian — Moussorgsky, Borodin, Tchaikovsky, and Rimski-Korsakov. See MUSIC DRAMA.

oph·thal'mo·scope (ŏf·thăl'mō·skōp), n. [ophthalmo- + -scope.] Physiol. & Med. An instrument for viewing the interior of the eye, esp. the retina. It consists usually of a concave mirror having a hole in the center through which the observer examines the eye. Light is thrown into the eye by the mirror, is reflected there, and returns through the opening in the mirror to the eye of the observer. The ophthalmoscope is fitted with lenses of varying strength which may be rotated into the opening in the mirror to neutralize the refracting power of the eye examined and thus make the image of the fundus clear. — oph·thal'mo·scop'ic (-skŏp'ĭk), -scop'i·cal (-ĭ·kăl), adj. — oph'thal·mos'co·pist (ŏf'thăl·mŏs'kō·pĭst; ŏf·thăl'mŏ·skō'pĭst), n.

Ophthalmoscope. 1 Handle containing dry-cell battery; 2 Rheostat; 3 Focusing Ferrule; 4 Gear Wheel for rotating battery of lenses in front of Sight Hole (5) in back of mirror.

oph·thal'mos'co·py (ŏf'thăl·mŏs'kō·pĭ), n. 1. A branch of physiognomy based on the appearance of the eyes. Rare.

2. Examination of the eye with the ophthalmoscope.

oph·thal·mos'ta·sis (ŏf'thăl·mŏs'tȧ·sĭs), n. [NL., fr. ophthalmo- + -stasis.] Surg. Fixation of the eye by means of the ophthalmostat.

oph·thal'mo·stat (ŏf·thăl'mō·stăt), n. [ophthalmo- + Gr. histanai to make to stand.] Surg. An instrument used to fix the eye in one position during an operation.

oph·thal'mo·stat·om'e·ter (-ŏm'ē·tĕr), n. [See OPHTHALMOSTAT; -METER.] Med. An apparatus for measuring how far the eyeball protrudes.

oph·thal'mo·to·nom'e·ter (-tō·nŏm'ē·tĕr), n. [ophthalmo- + tonometer.] Med. An instrument used in determining the intraocular tension. — oph·thal'mo·to·nom'e·try (-trĭ), n.

oph·thal'mo·trope (ŏf·thăl'mō·trōp), n. [ophthalmo- + -trope.] A model of the eyes for illustrating the operation of the muscles governing their movements.

oph·thal'mo·tro·pom'e·ter (-trō·pŏm'ē·tĕr), n. [ophthalmo- + -trope + -meter.] Med. An instrument for measuring ocular movements.

-oph·thal'mus (-ŏf·thăl'mŭs). [NL.] A combining form from Greek ophthalmos, eye, used: a Zool. For generic names, esp. of crustacea and insects. b Med. For a (specified) form or condition of the eye, as in megalophthalmus.

-o'pi·a (-ō'pĭ·ȧ), -opy. [See OPTIC.] A combining form, Greek -ōpia, from ōps, ōpos, eye, denoting a (specified) kind or defect of eye, as in amblyopia, amblyopy, myopia, presbyopia, etc. Cf. -OPSIA.

o'pi·an'ic (ō'pĭ·ăn'ĭk), adj. [From OPIANE.] Chem. Pertaining to or designating a bitter, crystalline, aldehyde acid, $C_8H_3(OCH_3)_3(CHO)(CO_2H)$, obtained by the oxidation of narcotine, and otherwise.

o'pi·a·nyl (ō'pĭ·ȧ·nĭl), n. [opianic + -yl.] Chem. a Meconin. Obs. b The univalent radical, $C_{10}H_9O_6$, of opianic acid. Cf. BENZOYL.

o·pin'ion (ō·pĭn'yŭn; 190), n. [OF., fr. L. opinio. See OPINE.] 1. That which is opined; belief stronger than impression, less strong than positive knowledge; settled judgment in regard to any point; a notion or conviction founded on probable evidence; a belief; a view; a judgment; as, based only on opinion; imprisoned for one's opinions.

All their opinions are downright beliefs. T. Hughes.

2. The judgment or sentiment which the mind forms of persons or things; estimation; sometimes, favorable estimation; esteem; as, to have no opinion of a person.

I have bought golden opinions from all sorts of people. Shak.

3. A formal expression by an expert, professional authority, or the like, of his thought upon or judgment or advice concerning a matter; as, a medical expert's opinion.

4. Obs. a Favorable judgment or estimate of oneself; in a good sense, self-confidence; in a bad sense, self-conceit. b Estimation in which one is held by others; esp., favorable or good estimation; reputation; repute; credit. c Expectation; anticipation. d Report; rumor; — a Latinism.

5. Law. The formal expression by a judge, court, referee, or the like, of the legal reasons and principles upon which the decision is based; — often used to include also the judgment or decision.

Syn. — Idea, impression, notion, judgment. — OPINION, SENTIMENT, FEELING. An OPINION, in ordinary usage, is what one thinks or believes about something; the word does not imply the definiteness or weight of a judgment or the assurance or certainty of a conviction; as, "'Say freely what you think.' — 'Then this is mine opinion'" (Shak.); "Opinion in good men is but knowledge in the making" (Milton); in my opinion; a matter of opinion. SENTIMENT, as here compared (cf. SENTIMENT), suggests a more or less settled opinion, often, but not necessarily, with reference to something which involves one's feelings; as, "His 'Solomon' had many noble sentiments elegantly expressed" (Johnson); public sentiment. FEELING, as here compared (cf. FEELING), suggests an attitude of mind which rests on what one feels rather than on what one thinks; as, you know my feeling (cf. opinion, sentiment) about coeducation. Cf. IDEA, BELIEF.

— to be of the opinion. To hold the opinion; think.

o·pin'ion (ō·pĭn'yŭn), v. t. & i. To opine. Obs. exc. Dial.

2. Opinionated; as, an opinionate person.

o·pin'ion·ate (-āt), v. t. & i. Obs. a = OPINE, v. b To make (oneself) opinionated or obstinate. c To force or bring (oneself) by thinking.

o·pin'ion·at'ed (-āt'ĕd; -ĭd; 119), adj. 1. Having or holding a (specified or certain) opinion; opinioned; specif., thinking highly; proud; conceited; — often used with of. Obs.

2. Stiff in opinion; firmly or unduly adhering to one's own opinion or to preconceived notions; obstinate.

Syn. — OPINIONATED, OPINIONATIVE. OPINIONATIVE (the less common term) is now practically synonymous with OPINIONATED (see DICTATORIAL), but sometimes carries a less disagreeable connotation; as, "[A] painter . . . bold and opinionated enough to dare and to dictate" (Walpole).

Ant. — Open-minded, tolerant, unprejudiced; pliant, complaisant, vacillating.

— o·pin'ion·at'ed·ly, adv. — o·pin'ion·at'ed·ness, n.

o·pin'ion·a·tive (ō·pĭn'yŭn·ā'tĭv), adj. 1. Obs. a Based on opinion; conjectural; imaginary. b Proud or conceited; — with of.

2. Of, pert. to, or consisting in, opinion or belief; doctrinal. "Things both opinionative and practical." Bunyan.

o'pi·um (ō'pĭ·ŭm; 159), n. [L., fr. Gr. opion poppy juice, dim. of opos vegetable juice; prob. akin to Lett. svakas resin, OSlav. sokŭ juice of plants or fruits.] 1. A drug consisting of the dried milky juice of the opium poppy obtained from incisions made in the unripe capsules of the plant. It has a brownish-yellow color, a faint smell, and a bitter and acrid taste. It is a stimulant narcotic poison, which usually produces a feeling of well-being, hallucinations, and drowsiness, and may, if the dose be sufficiently large, produce complete coma or death. It is much used in medicine to soothe pain and is smoked as an intoxicant with baneful effects. The continued use of opium in any form causes a habit which is difficult to break and eventually results in physical, mental, and moral deterioration. The chief commercial varieties are Turkey, Smyrna, or Constantinople opium; Persian opium; Chinese opium; and Indian opium. Turkey opium, used almost exclusively for medicinal purposes, is produced in Turkey, Asia Minor, Bulgaria, and Macedonia. Indian and Chinese opium are inferior grades used for the preparation of smoking opium or for the extraction of the opium alkaloids, the most important of which are morphine, codeine, narcotine, and papaverine.
2. Something affecting like opium; a stupefier.
opium drinker, opium-drinking, adj., opium-drowsed, adj., opium eater, opium-eating, adj., opium poisoning, opium-shattered, adj., opium smoker, opium-smoking, adj., opium taker, opium-taking, adj.

2. The state resulting from habitual overuse of opium.

opium poppy. A tall Eurasian perennial herb (Papaver somniferum) with glaucous foliage and flowers ranging from white to purple. It has produced many garden hybrids, and has also been cultivated from antiquity as the source of opium. See POISONOUS PLANTS, Plate.

Opium War. A war (1839–42) between Great Britain and China, due to the dissatisfaction of the former with the treatment of British subjects in China. The immediate cause was the attempt of China to stop the importation of opium. See Nanking, under TREATY, Table.

op'o- (ŏp'ō-). Pharm. A combining form, Greek opo-, from opos, meaning juice, as in *opo*therapy.

op'o·bal'sam (ŏp'ō·bŏl'săm), op'o·bal'sa·mum (-băl'sȧ·mŭm), n. [L. opobalsamum, fr. Gr. opobalsamon, fr. opos vegetable juice + balsamon balsam.] The balm of Gilead tree Commiphora meccanensis; also, its balsam.

op'o·del'doc (ŏp'ō·dĕl'dŏk), n. [The first syllable may be fr. Gr. opos vegetable juice.] 1. A kind of plaster, variously compounded, used for external injuries; — a name used and thought to be invented by Paracelsus. Obs.
2. Any of various soap liniments; esp. in American use, the unofficial camphorated soap liniment, of a soft semisolid consistence.

op'o·did'y·mus (ŏp'ō·dĭd'ĭ·mŭs), n. [NL., fr. Gr. ōps, ōpos, face + -didymus.] Teratol. A monster with a single body and two heads, fused behind, but presenting two separate faces.

o·pop'a·nax (ō·pŏp'ȧ·năks), n. [L., fr. Gr. opopanax, fr. opos vegetable juice + panax, panakes, a kind of plant, fr. panakēs all-healing. See OPIUM; PANACEA.] 1. Pharm. a Orig., an odorous gum resin obtained from an herb, presumably Opopanax chironium of southern Europe, but also attributed to Commiphora kataf. b Now, usually, an odorous gum resin from the tree C. erythraea (syn. glabrescens). It is used in the manufacture of perfumes and was formerly used in medicine as an antispasmodic. Cf. MYRRH.
2. Bot. a [cap.] A small genus of South European herbs, family Ammiaceae, having compound umbels of yellow flowers, and fruit with numerous oil tubes. b The species O. chironium, often called Hercules' allheal, yielding the gum resin opopanax (see def. 1 a).
3. The huisache.

o·pos'sum (ō·pŏs'ŭm), n.; pl. -SUMS (-ŭmz), sometimes -SUM. See PLURAL, Note. [Of Algonquian origin; cf. Virginian ȧpȧsŭm a white animal, Ojibway wȧbassim.]
1. a Any of various American marsupials of the family Didelphidae; esp., Didelphis virginiana, of the southern United States, ranging as far north as New York in the east and Illinois in the west. It is about two and a half feet long, including the scaly prehensile tail. The fur is chiefly dusky grayish mixed with coarse whitish hairs. An abdominal pouch is present and the young are transferred to it immediately after birth. It is chiefly nocturnal, largely arboreal, and almost omnivorous. When caught it feigns death, whence the expression "playing possum." (See play possum under POSSUM.) Other genera and species range from Mexico to Paraguay. The mouse opossums (Marmosa) are scarcely larger than rats. The woolly opossums (Philander) have no well-developed pouch, and the young are carried on the mother's back. The yapok, or water opossum (Chironectes minimus), of South America, is aquatic. b The fur or pelt of any of these animals.

Opossum (Didelphis virginiana.) (1/17)

2. Any of several phalangers which somewhat resemble the true opossums. Australia.

opossum mouse. The flying mouse.

opossum shrimp. A schizopod crustacean of the family Mysidae, so called because the females carry their eggs in a pouch between their legs. See SCHIZOPODA, Illust.

opossum tree. a The Australian timber tree Quintinia sieberi (family Escalloniaceae). b The liquidambar, or copalm. U. S.

opossum wood. The wood of the silver bell (Halesia carolina). Ala. See SILVER BELL.

2. Action of maintaining an opposing argument in, or opening, an academical disputation, esp. in trying for a degree, by proposing objections to a tenet. Obs. exc. Hist.

‖op·po'nens (ō·pō'nĕnz), n. [L., pres. part.] Anat. One of several muscles of the hand or foot, as the ‖op·po'nens pol'li·cis (pŏl'ĭ·sĭs) or ‖op·po'nens mi'ni·mi di'gi·ti (mĭn'ĭ·mĭ dĭj'ĭ·tī), which tend to draw one of the lateral digits across the palm or sole toward the others.

op·po'nent (ō·pō'nĕnt), adj. [L. opponens, -entis, pres. part. of opponere to set or place against, to oppose, fr. ob (see OB-) + ponere to place. See POSITION.] 1. Situated in front; opposite; also, opposing; adverse; antagonistic.
2. Anat. Bringing into opposition, as an opponens muscle.

op·po'nent, n. 1. One who opposes a tenet or thesis in a disputation, argument, or other verbal controversy; specif., one who opens an academical disputation by attacking some thesis or proposition, in distinction from the respondent, or defendant, who maintains it. Obs. exc. Hist.
2. One who opposes; an adversary; antagonist; foe.
Syn. — OPPONENT, ADVERSARY, ANTAGONIST agree in the idea of opposition, without of necessity implying personal animosity or hostility (cf. ENEMY). An OPPONENT is one who is on the opposite side in a contest (esp. an argument or disputation); ANTAGONIST implies sharper opposition, esp. in a struggle or combat for supremacy or control; as, "conscientiously an opponent of the first revolutionary war" (Coleridge); "Antagonist of Heaven's Almighty King" (Milton). ADVERSARY ranges in connotation from the idea of mere opposition to that of active hostility; as, "To vindicate the permanency of truth is to dispute without an adversary" (Beattie). Cf. OPPOSITE, HOSTILITY.
Ant. — Ally, friend, aid, colleague, associate.

opponent colors theory. The Hering theory. See COLOR, n., 2.

op'por·tune' (ŏp'ŏr·tūn'; ŏp'ŏr·tūn; 66), adj. [F. opportun, fr. L. opportunus, fr. ob (see OB-) + portus port, harbor, prop., entrance, access. See OB-; PORT harbor. Cf. IMPORTUNE.] 1. Fit; suitable; convenient; ready; hence, seasonable; timely. "Most opportune to our need." Shak.
2. Obs. a Advantageous; helpful; useful. b Exposed; open or liable (to).
Syn. — Well-timed. — OPPORTUNE, TIMELY are often interchangeable. But OPPORTUNE frequently suggests that which fits directly into a given concurrence of circumstances, or which comes in the nick of time; TIMELY applies more generally to that which is well-timed or seasonable; as, "The murkiest den, the most opportune place, the strongest suggestion . . . shall never melt mine honor into lust" (Shak.); an opportune resignation opened the way to his own advancement; "To me alone there came a thought of grief; a timely utterance gave that thought relief" (Wordsworth). Cf. OPPORTUNITY.
Ant. — Unseasonable, ill-timed, untimely, inopportune.

op'por·tun'ism (-tūn'ĭz'm), n. [After F. opportunisme.] Art, policy, or practice of taking advantage, as in politics, of opportunities or circumstances, or, often, of seeking immediate advantage with little regard for principles or ultimate consequences. — op'por·tun'ist (-ĭst), n. & adj. — op'por·tun·is'tic (ŏp'ŏr·tūn·ĭs'tĭk), adj. — op'por·tun·is'ti·cal·ly (-tĭ·kăl·ĭ), adv.

op'por·tu'ni·ty (-tū'nĭ·tĭ), n.; pl. -TIES (-tĭz). [OF. opportunité, fr. L. opportunitas. See OPPORTUNE.] 1. Quality or state of being opportune; opportuneness. Now Rare.
2. Fit or convenient time; a time or place favorable for executing a purpose; a suitable combination of conditions; suitable occasion; chance; as, opportunity makes the thief.
3. Obs. a Fitness. b Convenience or advantage of situation. c Importunity; — an erroneous use.
Syn. — Chance. — OPPORTUNITY, OCCASION agree in the idea of a condition or juncture of circumstances favorable to some end. OCCASION, as here compared (see OCCASION), often implies little more than a possibility or chance of giving rise to some result; an OPPORTUNITY is a specific, fit, and (esp.) opportune occasion; as, "Ye shall not have occasion any more to use this proverb in Israel" (Ezek. xviii. 3); "You have many opportunities to cut him off" (Shak.). Cf. OPPORTUNE.

2. To act adversely or in opposition; also, formerly: a To be repugnant. b To forbid.
Syn. — Face; fight, oppugn; gainsay, contravene, contradict. — OPPOSE, RESIST agree in the idea of setting oneself against something, and are often interchangeable. But RESIST frequently implies more active striving than OPPOSE, esp. against something which is itself exerting adverse energy or force; as, to oppose a measure, an idea; to resist attack, arrest; "multitudes . . . banded to oppose his high decree" (Milton); "Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin" (Heb. xii. 4). Cf. OPPONENT.
Ant. — Support, defend, back, aid, assist, favor, further, help; evade, avoid.
op·posed' (ŏ-pōzd'), adj. 1. Set or placed in opposition; opposite; contrary; adverse.
2. Mach. Opposite to each other; placed on opposite sides of a common crankshaft; — said of two engine cylinders. Hence, of an engine, having cylinders so placed.
op·pose'less (ŏ-pōz'lĕs; -lĭs; 119), adj. Irresistible. Rare.
op·pos'er (ŏ-pōz'ĕr), n. 1. One who opposes.
2. Law. In patent and trade-mark practice, one who formally contests the granting of a patent or registration of a trade-mark. U. S.
op·pos'ing (-ĭng), adj. Opposite in position; active in or offering opposition. — op·pos'ing·ly, adv.
op·pos'it (ŏ-pŏz'ĭt), v. t. & i. [See OPPOSITE, adj.] To set up the contrary; to object. Rare.
op'po·site (ŏp'ō-zĭt), adj. [OF., fr. L. oppositus, past part. of opponere. See OPPONENT.] 1. Set over against (that which is at the other end or side of an intervening line or space); facing; — often with to. Thus in a quadrilateral opposite sides are distinguished from adjacent sides, between which the intervening space at one point becomes zero; and opposite angles at the ends of a diagonal, from adjacent angles. With respect to a given line two points are opposite when their connecting line would cross it at right angles; in a circle, two points in the circumference are opposite only when at the ends of a diameter.

Opposite Leaves.

2. Contrarily turned or moving; as, two points move in opposite directions when moving apart along the same straight line, or when moving in the same directions as two such points, but along parallel lines.
3. Opposed or hostile; as, he belonged to the opposite faction; the opposite sides of the question.
4. Diametrically different; contrary; repugnant; antagonistic.

Particles of speech have divers, and sometimes almost opposite, significations. Locke.

5. Bot. a Situated in pairs on an axis, each being separated from the other by half the circumference of the axis, as leaves. See PHYLLOTAXY. b With reference to floral parts, = SUPERPOSED.
Syn. — OPPOSITE, CONTRARY, CONTRADICTORY. OPPOSITE implies diametrical difference in position or nature, but does not necessarily suggest antagonism; CONTRARY commonly implies mutual opposition or divergence, and often connotes antagonism; but the two words are not always clearly distinguished; as, opposite points on a circle, opposite directions, the one character is the opposite of the other, on opposite sides of a dispute; contrary directions, contrary winds, contrary propositions, cf. "on the contrary." CONTRADICTORY is a stronger term than opposite or contrary, implying variance or contrariety that admits no medium; as, contradictory terms, statements, attributes. Cf. ADVERSE, INCONSISTENT, CONVERSE.
Ant. — Like, alike, similar, same.
op'po·site, n. 1. One who opposes; an opponent; an antagonist. Archaic.

The opposites of this day's strife. Shak.

2. That which is opposed, or contrary; as, sweetness and its opposite; vice is the opposite of virtue.
3. An antonym; as, an opposites test.
4. Astron. The opposite point of the heavens; opposition; opposite aspect. Obs.
5. Logic. a A proposition that is characterized by opposition (sense 10). b pl. = CONTRARY TERMS.
op'po·site, adv. On opposite sides; in an opposed position.
op'po·site, prep. Across an intervening space from and usually facing or on the same level with; as, to make a check opposite a name; to live opposite the post office.
op·pos'i·ti- (ŏ-pŏz'ĭ·tĭ-). A combining form from Latin oppositus, meaning oppositely, having the (specified) parts opposite, situated opposite, as in op·pos'i·ti·po'lar, having the poles on opposite sides; — used chiefly in Bot., as in op·pos'i·ti·flo'rous, op·pos'i·ti·fo'li·ous, op·pos'i·ti·pet'al·ous, op·pos'i·ti·pin'nate, op·pos'i·ti·sep'al·ous. See -FLOROUS, -FOLIOUS, etc.
op'po·si'tion (ŏp'ō-zĭsh'ŭn), n. [OF., fr. L. oppositio. See OPPOSITE.] 1. Act of setting opposite, or over against, or the state or position of being so set.
2. Hostile or contrary action or condition; resistance.
3. That which opposes; an obstacle; specif., the aggregate of those opposing; hence [often cap.], in politics and parliamentary practice: a In general, the party opposed to the party in power. b Specif., Eng. Gov't., a political party (His Majesty's Opposition) opposed to the government and prepared to form a government on the resignation of the ministry in power.
4. Obs. a The putting of questions; inquisition; also, the putting forward of objections to be answered by one defending a thesis. b An opposite, contrary, or contrast.
5. [The earliest sense in English.] Astron. & Astrol. The situation of a celestial body with respect to another when differing from it in longitude by 180°, that is, when directly opposite to it; esp., such position of a planet or satellite with respect to the sun; — signified by the symbol ☍; as, ☍♃ ☉, opposition of Jupiter to the sun. Cf CONJUNCTION, 5. See ASPECT, n., 7.
6. Checkers. = The move, under MOVE, n.
7. Chess. A position of the king preventing the advance of the adverse king, either directly or obliquely.
8. Fencing. A position of one's blade, when crossed with that of one's opponent, such that the latter cannot hit in the line of engagement; as, to take opposition in carte.
9. Law. a In bankruptcy practice, refusal of a creditor to assent to the debtor's discharge. b In patent and trade-mark practice, a formal contesting of the claim to a patent or for a registration of a trade-mark.
10. Logic. The relation between two propositions when, having the same subject and predicate, they differ in quantity, in quality, or both. Logicians recognize four kinds of opposition: (1) Contrariety, obtaining between a universal affirmative and a universal negative proposition, where the difference is one of quality only. (2) Subcontrariety, obtaining between a particular affirmative and a particular negative, where the difference is of quality only. (3) Subalternation, obtaining between a universal and a particular affirmative, or between a universal and a particular negative, where the difference is one of quantity only. (4) Contradiction, obtaining between a universal affirmative and a particular negative, or between a universal negative and a particular affirmative, where the difference is of both quality and quantity. These relations are represented in the square of opposition as shown (the letters A, E, I, and O standing for universal affirmative, universal negative, particular affirmative, and particular negative propositions, respectively). An immediate inference by opposition is an inference from the truth or falsity of a proposition to the truth or falsity of its opposite. Thus, if A be true, E is false, I is true, O is false; if A be false, either E or I may be true, though not both, while O is true. Similar inferences may be drawn from the truth or falsity of E, I, and O. These relations hold only on the assumption, characteristic of traditional logic, that the terms of the propositions in question denote existent things. In cases in which this assumption is false, the relation of contradictories holds as above, but all the other relations of the square of opposition fail to hold.

Square of Opposition.

op'po·si'tion·al (ŏp'ō-zĭsh'ŭn·ăl; -ĭ), adj. Pertaining to or constituting opposition.
op'po·si'tion·ar'y (-ĕr'ĭ or, esp. Brit., -ēr·ĭ), adj. Oppositional. op'po·si'tion·ist (-ĭst), n. See -IST. — adj. Oppositional. op'po·si'tious (ŏp'ō-zĭsh'ŭs), adj. Opposing; inclined to oppose.
op·pos'i·tive (ŏ-pŏz'ĭ·tĭv), adj. [See OPPOSITE.] Capable of being put in apposition; opposing. — op·pos'i·tive·ly, adv. — op·pos'i·tive·ness, n.
op·po'sure (ŏ-pō'zhĕr), n. [oppose + -ure.] Opposition.
op·press' (ŏ-prĕs'), v. t.; OP·PRESSED' (-prĕst'); OP·PRESS'·ING. [OF. oppresser, fr. ML. oppressare, fr. L. opprimere, oppressum, fr. ob (see OB-) + premere to press. See PRESS.] 1. a Obs. To hurt by physical pressure; to crush; smother; trample. b Chiefly Poetic. To overpower as by weight; overwhelm.
2. To burden spiritually as if with weight; to weigh heavily upon; to weigh down; as, oppressed by a sense of failure.

With love and wine at once oppressed. Dryden.

3. To crush, burden, or trample down by abuse of power or authority; to treat with unjust rigor or with cruelty.
4. Obs. a To put down; extinguish; suppress. b To harass; distress. c In senses of Latin opprimere: (1) To ravish; rape. (2) To take by surprise. (3) To shut up; stop (the ears, eyes, etc.). d To force; urge. e To conceal.
Ant. — Lighten, uplift; cheer, encourage.
op·pressed' (ŏ-prĕst'), adj. Her. Debruised. op·pres'sion (ŏ-prĕsh'ŭn), n. [OF., fr. L. oppressio.] 1. Unjust or cruel exercise of authority or power, esp. by the imposition of burdens; that which so oppresses. "The multitude of oppressions." Job xxxv. 9.
2. Obs. a Act of weighing down (a person, the mind, etc.); also, state of being weighed down, as by misfortune. b Rape. c Repression. d Astron. Obscuration.
3. Act of pressing down; pressure; burden.

Stoop with oppression of their prodigal weight. Shak.

4. A sense of heaviness or obstruction in the body or mind; depression; dullness; lassitude; as, an oppression of spirits; an oppression of the lungs.
op·pres'sive (ŏ-prĕs'ĭv), adj. [ML. oppressivus.] 1. Unreasonably burdensome; unjustly severe, rigorous, or harsh; as, oppressive taxes; oppressive exactions.
2. Using oppression; tyrannical; as, oppressive rulers.
3. Overpowering or depressing to the spirit or senses; hard to be borne; as, oppressive grief or heat.

To ease the soul of one oppressive weight. Pope.

op·pres'sor (ŏ-prĕs'ĕr), n. [F. oppresseur, fr. L. oppressor.] One who oppresses, esp. with unjust rigor, exactions, etc.

op·pro'bri·ate (ŏ-prō'brĭ·āt), v. t. [ML. opprobriare.] To regard or speak of as opprobrious. Rare.
op·pro'bri·ous (ŏ-prō'brĭ·ŭs), adj. [ME., fr. OF. or L.; OF. opprobrieux, fr. L. opprobriosus, fr. opprobrium. See OPPROBRIUM.] 1. Expressive of opprobrium; attaching disgrace; reproachful; scurrilous; as, opprobrious language.
2. Infamous; despised; rendered hateful; involving or bringing opprobrium; as, an opprobrious name, conduct.
Syn. — Disgraceful; abusive, insulting, offensive. — OPPROBRIOUS, CONTUMELIOUS, SCURRILOUS. OPPROBRIOUS implies abusive reproach; CONTUMELIOUS adds to opprobrious the implication of insolent contempt; SCURRILOUS, that of grossness and vulgarity; as, "This party . . . has generally mentioned [the allies] under opprobrious appellations, and in such terms of contempt or execration as never had been heard" (Burke); "Curving a contumelious lip, [he] gorgonized me from head to foot with a stony British stare" (Tennyson); "They never fail to attack the passengers with all kinds of scurrilous, abusive, and indecent terms" (Fielding). Cf. ASPERSE, ABUSE, CENSURE.
Ant. — Commendatory, laudatory, eulogistic, flattering.
— op·pro'bri·ous·ly, adv. — op·pro'bri·ous·ness, n.
op·pro'bri·um (ŏ-prō'brĭ·ŭm), n. [L., fr. opprobrare to taunt, reproach, fr. ob (see OB-) + probrum reproach, infamy, fr. prober disgraceful; akin to L. proferre to bring forth (against one), Gr. propherein. See PRO-; 1st BEAR. Cf. EXPROBRATE.] 1. The disgrace that follows from, or is attached to, conduct considered evil or wrong; infamy; reproach mingled with contempt; opprobrious language.

Being both dramatic author and dramatic performer, he found himself heir to a twofold opprobrium. De Quincey.

2. Anything which causes disgrace or reprobation. op·pro'bry (ŏ-prō'brĭ), n. Obs. a Opprobrium. b Opprobrious language or treatment. op·pugn' (ŏ-pūn'), v.; OP·PUGNED' (-pūnd'); OP·PUGN'ING [L. oppugnare, fr. ob (see OB-) + pugnare to fight. See IMPUGN.] Transitive: 1. Obs. a To fight against; also, to withstand. b To win over. c To maintain to the contrary.
2. To assail or call in question; controvert; also, to be in conflict with or counter to.

They said the manner of their impeachment . . . did oppugn the rights of Parliament. Clarendon.

—, Intransitive: To contend or stand in opposition.
op·pug'na·cy (ŏ-pŭg'nȧ·sĭ), n. Hostility; antagonism. Rare.
op·pug'nate (-nāt), v. t. [L. oppugnatus, past part.] To oppugn. op'pug·na'tion (ŏp'ŭg·nā'shŭn), n. [L. oppugnatio.] Attack; opposition. Now Rare.
op·pugn'er (ŏ-pūn'ĕr), n. One who oppugns.
O. P. Riots. [That is, Old Prices Riots.] Popular disturbances caused by an advance in the rates of admission at the New Covent Garden Theater in London, in 1809.
Ops (ŏps), n. [L. See OPULENT.] Rom. Relig. An ancient Italian goddess of the harvest, in early times associated with Consus. Later she was identified with the Greek Rhea, consort of Cronus, and was therefore made the consort of Saturn. Her festival was the O·pa'li·a (ŏ-pā'lĭ·ȧ), Dec. 19. She was also called Ops Con·si'va (kŏn·sī'vȧ) and under this name celebrated in the Op'i·con·siv'i·a (ŏp'ĭ·kŏn·sĭv'ĭ·ȧ), Aug. 25.
-ops (-ŏps). Bot. & Zool. A combining form, Greek -ōps, from ōps, ōpos, eye, meaning -eyed, used in generic names, esp. of insects, fish, and birds, as in Cerato*ps*, Chrys*ops*, Echino*ps*.
-op'si·a (-ŏp'sĭ·ȧ), -op'sy (-sĭ). [See OPTIC.] A combining form, Greek -opsia, from opsis, denoting a (specified) kind or condition of vision, as in ano*psia*, etc. Cf. -OPIA. op·sig'a·my (ŏp·sĭg'ȧ·mĭ), n. [Gr. opsigamia.] Marriage at an advanced age. Rare.
op'si·math (ŏp'sĭ·mȧth), n. [Gr. opsimathēs late in learning.] One who begins to learn late in life. Rare.
op·sim'a·thy (ŏp·sĭm'ȧ·thĭ), n. [Gr. opsimathia.] Education late in life. Rare.
-op'sis (-ŏp'sĭs). A combining form, Greek -opsis, from opsis, meaning appearance, sight, used: a In Bot. & Zool. in generic names, as in Ambly*opsis*. b In Med. = -OPSIA. op'sis·form' (ŏp'sĭs·fôrm'), n. Also op'sis·type' (-tīp'). [Gr. opsis appearance.] Bot. A rust which lacks the uredinial stage.
op·son'ic (ŏp·sŏn'ĭk), adj. Bacteriol. Of, pertaining to, or affected by, opsonin; pertaining to opsonotherapy. opsonic index. The ratio of the phagocytic index of a tested serum to that of normal serum, the latter being taken as the unit.
op'so·nif'er·ous (ŏp'sō·nĭf'ĕr·ŭs), adj. Bearing or producing opsonin.
op·son'i·fi·ca'tion (ŏp·sŏn'ĭ·fĭ·kā'shŭn), n. Immunol. The action or the effect of opsonins in rendering bacteria more readily phagocytized.
op·son'i·fy (-sŏn'ĭ·fī), v. t.; -FIED (-fīd); -FY'ING. [opsonin + -fy.] Immunol. To subject to opsonification. op'so·nin (ŏp'sō·nĭn), n. [Gr. opsōnein to buy victuals, to cater.] Bacteriol. A constituent of blood serum which renders cells, as invading pathogenic bacteria, more susceptible to the action of the phagocytes.
op'so·nist (-nĭst), n. One who practices opsonotherapy. op·so'ni·um (ŏp·sō'nĭ·ŭm), n.; pl. -NIA (-ȧ). [L., fr. Gr. opsōnion.] Food used as a relish. Rare.
op'so·nize (ŏp'sō·nīz), v. t. Immunol. a To form opsonins in. b To opsonify. — op'so·ni·za'tion (-nĭ·zā'shŭn; -nī·zā'-), n.
op'so·no-. A combining form for opsonin, as in op'so·nol'·o·gy, the special science of opsonins. For words below see the word with which opsono- is combined.

opsonogen	opsonophilia	opsonophoric
opsonometry	opsonophilic	opsonotherapy

op'so·noid (ŏp'sō·noid), adj. Resembling an opsonin. opt (ŏpt), v. i.; OPT'ED; OPT'ING. [F. opter, fr. L. optare.] 1. To make a choice; choose; as, to opt in his favor.
2. Specif., to make a choice of citizenship; esp., of inhabitants of a territory transferred by treaty, to choose either to retain the former citizenship or to acquire that of the new sovereign state.
op'ta·ble (ŏp'tȧ·b'l), adj. [L. optabilis.] That may be chosen; desirable. — op'ta·ble·ness, n. — op'ta·bly, adv. All Rare.
op'tant (ŏp'tȧnt), n. One who opts. — op'tant, adj.
op'tate (ŏp'tāt), v. i. [L. optatus, past part. of optare.] To opt. Rare. — op·ta'tion (ŏp·tā'shŭn), n.
op'ta·tive (ŏp'tȧ·tĭv; Brit. also ŏp·tā'tĭv, esp. in sense 2), adj. [F. optatif, fr. LL. optativus, fr. optare to wish. See OPTION.] 1. Expressing desire or wish.
2. Gram. a Designating, or pertaining to, that mood of verbs in Greek and other languages which is expressive of wish or desire, and certain related distinctions. The optative mood is an original part of the Indo-European verb, having for its sign an i- element inserted between the tense sign and the personal endings. b Designating that form of sentence which is expressive of wish or hope and marked as optative by the subjunctive mood and by word order. (Heaven help him!).

opposite tide. See TIDE, n., 5. op'po·si'tion·ism, n. See -ISM. op'po·si'tion·less, adj. See -LESS. op·pos'i·tor, n. An opponent. [Obs.] op·pross', n. [OF. oppresse.] Oppression. Obs. op·press'er, n. Oppressor. Obs. op·press'i·ble, adj. See -ABLE. Obs.
op·pres'sion·ist, n. See -IST. op·pres'siv. Oppressive. R. Sp.
op·prest'. Oppressed. Ref. Sp.
op'si·om'e·ter (ŏp'sĭ·ŏm'ē·tĕr), n. [Gr. opsis sight + -meter.] = OPTOMETER.
-op'sy (-ŏp'sĭ). = -OPSIA.

op'ta·tive (ŏp'tȧ·tĭv; see the noun), n. 1. Something to be desired. Rare.
2. Gram. The optative mood, or a verb or verbal form denoting it.

op'tic (ŏp'tĭk), adj. [F. optique, fr. ML. opticus, fr. Gr. optikos; akin to Gr. opsis sight, opōpa I have seen, opsomai I shall see, and to osse the two eyes, ōps eye, face. See EYE; cf. AUTOPSY, SYNOPSIS.] 1. Of or pert. to vision.
2. Of or pert. to the eye; ocular; as, the optic nerves.
3. Relating to optics; optical. Archaic.

2. Obs. a = OPTIC GLASS. b An optician. c Optics.

-op'tic (-ŏp'tĭk). A combining form of the adjective optic, as in dich*optic*, ent*optic*, magneto-optic.

op'ti·cal (ŏp'tĭ·kăl), adj. [From OPTIC, adj.] 1. Relating to the science of optics; also, dealing with or expert in optics.
2. Relating to vision; ocular; as, an optical illusion.
3. Constructed to aid the vision as by magnifying; acting by means of light; as, an optical telegraph.
☞ For some optical phrases, see the second word.

optical activity. Physics & Chem. Ability to rotate the plane of polarized light. See POLARIZATION, 2.

optical anomaly. An apparent lack of harmony between the crystal form of a mineral and its optical properties.

optical axis. a A straight line from the posterior wall of the eye through the center of curvature of the lens and cornea. See VISION. b Cryst. = 1st AXIS, 8.

optical bench. Optics. An apparatus consisting essentially of a horizontal rod or of two parallel ways on which may be fitted movable clamps for holding lenses, slits, etc. It is used to observe optical phenomena.

optical center. The point where the axis of a thin lens intersects the lens. Rays passing through it are not deflected.

optical character. See DOUBLE REFRACTION.

optical circle. A graduated circle used for the measurement of angles in optical experiments.

optical constants. Cryst. The optical characters of a mineral, as the indices of refraction, axial angle, extinction angle, etc.

optical correction. Arch. A slight modification of mathematically correct lines for the purpose of making them appear correct to the eye.

optical cube. = BIPRISM b.

optical double. Astron. A double star the connection of whose members is optical only. See DOUBLE STAR.

optical equation. Astron. The angle at the center of the epicycle between the center of the orbit and the earth's center.

optical flat. A tool for the optical testing of the flatness of a surface. It consists of a polished piece of clear flat glass, which is placed on the surface to be tested. When the glass is illumined with a monochromatic light, variations in the direction and spacing of the light bands (the interference pattern, produced by the interference of the light reflected from the surface being tested and that reflected from the lower surface of the optical flat) will reveal any variations in the thickness of the film of air between the tested surface and the optical flat.

optical gauge. See GAUGE, n., 10.

optical glass. An extra-fine quality of flint or crown glass used for making lenses, prisms, etc.

optical indicator. An engine indicator in which a beam of light is the indicating or recording element. Cf. INDICATOR, 9.

optical isomerism. See ASYMMETRIC CARBON ATOM; ISOMERIC, adj., 1.

optical lever. Physics. An arm or lever the displacement of which is measured by an attached mirror and a fixed telescope and scale, commonly used for measuring small lengths.

op'ti·cal·ly, adv. By optics or sight; with reference to optics.

optical pair. Astron. See BINARY STAR.

optical parallax. = BINOCULAR PARALLAX.

optical resolving power. Optics. The power of an optical system using light of one color to form images of two-point sources which are close together so that the images may be recognized as distinct.

optical rotation. See POLARIZATION, 2.

optical rotatory power. = SPECIFIC ROTATORY POWER.

optical square. Surv. A small hand instrument for laying off a right angle by means of two mirrors set at an angle of 45 degrees.

optical system. A combination of lenses, mirrors, and prisms, as in a microscope, telescope, etc.

optical telegraphy. = VISUAL SIGNALING.

optical train. A series of prisms or lenses.

optic angle. a See BINOCULAR PARALLAX. b = VISUAL ANGLE. c Mineral. The angle between the optic axes of a biaxial crystal.

optic axis. a Mineral. The line in a doubly refracting crystal, in the direction of which no double refraction occurs. A uniaxial crystal has one such line, a biaxial crystal has two. b Optics. = OPTICAL AXIS a.

optic capsule. Zool. One of a pair of cartilaginous capsules which develop around the eyes of elasmobranch fishes and of embryos of higher vertebrates.

optic chiasma, or commissure. See OPTIC NERVE.

optic cup. See OPTIC VESICLE a.

optic disk or entrance. The nearly circular light-colored area at the back of the retina where the optic nerve enters the eyeball; — usually synonymous with optic papilla.

optic glass. A lens, esp. one in an instrument. Archaic.

optic groove. Anat. A narrow transverse groove near the front of the superior surface of the body of the sphenoid bone, in which the optic chiasma rests. It is continuous on each side with a foramen (optic foramen) for the passage of the optic nerve and ophthalmic artery.

op·tĭ'cian (ŏp·tĭsh'ăn), n. [F. opticien. See OPTIC, adj.]
1. Formerly, one skilled in optics.
2. One who makes, or who deals in, optical glasses and instruments.

op·tic'i·ty (ŏp·tĭs'ĭ·tĭ), n. Physics & Chem. Optical activity or rotatory power. See POLARIZATION, 2.

optic lobe. Anat. & Zool. In mammals, either of the anterior pair of corpora quadrigemina; in lower vertebrates, either of the corpora bigemina.

optic nerve. Anat. & Zool. The special nerve of sight, connecting the eye and the optic centers of the brain (see BRAIN, 1). Vertebrates above Amphioxus have two optic nerves, which are customarily called the second pair of cranial nerves. They pass out from the ventral region of the diencephalon, and in the cyclostomes go directly to the eye of the corresponding side, but in most classes of vertebrates they form a decussation (the optic chiasma or commissure), most of the fibers passing to the opposite eye, but some to the eye of the same side. In teleost fishes they simply cross, all the fibers passing to the opposite eye. Penetrating the sclera and retina, each nerve breaks up into branches which spread over the anterior surface of the retina. See 1st EYE, 1 a. The term optic nerve is often restricted to the part distal to the chiasma, the proximal part being called the optic tract. The optic nerves with the chiasma may properly be regarded as optic tracts, being essentially parts of the brain.

op'tĭ·co- (ŏp'tĭ·kō-). A combining form for optic, denoting optic and, as in op'tĭ·co·chem'ĭ·cal, op'tĭ·co·cĭl'ĭ·ar'y, op'tĭ·co·pap'ĭ·lar'y, op'tĭ·co·pu'pĭl·lar'y. See CHEMICAL, etc.

op'tĭ·con (ŏp'tĭ·kŏn), n. [NL.] Zool. An external enlargement of the optic lobe of the insect brain. It is the innermost of the ganglionic masses connected with the compound eye.

-op'tĭ·con (-ŏp'tĭ·kŏn). A combining form from stereo*optic*on, as in pano*pticon*, sci*opticon*.

optic papilla. Anat. The slight elevation produced by the thick bundles of the fibers of the optic nerve in entering the eyeball. See OPTIC DISK.

optic radiations. Anat. Nerve fibers from the pulvinar and lateral geniculate body to the cuneus and other parts of the occipital lobe, functioning in vision.

op'tics (ŏp'tĭks), n. [From optic, adj., after ML. optica, fr. Gr. ta optika; cf. Gr. optikē (sc. theōria). See OPTIC.] The science treating of light (sense 18 a), its genesis and propagation, the effects which it suffers and produces, and other phenomena closely associated with it. Geometrical optics is concerned with the optical phenomena associated with reflection and ordinary refraction, but only in so far as they can be deduced mathematically from the simple empirical laws of reflection and refraction. Physical optics is concerned with the description and explanation of all optical phenomena in terms of physical theories, as wave theory in general, electromagnetic phenomena, quantum mechanics, etc.
☞ Optics is usually construed as a singular noun.

optic thalamus. Anat. The thalamus of either side, containing optic centers which are large in man.

optic tract. Anat. & Zool. See OPTIC NERVE.

optic tube. A telescope. Archaic.

optic vesicle. Embryol. a An outgrowth on each lateral side of the diencephalon of vertebrate embryos. Originally a pedunculate hollow sphere, it collapses to form a two-layered cup, the optic cup, which becomes the retina, the peduncle remaining as the optic nerve or tract. Cf. OPTIC NERVE. The two vesicles are called primitive optic vesicles to distinguish them from: b The secondary optic vesicles, which are the spaces between the retina and lens in which the vitreous humor develops.

op'tĭ·graph (ŏp'tĭ·grăf; 83), n. [optic + -graph. See OPTIC, adj.] An instrument for copying landscapes, etc. It consists of a telescope with a diagonal eyepiece, suspended vertically in gimbals beneath a fixed diagonal mirror. By moving the telescope so that a dot in the eyepiece appears to pass over the outlines of objects, a pencil attached to the telescope is made to copy the outline on paper.

op'tĭ·mate (ŏp'tĭ·măt), adj. [L. optimas, -atis, adj., optimates, n. pl., the adherents of the best men, the aristocrats, fr. optimus the best. See OPTIMISM.] Of or pertaining to the nobility or aristocracy. — n. A noble or aristocrat; a chief man, as in a city.

op'tĭ·ma'tes (-mā'tēz), n. pl. [L. See OPTIMATE.] 1. The nobility or aristocracy of ancient Rome; — opp. to populares.
2. [cap.] A.-S. Hist. The members, collectively, of the national councils of Mercia, Wessex, and Sussex.

op'tĭ·me (ŏp'tĭ·mē), n. [L., adv. fr. optimus the best.] In Cambridge University, England, a man who obtains honors, but fails to get placed among the wranglers, in the mathematical tripos; — called senior optime or junior optime according as he is placed in the second or third class.

op'tĭ·mism (ŏp'tĭ·mĭz'm), n. [F. optimisme, fr. L. optimus the best; prob. akin to L. ops wealth, power. See OPULENT.] 1. Philos. a Originally, the name applied to Leibnitz's doctrine that the world is the best possible world, based on the argument that God, being all-wise, must know all possible worlds, being all-powerful, must be able to create whichsoever he might choose, and, being all-good, must choose the best. b The doctrine or opinion that reality is essentially good, completely good, or as good as it conceivably could be. c The doctrine that the goods of life overbalance the pain and evil of it, that life is preponderantly good. Cf. PESSIMISM.
2. Rare. a The quality of being the best or for the best. b The best possible or conceivable state.
3. An inclination to put the most favorable construction upon actions and happenings, minimize adverse aspects, conditions, and possibilities, or anticipate the best possible outcome; a cheerful and hopeful temperament.

op'tĭ·mist, adj. Optimistic.

op'tĭ·mis'tic (-mĭs'tĭk), adj. Also -mis'tĭ·cal (-tĭ·kăl).
1. Philos. Of or pert. to optimism; tending, or conforming, to the opinion that all events are ordered for the best.
2. Hopeful; sanguine; as, an optimistic view.

op'tĭ·mize (ŏp'tĭ·mīz), v. i.; -MIZED (-mīzd); -MIZ'ING (-mīz'ĭng). To be optimistic. — v. t. To treat optimistically. — op'tĭ·mi·za'tion (-mĭ·zā'shŭn; -mī·zā'shŭn), n.

op'tĭ·mum (-mŭm), n.; pl. -MA (-mȧ), -MUMS (-mŭmz). [L., prop. neut. of optimus best. See OPTIMISM.] 1. The best or most favorable degree, quantity, number, etc.
2. Biol. The most favorable condition as to temperature, light, moisture, food, etc., for the growth and reproduction of an organism.

op'tĭ·mum, adj. [See OPTIMUM, n.] Best; most favorable or most conducive to a given end, esp. under fixed conditions.

optimum capacity. Elec. Of an induction coil, the capacity which, if placed across the break, will give the longest spark in the secondary circuit.

op'tion (ŏp'shŭn), n. [F., fr. L. optio; akin to L. optare to choose, wish. See OPINE; cf. ADOPT.] 1. The exercise of the power of choice; choice.
Transplantation must proceed from the option of the people, else it sounds like an exile. Bacon.
2. Power of choosing; the right of choice; an alternative.
There is an option left to the United States of America, whether they will be respectable and prosperous, or contemptible and miserable, as a nation. Washington.
3. That which is offered for choice, or which is chosen, as an elective study in a university.
4. A wishing; a wish. Obs.
5. Ch. of Eng. A right formerly belonging to an archbishop to select any one dignity or benefice in the gift of a suffragan bishop consecrated or confirmed by him, for bestowal by himself when next vacant. It was annulled inadvertently by Parliament in 1845.
6. Com. & Fin. A stipulated privilege, given to a party in a time contract, of demanding its fulfillment on any day within a specified limit; specif., the right to buy or sell designated securities or commodities at a specified price during the period of the contract.
7. Insurance. The right of an insured person to choose the form in which various payments due him on a policy shall be made or applied.
8. Produce Exchange. a A put or call, esp. in grain futures. b A future for a given month; as, the July option.
Syn. — See ALTERNATIVE.

op'tion, v. t. To grant an option, esp. an option of purchase or rental, on (a property or commodity).

op'tion·al (-ăl; -l), adj. Involving an option; depending on the exercise of an option; left to one's discretion; not compulsory; as, optional studies; it is optional to go or stay.
Syn. — Elective, voluntary.
Ant. — Obligatory, compulsory.
— op'tion·al·ly, adv. — op'tion·al'ĭ·ty (-ăl'ĭ·tĭ), n.

op'tion·al·ize (-īz), v. t. To make optional.

op'tion·ee' (ŏp'shŭn·ē'), n. [See -EE.] The grantee in an option contract.

op'tion·or (ŏp'shŭn·ĕr), n. The grantor in an option contract.

op'tive (ŏp'tĭv), adj. [L. optivus chosen.] That may be chosen; — used in Roman law as opposed to dative or testamentary.

op'to- (ŏp'tō-). A combining form for optic, denoting: a Vision, as in optometer. b Optic; the eye; as in optoblast, optotype.

op'to·blast (ŏp'tō·blăst), n. [opto- + -blast.] Anat. A large ganglion cell of the retina.

op'to·gram (ŏp'tō·grăm), n. [opto- + -gram.] Physiol. An image of an external object fixed on the retina by the photochemical action of light on the visual purple. — op·tog'ra·phy (ŏp·tŏg'rȧ·fĭ), n.

op·tol'o·gy (ŏp·tŏl'ō·jĭ), n. [opto- + -logy.] The testing of the eyes for lenses, regarded as a science. — op'to·log'ĭ·cal (ŏp'tō·lŏj'ĭ·kăl), adj. — op·tol'o·gist (ŏp·tŏl'ō·jĭst), n.

op'to·me'ninx (ŏp'tō·mē'nĭngks), n. [NL., fr. opto- + Gr. mēninx membrane.] = RETINA.

op·tom'e·ter (ŏp·tŏm'ē·tĕr), n. [opto- + -meter.] Physiol. An instrument for measuring the distance of distinct vision, or the accommodative scope of the eye, mainly for the selection of eyeglasses.

Optometer.

op·tom'e·trist (ŏp·tŏm'ē·trĭst), n. One who is skilled in and practices optometry.

op·tom'e·try (-trĭ), n. 1. Measurement of the range of vision; also, loosely, measurement of other visual powers.
2. Scientific examination of the eye to detect diseases or defects, prescription of correctional lenses or exercises but not of the use of drugs, and supplying of lenses.
— op'to·met'rĭ·cal (ŏp'tō·mĕt'rĭ·kăl), adj.

op'to·phone (ŏp'tō·fōn), n. [opto- + -phone.] An instrument by which light energy is converted into sound energy, so that a blind person is enabled by its use to locate and estimate varying degrees of light through the ear and thus even to read printed matter.

op'to·type (ŏp'tō·tīp), n. [opto- + -type.] Med. Type of different size used in testing the acuity of vision; — commonly in pl.

op'u·lence (ŏp'ū·lĕns), n. Also op'u·len·cy (-lĕn·sĭ). [L. opulentia. See OPULENT.] Wealth; riches; affluence; hence, plenty, profusion, amplitude, etc.

op'u·lent (-lĕnt), adj. [L. opulens, opulentus, fr. ops, opis, power, wealth, riches; akin to Skr. apnas property, work, Lith. apstas abundance, store, and to L. opus work. See OPERATE; cf. COPIOUS, OPTIMISM.] Having a large estate or property; wealthy; rich; affluent; hence, amply or plentifully provided or fashioned; luxuriant, profuse, lavish, etc.; as, an opulent city or citizen; opulent blossoms; an opulent bosom. — op'u·lent·ly, adv.
Syn. and Ant. — See RICH.

op'u·lus (ŏp'ū·lŭs), n. [L., a kind of maple.] Guelder-rose.

O·pun'tĭ·a (ō·pŭn'shĭ·ȧ), n. [NL., fr. L. Opuntia (herba), a plant, fr. Opus, city in Locris, Greece, fr. Gr. Opous.] Bot. a A very large genus of cacti, the prickly pears, having flat or terete joints usually studded with tubercles bearing sharp spines or prickly hairs or both. The flowers are mostly yellow, succeeded by edible pulpy fruits, which in some species furnish an article of native diet and are also used to make fermented beverages. The tuna O. tuna and the Indian fig O. ficus-indica are often planted for hedges. Some species are of value as forage plants in arid regions. Though indigenous in America, the genus is represented in most warm regions by naturalized forms. b [not cap.] A plant of this genus.

Prickly Pear (Opuntia).

O·pun'tĭ·a'ĭes (ō·pŭn'shĭ·ā'ēz), n. pl. [NL.] Bot. An order of plants consisting of the family Cactaceae (syn. O·pun'tĭ·a'ce·ae [-sē·ē]). See CACTACEAE.

o·pun'tĭ·oid (ō·pŭn'shĭ·oid), adj. [Opuntia + -oid.] Bot. Resembling Opuntia or a plant of that genus.

optically active, optically inactive, etc. See ACTIVE, 10 b; INACTIVE d, etc.

optically positive, optically negative. See DOUBLE REFRACTION.

optional referendum. Polit. Science. See REFERENDUM, 1 a.

op'to·tech'nics, n. See -TECHNICS; OPTO-.

Op'u·las'ter (ŏp'ū·lăs'tĕr), n. [NL. See OPULUS; ASTER.] Syn. of PHYSOCARPUS.

o'pus (ō'pŭs or, esp. Brit., ŏp'ŭs; 277), n.; pl. OPERA (ŏp'ĕ-rä). [L. See OPERA.] A work; work; specif.: a Music. A composition, or set of compositions, usually numbered in the order of its issue. Abbr. op. b Embroidery. With qualifying adjective: Any of various kinds of old needlework, as: o'pus An'gli-cum (ăng'glĭ-kŭm) or An'gli-ca'num (-kā'nŭm) [ML. Anglicanum English], (early) English work, also, embroidery imitating the freedom of painting in form; o'pus a-ra'ne-um (ȧ-rā'nē-ŭm) [L. araneum, neut. of araneus of a spider], embroidery in which long, straight lines form the pattern, as in the spider web; in the Middle Ages, embroidery in general; o'pus con-su'tum (kŏn-sū'tŭm) [L. consutum, neut. of consutus sewed], cutwork or appliqué; o'pus pec-ti'ne-um (pĕk-tĭn'ē-ŭm) [ML. pectineum, neut. adj., fr. L. pecten, -inis, comb], woven work done with the aid of an implement like a comb, in imitation of embroidery; o'pus Phry'gi-cum (frĭ'jĭ-kŭm) [erroneous for L. Phrygium, neut., Phrygian], embroidery of great richness, esp. when done with gold; — called also Phrygian work; o'pus plu-ma'ri-um (ploō-mā'rĭ-ŭm; 79; 242) [L. plumarium, neut. of plumarius of soft feathers], featherstitch; o'pus pul'vi-na'ri-um (pŭl'vĭ-nā'rĭ-ŭm; 79) [NL., fr. L. pulvinarium, neut. adj., belonging to the couches of the gods], cross-stitch and tent-stitch work on canvas; o'pus Sa'ra-ce'ni-cum (săr'ȧ-sĕn'ĭ-kŭm), [ML. Saracenicum, neut. of Sarcenicus, Saracen], carpets, esp. Oriental rugs, — the medieval term for such fabrics not made in Europe; o'pus ti-ra'tum (tĭ-rā'tŭm) [ML. tiratum, neut. past part. of tirare to draw], drawn work.

o-pus'cu-lum (-kū-lŭm), n.; pl. -CULA (-lȧ). [L.] An opuscule.

‖O'pus De'i (ō'pŭs dē'ĭ). [L., the work of God.] Divine service; — so called in the Benedictine rule.

‖o'pus la'te-ri'ci-um or la'te-ri'ti-um (lăt'ē-rĭsh'ĭ-ŭm). [L. latericium, -itium, neut. of latericius, -itius, made of bricks.] In Greco-Roman building, masonry of bricks or tiles of baked clay laid in mortar, much used for the facing of walls in stone masonry.

or (ôr), conj. [From ON. ăr, adv., early, formerly; but influenced by the kindred compar. AS. ǣr before. See ERE.] 1. Ere; before; sooner than; until. Archaic.

But natheless, while I have time and space, Or that I forther in this tale pace. Chaucer.

2. Than. Obs. exc. Dial.

— or ever, or e'er, or ere. Before; — ever being generally simply emphatic, with the force of even, at all. Or ee'r is probably a confusion with or e'er. Archaic.

Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven Or ever I had seen that day, Horatio! Shak.

or, prep. Before; until. Now Dial.

or (ôr; 71), conj. [ME. or, fr. outher, other, auther, either, or, fr. AS. āwther, contr. fr. āhwæther, fr. ā aye + hwæther whether (see AYE, WHETHER; cf. EITHER); or ME. other, or, may be fr. AS. ōththe, akin to OHG. ōdar, ōdo, eddo, G. oder, Goth. aththau (Ox. E. D.); the r perh. due to the influence of a preceding word other or outher = either.] A co-ordinating particle that marks an alternative; as, you may read or may write, — that is, you may do one of the things at your pleasure, but not both. It often connects a series of words or propositions, presenting a choice of either; as, he may study law or medicine or he may go into trade. Specific uses are to indicate: a Substitution; as, use olive oil or any light oil. b Explanation; as, transepts, or cross aisles. c Correction; as, ropes, or nautically, sheets. d Approximation; as, two or three days. e Succession by turns; as, one or other of them sat by him all night. f Consequence; as, pay or I 'll sue.

or (ôr), n. [F., fr. L. aurum gold. See ORIOLE.] Her. The color gold or the color yellow, — represented in drawing or engraving by small dots. See TINCTURE, n., 5.

Or, Her.

-or (for pron., see 2d note after defs.). [L. -or or ME. -or, -ur, -our, fr. OF.] 1. [OF. -or, -ur, -our (F. -eur), fr. L. -or.] A noun suffix denoting a state or quality, as in error, fervor, pallor, candor. Often spelled -our.

2. [OF. -or, -ur, -our (F. -eur), fr. L. -or; OF. -eör, -eür (F. -eur), fr. L. -ator.] A noun suffix denoting an agent or doer, as in auditor, one who hears; donor, one who gives; obligor, elevator, creditor, executor. It is correlative to -ee. In general -or is appended to words of Latin, and -er to those of English, origin. See -ER.

☞ Words ending in -or, being mostly from the Latin or as if from Latin, are divided accordingly, as con-duc'tor, cred'i-tor, and the -or is not made a separate syllable as is the English suffix -er as in mak'er, plat'er.

3. An ending of indeterminate meaning, representing a French -oir, as in manor, mirror, parlor.

4. A variant of -ior, as in major, minor.

☞ Many derivatives from Latin words in -or were taken into ME. in their OF. forms with -our. At the Renaissance and later, many words taken directly from Latin retained their Latin ending -or, and many similar words borrowed from OF. changed -our to -or in imitation of Latin. In present British use, some of these words retain the OF.-ME. -our (favour, humour, labour); others have either changed -our to -or, or retained the Latin -or (actor, donor, error, dictator, victor); nearly all agent nouns have -or. In American use almost all such words are spelled -or.

☞ -or is generally pronounced -ēr, the same as -er, as in such common words as conductor, labor, etc., but often -ôr in learned or technical words, as donor, obligor, rigor mortis.

o'ra (ō'rȧ), 181), n.; pl. -RAS (-rȧz). [AS., fr. ON. aurar, pl.] A money of account introduced into England by the Danish invaders and valued in 920 at 2½ shillings, in the Domesday Book (1086) at 20d. sterling.

‖o'ra (ō'rȧ), n., pl. of os, mouth.

o'ra-bas'su (ō'rȧ-bäs'sōō), n. [Of Tupian origin; cf. Tupi oyapuça, oiapussá.] Any of several South American titi monkeys of the genus Callicebus, esp. C. moloch.

or'ach, or'ache (ôr'ăch), n. [F. arroche, fr. L. atriplex, fr. Gr. atraphaxys.] Any plant of the genus Atriplex, esp. A. hortensis.

or'a-cle (ôr'ȧ-k'l; -ĭ-k'l), n. [ME., fr. OF. oracle, fr. L. oraculum, fr. orare to speak, utter, pray. See ORATION.] 1. Gr. & Rom. Antiq. The medium by which a god reveals hidden knowledge or makes known the divine purpose; also, the place where the oracle is given.

2. The revelation or utterance supposed to issue from a divinity through a medium, usually a priest or priestess thought to be inspired; the response of an oracle to a question or petition. The utterances of the ancient oracles were commonly obscure and enigmatical. See DIVINATION; cf. DELPHIAN ORACLE, DODONA.

3. Transferred: a A place or medium of communication from the God of Judaism and Christianity, as the holy of holies of the Jewish temple, the breastplate (with the Urim and Thummim) of the high priest, or an inspired prophet. b The revelation received from such a medium; specif., pl., the Scriptures. c Obs. A command of the Pope.

4. A thing or person supposed to give oracular decisions.

5. An authoritative or wise expression; a wise answer, or one delivered with aspect of oracular certainty.

or'a-cle, v. i. & i. To proclaim or speak as an oracle. Rare. — or'a-cler (-klĕr), n. Obs.

o-rac'u-lar (ō-răk'ū-lĕr), adj. [Cf. L. oracularius.] 1. Of or pertaining to an oracle; uttering oracles; forecasting the future; as, an oracular tongue.

2. Resembling an oracle in some way, as in solemnity, wisdom, authority, obscurity, ambiguity, dogmatism.

— o-rac'u-lar-ly, adv. — o-rac'u-lar-ness, n.

o-rac'u-lar'i-ty (ō-răk'ū-lăr'ĭ-tĭ), n. Quality or instance of being oracular.

Or'ange (ŏr'ĕnj; -ĭnj; 185), n. A town and a former small principality now in the department of Vaucluse, France. In 1530 it became a possession of the house of Nassau, whence it passed to a house of princes, who were styled princes of Orange-Nassau, and of whom William, afterward William III of England, was one. The territory was acquired by Louis XIV and annexed to France, but the title continued to be held by the cousin of William and his descendants, who now are the royal line of the Netherlands. From the coincidence of the name with that of the fruit and the color, the wearing of orange ribbons, etc., became an emblem of attachment to William III and the settlement of the crown as determined at the Revolution of 1688–89, and hence became a practice of the Orangemen.

3. A ball, globe, or sphere in special senses: a Now Rare. A sphere of action; station; as, the orb of higher life.

But in our orbs we'll live so round and safe. Shak.

b A collective whole; a world; as, an orb of witnesses. c Poetic. The eye, as luminous and spherical. d Rare. A circular or approximately circular ornament, especially when in high relief, as a boss or the key of a vault. e A sphere surmounted by a cross symbolizing kingly power and justice and forming part of the English regalia.
4. A circle; anything circular, as a disk, wheel, or ring; as, an orb of soldiers. Poetic.
5. A period of time marked off by the revolution of a heavenly body. Rare.
6. Astron. The orbit, or the plane of the orbit, of a planet or other heavenly body. Obs.
7. Astrol. A spherical space surrounding a planet and within the radius of its influence; also, the space beyond the cusp of a house within which its influence is still active.

orb (ôrb), v.; ORBED (ôrbd; see the adj.); ORB'ING. Transitive: 1. To form into a disk or circle; to round out.
2. To encircle; surround; enclose. Poetic.
3. To cause to move in an orbit. Rare.

——, Intransitive: 1. To move in an orbit. Rare.
2. To become round like an orb. Poetic.

or·bic'u·lar (ôr·bĭk'ū·lĕr), adj. [LL. orbicularis, fr. orbiculus, dim. of orbis orb; cf. F. orbiculaire.] a Resembling a disk or circle; round; spherical. b Of the form of a solid of revolution. c Of the form of a circle. d Of the form of a circle or ellipse. e Of the form of a circle or ellipse and a plane perpendicular to its axis. f Of the form of a circle or ellipse and a plane parallel to its axis. g Of the form of a circle or ellipse and a plane parallel to its axis and passing through its center. h Of the form of a circle or ellipse and a plane parallel to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular to its axis. i Of the form of a circle or ellipse and a plane parallel to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular to its axis and passing through its center. j Of the form of a circle or ellipse and a plane parallel to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular to its axis and passing through its center. k Of the form of a circle or ellipse and a plane parallel to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular to its axis and passing through its center. l Of the form of a circle or ellipse and a plane parallel to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular to its axis and passing through its center. m Of the form of a circle or ellipse and a plane parallel to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular to its axis and passing through its center. n Of the form of a circle or ellipse and a plane parallel to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular to its axis and passing through its center and perpendicular bling, or having the form of, an orb; spherical; circular; orbiculate. b Figuratively, fully rounded out. c Petrog. Containing rounded bodies, or orbs, consisting of minerals in generally radial or tangential groupings, usually in successive concentric zones, as corsite, orbicular granite, etc. — or·bic'u·lar'i·ty (-lăr'ĭ·tĭ), or·bic'u·lar·ness, n. — or·bic'u·lar·ly, adv.

orbicular bone, or or·bic'u·la're (ôr·bĭk'ū·lā'rē), n. Anat. See LENTICULAR PROCESS.

or·bic'u·la'ris (ôr·bĭk'ū·lā'rĭs; 79), n. [NL., fr. LL. orbicularis. See ORBICULAR.] Anat. A muscle encircling an orifice.

‖or·bi'cu·la'ris o'cu·li (ôr·bĭk'ū·lā'rĭs ŏk'ū·lī). [NL.] Anat. The muscle encircling the opening of the orbit of the eye.

‖or·bi'cu·la'ris o'ris (ō'rĭs). [NL.] Anat. The muscle encircling the mouth.

‖or·bi'cu·la'ris pal'pe·bra'rum (păl'pē·brā'rŭm). [NL.] = ORBICULARIS OCULI.

orbicular ligament. The annual ligament of the radius.

or·bic'u·late (ôr·bĭk'ū·lāt), adj. [L. orbiculatus. See ORBICULAR.] Having the form of an orb; circular, or nearly circular, in outline; as, an orbiculate leaf. See LEAF, Illust. — or·bic'u·late·ly, adv.

or·bic'u·late (-lāt), n. That which is orbiculate; esp., a solid of oval vertical section and circular horizontal section.

or·bic'u·lat'ed (-lāt'ĕd; -ĭd; 119), adj. Orbiculate.

or·bic'u·la'tion (-lā'shŭn), n. Formation in or as in an orb.

or·bic'u·la'to- (ôr·bĭk'ū·lā'tō-). A combining form for orbiculate, denoting orbiculately, as in or·bic'u·la'to·cor'date, or·bic'u·la'to·el·lip'tĭ·cal.

or·bif'ic (ôr·bĭf'ĭk), adj. [L. orbis orb + -fic.] Lit., orb-making; — of creating the world. P. J. Bailey.

Or·bil'i·us (ôr·bĭl'ĭ·ŭs), n. The schoolmaster (Orbilius Pupillus) of the Roman poet Horace, who describes him as "fond of flogging" (plagosus); — often used as the type of any such teacher. — Or·bil'i·an (-ăn), adj.

‖or·bis sci·en'ti·a'rum (ôr'bĭs sī·ĕn'tĭ·ā'rŭm). [L.] Circle of the sciences; hence, total of scientific knowledge.

‖or·bis ter·ra'rum or ter'rae (ôr'bĭs tĕ·rā'rŭm, tĕr'ē). [L. See ORB; TERRACE.] a The world. b A map or globe of the earth.

or·bit (ôr'bĭt), n. [F. or L.; F. orbite, fr. L. orbita a track or rut made by a wheel, course, circuit. See 2d ORB.] 1. Anat. The cavity of the skull in which the eye and its appendages are located; the eye socket. In man each orbit is a somewhat pyramidal cavity, the frontal sphenoid, the ethmoid, maxillary, zygomatic, lachrymal, and palatine bones entering into the formation of its walls. The optic foramen for the optic nerve is at the apex of the cavity, and eight other openings give passage to nerves, blood vessels, and the nasolachrymal duct. It contains a quantity of fat, in which are embedded the eyeball, the extrinsic muscles, the nerves and blood vessels of the eye, and the lachrymal gland. 2. The path described by a celestial body in its revolution around another body; as, the orbit of Jupiter, of the earth, of the moon, or of a comet. 3. Region or scope of activity, influence, etc. "Communities . . . outside the orbit of modernity." W. Lippmann. 4. An orb or ball. "Roll the lucid orbit of an eye." Young. 5. Zool. a The skin around the eye of a bird. b The depression in the front of the carapace of a crustacean in which the eyestalk is situated. c A raised, or otherwise marked, area around the compound eye of an insect.

or·bit·al (ôr'bĭ·tăl; -t'l), adj. a Of or pertaining to an orbit; as, orbital revolution, arch. b Anat. & Zool. Ocular.

orbital arch. Anat. The curved upper edge of the orbit of the eye.

orbital convolutions. Anat. See ORBITAL LOBE a.

or·bi·ta'le (ôr'bĭ·tā'lē), n. [NL. See ORBITAL, ORBIT.] Craniom. The lowest point on the lower edge of the orbit.

orbital fissure. Anat. Either of two openings transmitting nerves and blood vessels to or from the orbit. The superior orbital fissure is between the greater and the lesser wing of the sphenoid bone, and the inferior orbital fissure is between the greater wing of the sphenoid and the maxilla.

orbital fossa. Zool. = ORBIT, 5 b. orbital index. Craniom. The ratio of the length of the orbital cavity (measured from the dacryon to the farthest opposite border) to its greatest height (which is determined by a line at right angles with the preceding), usually expressed in hundredths of the length. Skulls having an orbital index of 83 (or sometimes 84) to 89 are called mesoseme, those having an index below 83 (or 84), microseme; and those having an index of 90 or more, megaseme. Cf. CRANIOMETRY.

orbital lobe. a Anat. The part of the lower surface of the frontal lobe of the brain which overlies the orbits. It is divided by a branched sulcus (the orbital sulcus) into the internal, anterior, and posterior, orbital convolutions, which are the continuations respectively of the superior, middle, and inferior frontal convolutions. b Zool. The anterior lateral part of the carapace of a crab.

orbital nerve. = ZYGOMATIC NERVE.

orbital point. Craniom. The lowest point of the lower border of the orbit. See CRANIOMETRY, Illust.

orbital process. See PALATINE BONE.

or·bit·ar (ôr'bĭ·tĕr), adj. [F. orbitaire.] Orbital. Rare.

or·bit·ar'y (-tĕr'ĭ or, esp. Brit., -tĕr·ĭ), adj. Orbital.

or·bite (ôr'bĭt), n. [From *Orbis*höhe, Odenwald, Germany.] Petrog. A diorite-porphyry containing hornblende phenocrysts in a groundmass of acid plagioclase laths.

Or·bi·te·la'ri·ae (ôr'bĭ·tē·lā'rĭ·ē; 79), n. pl. [NL., fr. L. orbis orb + tela web.] Zool. The geometric spiders (family Argiopidae). — or·bi·te'lar (-tē'lĕr), adj. — or·bi·te·lar'i·an (-tē·lăr'ĭ·ăn; 79), adj. & n. — or·bi·tele (ôr'bĭ·tēl), n. — or·bi·te'lous (-tē'lŭs), adj.

or·bi·to- (ôr'bĭ·tō-). Med. A combining form from Latin orbita, denoting: a The orbit, as in or·bi·tot'o·my. See -TOMY. b Orbital and, as in:

orbitofrontal	orbitomaxillary	orbitopalpebral
orbitomalar	orbitonasal	orbitozygomatic

Or·bi·toi'des (-toi'dēz), n. [NL., fr. L. orbita orbit + -oid.] Paleontol. A genus of Foraminifera similar to Camerina, but with radially arranged chambers and several layers of small chambers superimposed on both surfaces of the layer of large chambers. It extended from the Upper Cretaceous to the Miocene.

Or·bi·to·li'na (ôr'bĭ·tō·lī'nȧ), n. [NL. See ORBITOLITES; 2d -INA.] Paleontol. A genus of Foraminifera very abundant in the Cretaceous, having a bowl-shaped or depressed conic silicous test with agglutinated sandy particles.

or·bit'o·lite (ôr·bĭt'ō·lĭt), n. Paleontol. A fossil of the genus Orbitolites.

Or·bi·to·li'tes (ôr'bĭ·tō·lī'tēz), n. [NL. See ORBIT; -LITE.] Paleontol. A genus of Foraminifera of the Eocene, which form thin, broad, circular disks, containing numerous small chambers disposed concentrically about a few spirally wound primordial chambers.

or'bi·to·na'sal in'dex (ôr'bĭ·tō·nā'zăl; -z'l). A ratio denoting the relative projection of the root of the nose beyond the plane of the eye orbits. The sum of two lines each extending from the front point of the outer edge of one of the orbits to the lowest point on the root of the nose, divided into the direct distance (multiplied by 100) between the two orbital points found, gives the index. Subjects having indices of from 110 to 112.9 (or sometimes of 107.5 to 110) are called mesopic; below 110 (or 107.5), platyopic; above 113 (or 110), pro-opic. Cf. CRANIOMETRY.

or'bi·to·sphe'noid (-sfē'noid), adj. [orbito- + sphenoid.] Anat. & Zool. Designating, or pertaining to, a paired element of the skull between the presphenoid and frontal. In man it forms the lesser wing of the sphenoid. — n. An orbitosphenoid bone or process. — or'bi·to·sphe·noi'dal (-sfē·noi'dăl; -d'l), adj.

or'bi·to·stat' (ôr'bĭ·tō·stăt'), n. [orbito- + -stat.] Craniom. An instrument for measuring the axis of the orbit.

orbit sweeper. Astron. An instrument, an equatorial in general form, but with a third axis at right angles to the declination axis, devised by Sir George Airy. It is used in searching for an expected comet.

Or'bu·li'na (ôr'bū·lī'nȧ), n. [NL., dim. of L. orbis orb.] Zool. A genus of minute Foraminifera having a globular unilocular shell.

Orbulina (O. universa).

orb weaver. A spider of the family Argiopidae. See GEOMETRIC SPIDER.

orb'y (ôr'bĭ), adj. [From 2d ORB.] Orblike; having the course of an orb; revolving.

orc (ôrk), n. [F. orque, fr. L. orca a kind of whale.] The grampus or a supposedly similar sea animal.

Or'ca (ôr'kȧ), n. [NL., fr. L. orca a kind of whale.] Zool. a Syn. of ORCINUS. b [not cap.] A killer whale. See 1st KILLER, 2.

Or·ca'di·an (ôr·kā'dĭ·ăn), adj. [L. Orcades the Orkney Islands.] Of or pert. to the Orkney Islands. — n. A native or inhabitant of the Orkneys.

or'ca·net, or'ca·nette, or'cha·net (ôr'kȧ·nĕt), n. [F. orcanète, orcanette, dim. of OF. orcane, arcanne, fr. Ar.; cf. Sp. arcaneta, var. of alcaneta. See ALKANET.] Alkannin.

or'ce·in (ôr'sē·ĭn), n. [From ORCIN.] Chem. A purple nitrogenous dyestuff obtained from orcinol by action of aqueous ammonia and atmospheric oxygen. It is the essential coloring matter of cudbear and archil.

or'chard (ôr'chĕrd; 58), n. [AS. orceard, ortgeard; akin to Goth. aurtigards, and to ON. urt a plant, herb; AS. geard enclosure. See 1st WORT; 2d YARD.] 1. A garden. Obs. 2. A plantation or enclosure containing fruit trees, nut-bearing trees, sugar maples, etc.; also, the trees collectively. — in orchard. Planted with orchard trees.

or'chard, v. t. To obtain naval stores, as tar, pitch, or resin, from (pine trees) by making wounds for the purpose. Cant.

orchard fruit. = TREE FRUIT.

orchard grass. One of the most valuable and widely grown hay and pasture grasses (Dactylis glomerata). It is tall and stout, growing in tufts with loose open panicles. It is often used in mixtures of lawn grass for shady places.

Orchard Grass.

orchard heating. The protection of fruit trees in bloom or in fruit from frost injury by means of numerous small heaters utilizing as fuel crude oil, coke, coal, or wood. — orchard heater.

orchard house. Hort. A glass-house for raising fruit trees.

or'chard·ing, n. Cultivation of orchards; orchards, in general.

or'chard·ist (ôr'chĕr·dĭst), n. Hort. One engaged in orcharding.

or'chard·man (ôr'chĕrd·măn), n.; pl. -MEN (-mĕn). An orchardist.

orchard oriole. An oriole (Icterus spurius) of eastern North America, smaller than the Baltimore oriole. The adult male is rich chestnut with a black head, neck, and upper back.

or·che'sis (ôr·kē'sĭs), n. [Gr. orchēsis. See ORCHESTRA.] Art of dancing, esp. in the Greek chorus.

or·ches'tic (ôr·kĕs'tĭk), adj. [Gr. orchēstikos.] Pertaining to dancing. — n. Dancing; — esp. in pl.

Or·ches·ti'i·dae (ôr'kĕs·tī'ĭ·dē), n. pl. [NL., fr. Gr. orchēstēs a dancer. See ORCHESTRA.] Zool. The family containing the beach fleas. Or·ches'ti·a (ôr·kĕs'tĭ·ȧ) is the typical genus. — or·ches'ti·an (-ăn), n. — or·ches'ti·id (-ĭd), n.

or'ches·tra (ôr'kĕs·trȧ; -kĭs·trȧ; formerly often ôr·kĕs'trȧ), n. [L., fr. Gr. orchēstra, orig., the place for the chorus of dancers, fr. orcheisthai to dance; akin to Skr. rghāyati he trembles, raves.] 1. Gr. & Rom. Antiq. In ancient Greek theaters, the circular space used by the chorus, in front of the proscenium. In Roman theaters it was a corresponding semicircular space used for the seats of persons of distinction. 2. In a modern theater or other public hall, the space used by a band of instrumental performers, commonly just in front of the stage, and at or below the level of the auditorium floor. By extension, the forward part, sometimes all, of the main floor in a theater. Cf. STALL, n., in a theater. See PARQUET, 2. 3. Dancing. Obs. 4. Formerly, in churches, the space occupied by the choir. 5. Music. A band of performers on various instruments, including esp. those of the viol class, adapted for rendering the larger kinds of concerted music, as symphonies, overtures, etc., and the accompaniments of operas, oratorios, masses, and the like, or for playing the slighter concerted music for theatrical performances, dances, etc.; — commonly distinguished from the military or street band of players on wind instruments, and from a group of solo players for rendering chamber music, as septets, octets, etc.; also, the set of instruments used by this group of performers. The modern concert orchestra is composed of four important groups of instruments, the three "bands": (1) strings — first and second violins, violas, violoncellos, and contrabasses — the largest and predominant group, sometimes used alone as a string orchestra; (2) wood-wind — flutes, oboes, bassoons, clarinets, and, frequently, the piccolo, English horn, double bassoon, and bass clarinet; (3) brass — horns, trumpets, sometimes cornets, trombones, and tubas; and (4) the "battery" or percussives — tympani, cymbals, triangle, etc. Other instruments, as the harp, are introduced for special effects. Each of the three bands and some of their subgroups can play full harmony by themselves, but the surpassing power and expressiveness of the orchestra lies in the possibility of combining members of different groups, each contributing its appropriate timbre to the rich total effect. See ORCHESTRATION.

orchestra bells. = GLOCKENSPIEL.

orchestra circle. A parquet circle.

or·ches'tral (ôr·kĕs'trăl; 277), adj. a Of or pertaining to an orchestra; like, suitable for, or performed in or by, an orchestra. b Resembling an orchestra; — said of a tonal effect. c Imitating an orchestral instrument; — used in names of organ stops, such as orchestral oboe, etc. — or·ches'tral·ly, adv.

orchestral horn. Music. = FRENCH HORN a & b.

orchestral organ. Music. See ORGAN, 1 c. orchestral score. See SCORE, 14.

orchestra pit. Theater. A pit underneath the forestage, from which the orchestra plays, or to which it retires.

or'ches·trate (ôr'kĕs·trāt; ôr'kĭs-), v. t. & i.; -TRAT'ED (-trāt'ĕd; -ĭd; 119); -TRAT'ING (-trāt'ĭng). To compose or arrange (music) for an orchestra; to provide with orchestration. — or'ches·trat'er (-trāt'ĕr), -tra'tor (-trā'tĕr), n.

or'ches·tra'tion (-trā'shŭn), n. 1. Music. The arrangement of music for an orchestra; orchestral treatment of a composition; instrumentation. The science of orchestration treats of the structure, manipulation, compass, and timbre of the orchestral instruments, their effective combination, and the writing of orchestral scores. The essentials of good orchestration are: proper distribution of the harmony to secure the prominence of leading parts, and balance of tone; contrast, as between the different divisions of instruments; variety, as by mixing "tints" or timbres from the different groups; and appropriateness of timbre to the sentiment. Called also instrumentation. 2. Harmonious organization or combination.

or·ches'tric (ôr·kĕs'trĭk), adj. Orchestral.

or·ches'tri·on (-trĭ·ŏn), n. A large music box like an elaborate barrel organ, provided with different stops, imitating a variety of orchestral instruments.

or'chi- (ôr'kĭ-). = ORCHIO- (which see), as in:

orchiectomy	orchilytic	orchioscheocele

or'chic (ôr'kĭk), adj. [Gr. orchis testicle.] Anat. Testicular.

orchid-. = ORCHIDO-, as in or'chi·dal'gi·a, or'chi·dec'tomy, or'chi·di'tis.

Or'chi·da'ce·ae (ôr'kĭ·dā'sē·ē), n. pl. [NL.] Bot. A large family of perennial epiphytic or terrestrial plants, the orchid family, considered the most highly developed of the monocotyledons. They have entire sheathing leaves, sometimes reduced to scales, and usually showy flowers of remarkable structure; the calyx consists of three often petaloid sepals, the corolla of three petals, one of which (the labellum or lip) differs greatly from the others and is often spurred. The one fertile stamen is variously united with the gynoecium into a column; and the pollen is coherent in waxy or powdery masses (pollinia) attached at the base to a viscid gland which adheres to the bodies of visiting insects. The family is noted for the wide variety of its adaptations to cross-pollination. The ovary is completely inferior, and the numerous minute seeds are without endosperm, but contain chlorophyll to aid in the development of the embryo. There are about 450 genera and 7,500 species, most abundant in the tropics. Those of temperate regions are mainly terrestrial, with less conspicuous flowers; a large number of the tropical epiphytes are cultivated in greenhouses. Among the more important and familiar genera are Cypripedium, Blephariglottis, Dendrobium, Cattleya, Oncidium, Odontoglossum, etc. Vanilla and Orchis are the only genera of economic interest.

or'chi·da'ceous (-shŭs), adj. a Of, pert. to, or resembling the Orchidaceae or an orchid. b Showy; ostentatious.

Or'chi·da'les (-lēz), n. pl. [NL.] Bot. An order of monocotyledonous plants embracing the Orchidaceae and Burmanniaceae. They have irregular flowers, inferior compound ovary, and minute seeds without endosperm.

orchid family. The Orchidaceae.

orchid fly. = CATTLEYA FLY.

or'chid·ist (ôr'kĭ·dĭst), n. A cultivator of orchids.

or'chi·do- (ôr'kĭ·dō-), orchid-. A combining form: a Med. & Surg. From orchidos, erron. gen. for Greek orchis, testicle. b Bot. Used for orchid, as in or'chi·do·ma'ni·a. For words below see the word or element with which orchido- is combined.

2. According to medieval angelology, any of the nine grades of angels; also, any similar class of beings.

3. A rank or class in society; a group or division of men in the same social position; a specific rank in the state; also, a group of persons who, by reason of profession, special interests, or the like, are regarded as a distinct class; as, the higher and lower orders of society; the order of baronets; the military order.

with about twenty channelings of nearly semielliptical section and separated by sharp arrises; having no base, and a capital with the echinus — of a peculiar eccentric curve in profile — supporting a square unmolded abacus, and separated from the shaft by one or more annulets. The Doric style was prevalent in Greek temples, and in those of the Periclean age shows a remarkable blending of solidity with refinement of lines and proportions. The Ionic order has paired spiral volutes on the front and rear of its capital, with the spiral fillets continued across the face under the abacus, and the volutes united at the sides by scrolls. Its columns are generally about nine diameters high, with 24 flutings separated by fillets; they rest on bases of various styles, esp. the Attic. Its entablature has the architrave, typically in three bands, separated by a rich molding from the sculptured frieze. The Corinthian is the most ornate of the orders. Except for the capital, it is similar to the Ionic. Its capital is bell-shaped, and in typical examples is enveloped with rows of acanthus leaves, with volutes under the projecting angles of its abacus, and helices under the anthemion or other ornament at the concaved middle of the abacus. The shaft is typically fluted like the Ionic, and rests on the Attic base. The Corinthian was the latest of the Greek orders to come into favor. Its richly

18. Arch. a A style of building. b Classical Arch. A type of column and entablature, viewed, with its forms, proportions, and mode of decoration, as the unit of a style. The Greeks used three orders, the Doric, Ionic, and Corinthian. Of these the oldest and the simplest in outline, is the Doric, having its column shaft slightly convex, fluted decorative character led to its wide use by the Romans, and by the architects of the Renaissance. To the Greek orders the Romans added the Tuscan, a crude Doric with unfluted columns on bases, few and bold moldings, and general lack of ornament; and the Composite, a modified Corinthian, having the capital commonly with eight volutes, adopted (with ovolo between each pair) from the Ionic and grafted on the Corinthian bell. They used the Doric and Ionic in modified forms, lacking the refinement of the Greek. Renaissance writers on architecture recognized five orders as orthodox or classical, the (Roman) Doric, the Ionic, Tuscan, Corinthian, and Composite. See Illust. below. c Any columnar treatment based on the classic orders. d Obs. A system of intercolumniation (which see).

19. Biol. A category of classification ranking above the family and below the class. In botany, order or natural order was formerly exclusively applied to the category now more appropriately called family. The suffix denoting the latter is -aceae, while the order of modern taxonomists has the suffix -ales. Thus the order Rosales is made up of the Rosaceae (rose family), Fabaceae (pea family), Caesalpiniaceae (senna family), Mimosaceae (mimosa family), etc. Order and family are still used interchangeably by some botanists. In zoology no distinctive suffix for names of orders has been adopted.

O'res·te'ia (ō'rĕs·tē'yä; -tī'ä), n. [Gr.] A poem narrating the story of Orestes; esp., the dramatic trilogy written by Aeschylus. The first of the Aeschylean dramas is Agamemnon. It depicts the return of Agamemnon from Troy and his murder by Clytemnestra with the aid of Aegisthus. The opening chorus sketches the bloody history of the house of Atreus and narrates the sacrifice of Iphigenia, which Clytemnestra makes the justification of her act. The Choephoroi depicts the return of Orestes, his encounter with Electra, with whom he plots the death of Clytemnestra and Aegisthus, both of whom he slays. He is then driven forth, maddened, by the Erinyes, aroused to vengeance by his matricide. The Eumenides depicts Orestes's trial at the Areopagus, his purification by Apollo, and the conversion of the Erinyes into the Eumenides.

or'gan (ôr'găn), n. [OF. and L.; OF. organe, fr. L. organum, pl. organa, fr. Gr. organon. See WORK; cf. ORGUE.] 1. a Archaic. One of various musical instruments, esp. of wind; — now found chiefly in Scriptural passages or allusions. b A wind instrument, in its complete modern form the largest, most powerful, and most varied in resources of musical instruments, consisting of from one to many sets of pipes, sounded by compressed air, and played by means of one or more keyboards; a pipe organ; — formerly called also organs or a pair of organs. The modern organ has the following features: (1) The console, or key desk, at which the organist sits, consisting of the manual and pedal boards, the stop knobs (or other apparatus for controlling the stops), the couplers, the combination pedals and pistons, the swell pedals, indicators of various sorts, and other mechanical accessories. (2) The action, by means of which the movement of keys, stop knobs, and other devices in the console is transmitted to the pipes, wind chests, and other parts of the organ. Three main types are in use, the tracker action (becoming obsolete), the tubular-pneumatic and the electro-pneumatic (rapidly becoming universal, esp. in England and America). (3) The pipework, which comprises various sets of metal and wooden flue and reed pipes, that differ in the quality and pitch of their tones according to their shape, size, material, etc., and that are arranged in sets called stops or registers. Stops are most often set in groups upon single wind chests, each of such groups with its keyboard constituting a partial organ or division (see def. 6). (4) The wind supply, which comprises an arrangement of bellows or blower and various conduits for conveying the compressed air (called wind) to a storage bellows or air reservoir and thence to the various wind chests on which the pipes are placed. The wind chests contain the mechanism, controlled by the keys, for causing the individual pipes to sound. Each stop knob (or other device) controls the admission of air to a single set or register of pipes (stop). The organ in its primitive form, according to Josephus, was in use in the Jewish temple at least a century before the Christian era. The hydraulic organ (hydraulus), in which water was used as a means of compressing the air, was a popular instrument in the days of imperial Rome and was used at the various games, combats, etc. In its more or less developed form the organ has been in use in the church since the seventh century. Its use is now common in theater and concert hall as well as in church. In volume, variety of tonal color, and dynamic control the modern organ approaches the orchestra in effect. c One of the groups of stops or registers with their actions and usually an independent keyboard, constituting a division of a pipe organ (see under b above). The smaller organs usually consist of at least two such divisions, but the larger instruments have three, four, five, or even more, their names being as follows: (1) The great organ, which, in general, has the pipes of largest scale and loudest tone. (2) The swell organ, of which the pipes are enclosed in a box or chamber with side shutters that are opened or closed by means of the swell pedal in the console, for louder or softer effects. (3) The choir organ, which has stops of a lighter and softer character especially suited for accompaniments and which is usually enclosed in a swell box. (4) The solo, or orchestral, organ which consists largely of stops having an individual character suitable for solo effects. (5) The echo organ, which is situated at a considerable distance from the rest of the instrument, and contains soft stops for echo effects. It is often played from the solo organ manual. (6) The pedal organ, which has mostly deep-toned stops suitable for bass parts and played with the feet. There are also to be found in various instruments certain special organs whose function or placing is indicated in their names, such as: the altar organ or chancel organ, an accompanying division in the chancel of churches in which the main part of the organ is at the end of the nave; the antiphonal organ, louder than the echo organ but, like it, placed at a distance from the main division, for "answering" effects; the gallery organ, a division (or divisions) of an organ, sometimes the main part, located at the end of the nave in a gallery. Some of the largest modern organs have a floating organ, a division consisting most frequently of string tone stops and capable of being played from any manual. d A reed organ or harmonium. e One of various cruder instruments, as the barrel organ. f = ORGANUM, 2.

or·gan'i·cism (ôr·găn'ĭ·sĭz'm), n. A doctrine which emphasizes the importance of organic relations; specif.: a Med. The theory that disease is always associated with a material lesion of an organ. b Biol. & Philos. The doctrine that life and living processes are the manifestation of an activity possible only in virtue of the state of autonomous organization of the system, rather than because of its individual components; — opposed to mechanism and to vitalism. c Sociol. The conception of society as a superindividual organism constituted of ideas, beliefs, and volitions, or as an entity analogous to a biological organism. — or·gan'i·cis'mal (-sĭz'măl), adj. — or·gan'i·cist (ôr·găn'ĭ·sĭst), n. & adj. — or·gan'i·cis'tic (-sĭs'tĭk), adj.

or'gan·ic'i·ty (ôr'găn·ĭs'ĭ·tĭ), n. [See -ICITY.] The quality of being organic.

organic mechanism. Philos. A theory, adduced by A. N. Whitehead, that the ultimate entities of nature, though governed by mechanical principles, are not inert, but are enduring structures of activity, and that the nature of each reflects its organic relations with the larger structures of nature into which it enters.

organic memory. Permanent modification of an organism by stimulation and activity; also, mneme.

organic selection. Biol. A theory or process by which acquired individual characters are considered to protect congenital variations while these are still too insufficiently developed to be perpetuated by natural selection.

organic sensation. Psychol. Any sensation, as hunger, nausea, etc., arising from internal organs.

organic stricture. Med. A stricture of a natural passage caused by structural changes in its walls.

organic unity. The unity of any whole, such as an organism, in which the parts are mutually dependent and intrinsically related. See ORGANISM, 4, UNITY.

or·gan·if'ic (ôr'găn·ĭf'ĭk), adj. [organ + -fic.] Making an organic or organized structure; producing an organism; acting through, or resulting from, organs.

or·gan'i·fy (ôr·găn'ĭ·fī), v. t. [L. organum (see ORGAN) + -fy.] Photog. To treat with a solution of an organic substance, esp. in an obsolete process of treating collodion dry plates with albumen or gelatin, etc. — or·gan'i·fi'er (-fī'ĕr), n.

or'gan·ism (ôr'găn·ĭz'm), n. [Cf. F. organisme.] 1. Organic structure; organization. Now Rare.

2. A person regarded merely as a biological specimen.

3. Biol. An individual constituted to carry on the activities of life by means of parts or organs more or less separate in function but mutually dependent; any living being.

4. Philos. Any thing or structure composed of distinct parts and so constituted that the functioning of the parts and their relation to one another is governed by their relation to the whole; according to Kant, a being in which every part is at once a means and an end to every other.

or'gan·is'mic (-ĭz'mĭk), adj. Consisting of or characterized by organisms; organismal.

or'gan·ist (ôr'găn·ĭst), n. [Cf. F. organiste.] 1. Music. a A player on an organ. b Obs. An organ builder. c Medieval Music. One who organizes (sense 3).

2. A tanager of the genus Tanagra; esp., T. musica of Haiti.

or'gan·is'tic (-ĭs'tĭk), adj. Of or pertaining to the organ or organists.

or'gan·is'trum (ôr'găn·ĭs'trŭm), n. [NL. See ORGAN.] A kind of large hurdy-gurdy.

or·gan'i·ty (ôr·găn'ĭ·tĭ), n. Organism. Rare.

or'gan·i·za'tion (ôr'găn·ĭ·zā'shŭn; -ĭ·zā'shŭn; 277), n. [MIL. organizatio.] 1. Act or process of organizing, whether as a living structure or as any systematic whole; as, the organization of an army or a government.

2. State or manner of being organized; organic structure; purposive systematic arrangement; constitution.

What is organization but the connection of parts in and for a whole, so that each part is, at once, end and means? Coleridge.

or'gan·iz'er (ôr'găn·īz'ĕr), n. One who organizes.

organ ling. A kind of large ling. Obs.

organ loft. A loft or gallery where an organ stands.

organo-. A combining form, Greek organo-, from organon, meaning organ, denoting relation to, or connection with, an organ or organs, as in organology; also, Chem., organic, as in organogen, organometallic.

or'ga·no·chor'di·um (ôr'gä·nō·kôr'dĭ·ŭm), n. [NL., fr. organo- + Gr. chordē string.] Music. A combined pipe organ and piano devised by Abbé Vogler.

or'gan of Bo·ja'nus (bō·jā'nŭs; bō·yä'nōōs). [After L. H. Bojanus (1776–1827), Ger. anatomist.] Zool. One of a pair of nephridial excretory organs of bivalve mollusks, situated on each side of the body just below the pericardium.

or'gan of Cor'ti (kôr'tē). [After A. Corti (1822–1876), It. anatomist.] Anat. A complex epithelial structure in the cochlea, which in mammals is the chief if not the only part of the ear by which sound is directly perceived. It rests on the internal surface of the basilar membrane, and contains two spiral rows of minute rods (the rods of Corti) which arch over a spiral passage, the tunnel of Corti. To the inner side of these rows (nearest the axis of the cochlea) is a single row of columnar hair cells (see HAIR CELL), and to the outer side are several rows. The bases of the hair cells are surrounded by arborizations derived from the ganglion cells of the ganglion spirale of the cochlear nerve. Called also spiral organ and organon spirale.

or'gan of Gi'ral·dès' (zhē'räl'dĕs'). [After C. C. J. A. Giraldès (1808–75), French physician.] Anat. The paradidymis.

or'gan of Ro'sen·mül'ler (rō'zĕn·mül'ĕr). [After J. C. Rosenmüller (1771–1820), Ger. anatomist.] Anat. The epoöphoron.

or·gan'o·gel (ôr·găn'ō·jĕl), n. [organo- + gel.] Chem. A jelly formed by the coagulation of an organic substance.

or·gan'o·gen (-jĕn), n. [organo- + -gen.] Chem. Any one of the elements, esp. carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, and nitrogen, which are common ingredients of organic compounds.

or'ga·no·gen'e·sis (ôr'gä·nō·jĕn'ĕ·sĭs), n. [NL., fr. organo- + -genesis.] Biol. The origin and development of organs in plants and animals. — or'ga·no·ge·net'ic (-jē·nĕt'ĭk), adj.

or'ga·no·gen'ic (-jĕn'ĭk), adj. [organo- + -genic.] Petrog. Derived from organic substances.

or'ga·nog'e·ny (ôr'gä·nŏj'ĕ·nĭ), n. Biol. Organogenesis. — or'ga·nog'e·nist (-nĭst), n. — or'ga·no·gen'ic (-nō·jĕn'ĭk), adj.

or'ga·nog'ra·phy (-nŏg'rä·fĭ), n. [organo- + -graphy; cf. F. organographie.] 1. A description of instruments. Obs.

2. Biol. Description of the organs of animals or plants, esp. the externally recognizable members of the plant body regarded as organs. Cf. MORPHOLOGY, 1.

— or'ga·no·graph'ic (-nō·grăf'ĭk), adj. — or'ga·no·graph'i·cal (-ĭ·kăl), adj. — or'ga·nog'ra·phist (-nŏg'rä·fĭst), n.

or'gan·oid (ôr'găn·oid), adj. [See -OID.] Med. & Zool. Resembling an organ. — n. Zool. An organelle.

or'ga·no·lep'tic (ôr'gä·nō·lĕp'tĭk), adj. [F. organoleptique, fr. Gr. organon an organ + lambainein to lay hold of.] Physiol. a Affecting or making an impression upon an organ or the whole organism. b Capable of receiving an impression.

or'ga·nol'o·gy (-nŏl'ō·jĭ), n. [organo- + -logy; cf. F. organologie.] 1. The science of organs or of anything considered as an organic structure; also, splanchnology.

2. Phrenology.

3. Biol. The study of the organs of animals and plants. — or'ga·no·log'ic (-nō·lŏj'ĭk), adj. — or'ga·no·log'i·cal (-ĭ·kăl), adj. — or'ga·nol'o·gist (-nŏl'ō·jĭst), n.

or'ga·no·me·tal'lic (-nō·mē·tăl'ĭk), adj. [organo- + metallic.] Chem. Pertaining to or designating an organic compound of a metal or, less often, of a metalloid; specif., designating a compound in which the metal is attached directly to carbon.

or'ga·non (ôr'gä·nŏn), n.; pl. -NA (-nä), -NONS (-nŏnz). [Gr. See ORGAN.] 1. A bodily organ. Obs.

2. Any instrumentality for acquisition of knowledge.

3. Philos. A method for scientific or philosophic procedure or investigation; also, a body of methodological doctrine; — a term adopted from Aristotelian writers.

or'ga·non'o·my (-nŏn'ō·mĭ), n. [organo- + Gr. nomos law.] The laws that control organic life, or the study of these laws. — or'ga·no·nom'ic (-nō·nŏm'ĭk), adj.

‖or'ga·non spi·ra'le (spī·rā'lē). [NL.] The organ of Corti.

or·gan'o·nym (ôr·găn'ō·nĭm), n. [See ORGANONYMY.] Biol. The technical name of an organ.

or'ga·non'y·my (ôr'gä·nŏn'ĭ·mĭ), n. [organo- + Gr. onyma, for onoma, a name.] Biol. The nomenclature of organs. — or'ga·non'y·mal (-măl), adj. — or'ga·no·nym'ic (-nō·nĭm'ĭk), adj.

or'ga·nop'a·thy (-nŏp'ä·thĭ), n. [organo- + -pathy.] Med. Disease of an organ or organs; organic disease.

or·gan'o·phone (ôr·găn'ō·fōn), n. [organo- + -phone.] Music. A kind of harmonium.

or'ga·no·phon'ic (ôr'gä·nō·fŏn'ĭk), adj. [organo- + phonic.] Like an organ in sound; — applied to a kind of vocalizing.

or'ga·noph'y·ly (ôr'gä·nŏf'ĭ·lĭ), n. [organo- + Gr. phylē clan.] Phylogeny of organs.

or'ga·no·plas'tic (-nō·plăs'tĭk), adj. [organo- + -plastic.] Biol. Producing organs.

or'ga·nos'co·py (-nŏs'kō·pĭ), n. [organo- + -scopy.] Examination of the bodily organs; also, phrenology. See ORGAN, 8.

or·gan'o·sol (ôr·găn'ō·sŏl), n. [organo- + solution.] Phys. Chem. A colloidal solution in which an organic liquid forms the continuous phase.

or'ga·no·ther'a·py (ôr'gä·nō·thĕr'ä·pĭ), n. Also or'ga·no·ther'a·peu'tics (-pū'tĭks). [organo- + -therapy.] Med. Treatment of disease by the administration of portions of certain animal organs or of extracts of them.

or'ga·no·troph'ic (-trŏf'ĭk), adj. [organo- + -trophic.] Biol. Relating to the formation and nutrition of living organs.

or'ga·no·trop'ic (-trŏp'ĭk), adj. [organo- + -tropic.] Biol. Having affinity for the tissues; pertaining to substances that act on the organs of the body. — or'ga·no·trop'i·cal·ly (-ĭ·kăl·ĭ), adv. — or'gan·ot'ro·pism (ôr'găn·ŏt'rō·pĭz'm), n. — or'gan·ot'ro·py (-pĭ), n.

or'gan–pi·an'o, n. A melopiano.

or'gan–pipe' cor'al. Any alcyonarian coral of the genus Tubipora. The skeleton, usually red or purple, consists of a mass of parallel cylindrical tubes united, at intervals only, by horizontal plates. They are found in the tropical parts of the Indian Ocean and Pacific Ocean.

Organ-pipe Coral (Tubipora musica).

organ point. A pedal point.

or'gan·ry (ôr'găn·rĭ), n. [organ + -ry.] Organ music. Rare.

organ stop. = STOP, 18 b.

organ swell. Music. The swell organ. See ORGAN, 1 c.

or'gan·ule (ôr'găn·ūl), n. [Dim. of organ.] Anat. An essential cell or element of an organ.

or'ga·num (ôr'gä·nŭm), n.; pl. -NA (-nä), -NUMS (-nŭmz). [L. See ORGAN.] 1. An organon.

2. Medieval Music. a A voice part accompanying the cantus firmus or melody in parallel motion, usually at a fourth, fifth, or octave above or below. b Part writing or singing of this nature, in two, three, or four parts, being the most primitive form of polyphony; diaphony.

or'gan·zine (ôr'găn·zēn), n. [F. organsin, fr. It. organzino, fr. Urgendj, in Turkestan. Cf. ORGANDIE.] A fine kind of double-thrown silk thread made from the best grades of the raw material. It is used for the warp in silk weaving. See THROW, v. t.

or'gan·zine, v. t. & i.; -ZINED (-zēnd); -ZIN'ING (-zēn'ĭng). [F. organsiner.] To make into, or to make, organzine.

or'gasm (ôr'găz'm), n. [F. orgasme, fr. Gr. orgasmos, fr. organ to swell with moisture, to teem, to lust; akin to Gr. orgē impulse, anger, Skr. ūrjā sap, vigor.] Paroxysmal emotional excitement; also, an instance of it; specif., Physiol., eager or immoderate excitement or action; the state of turgescence of any organ; esp., the culmination of coitus. — or·gas'mic (ôr·găz'mĭk), adj. — or·gas'tic (ôr·găs'tĭk), adj.

or'geat (ôr'zhăt; F. ôr'zhä'), n. [F., fr. Pr. orjat, fr. ordi, orge, barley, fr. L. hordeum.] A sirup into the composition of which, formerly, a decoction of barley entered, but which is now prepared with an emulsion of almonds, — used to flavor beverages or edibles.

or'gi·a (ôr'jĭ·ä), n. pl. [L.] Orgies.

Or'pheus (ôr'fūs; commonly ôr'fē·ŭs), n. [L., fr. Gr. Orpheus.] 1. Gr. Myth. A Thracian poet and musician, whose lyre could charm beasts and make trees and rocks move. According to the prevailing legend, he was son of Apollo and the Muse Calliope. When his wife, Eurydice, died, he descended to Hades, and so pleased Pluto by his music that the god allowed him to lead her back to earth on the condition that he should not look behind him till he reached the upper world. But through the anxiety of love he broke the condition, and Eurydice, who was following him, vanished again among the shades. In his obstinate grief Orpheus withdrew to the wilds of the mountains Rhodope and Haemus, where a troop of Thracian bassarids (maenads) tore him limb from limb. His head was thrown into the river Hebrus, whence it was carried, still sweetly singing, to Lesbos, where it was buried. See ORPHIC.
2. Astron. Cygnus; — an occasional name.

Or'phi·cism (ôr'fĭ·sĭz'm), n. Orphism.

Orphic mysteries. The secret rites and doctrines of the adherents of the interpretation of Dionysiac worship ascribed to Orpheus as founder. The rites included ceremonies of great antiquity and probable savage origin, such as a sacramental feast of raw flesh, putatively the body of Dionysus under the form of Zagreus (which see); they also included the more civilized symbolism characteristic of the Eleusinian mystery (see under ELEUSINIAN, adj.). Their essential import was to teach that the initiate might by pure life and asceticism achieve that mystic identification with the divine nature which the Dionysiacs sought in orgiastic ecstasy and hence might attain immortality. They also (possibly through Egyptian influence; cf. BOOK OF THE DEAD) purported to give instructions for conduct of the soul in the world below. Some of the formulae are preserved in eight Orphic tablets, inscribed plates of gold found in the graves of believers, seven in Italy, one in Crete.

Or'phism (ôr'fĭz'm), n. The religion of the Orphic mysteries.

It comprises numerous robust flies with usually spotted or banded wings and frequently with metallic colors, whose larvae feed on decaying vegetable matter. The typical genus is Or'ta·lis (ôr'tä·lĭs). — or·tal'id (ôr·tăl'ĭd; ôr'tä·lĭd), adj. & n. — or'ta·lid'i·an (ôr'tä·lĭd'ĭ·ăn), n.

Or'ta·lis (ôr'tä·lĭs), n. [NL., fr. Gr. ortalis young bird.] Zool. A genus of guans including the Texan chachalaca and numerous Central and South American species.

or'thal (ôr'thăl), adj. [Gr. orthos straight.] Designating mastication effected by a direct or vertical motion. Cf. PALINAL.

or'thi·an (ôr'thĭ·ăn), adj. [Gr. orthios steep, high-pitched, fr. orthos straight.] Anc. Gr. Music. Designating a style of singing, or a tune, characterized by high pitch.

Or'this (ôr'thĭs), n. [NL., fr. Gr. orthos straight.] Paleontol. A genus of articulate Brachiopoda, abundant in the Paleozoic. It is the type of a family, Or'thi·dae (ôr'thĭ·dē). — or'thid (-thĭd), adj.

Orthis (O.—subgenus Platystrophia-lynx). (⅔) or'thite (ôr'thīt), n. [Gr. orthos straight.] Mineral. Allanite, esp. when occurring in slender prismatic crystals. — or·thit'ic (ôr·thĭt'ĭk), adj.

or'tho- (ôr'thō-), orth-. [Gr. orthos straight; akin to Skr. ūrdhva upright, vardhate grows, causes to grow.] A combining form, Greek ortho-, orth-, from orthos, in its senses straight, upright, right, true; hence, also correct, regular. Specif.: 1. a Straight, as in orthodromy, Orthoptera, orthospermous. b Upright, perpendicular, as in orthognathous, orthopnoea. c Right or true; correct; proper; as in orthodox, orthography, orthotone. d In correct relation, as in orthochromatic. e Denoting a right angle, as in orthoclase, orthodiagonal, orthometric. f Med. Rectification; correction of deformity; as in orthodontia, orthopedics.
2. Chem. A prefix employed: a In naming certain higher forms of hydration (either the highest form or the highest stable form), esp. in the case of acids. Thus, orthoformic acid, $HC(OH)_3$, is distinguished from ordinary formic acid, $HCO(OH)$, and orthophosphoric acid, $OP(OH)_3$, from metaphosphoric acid, $O_2P(OH)$. b In naming certain benzene derivatives or compounds analogous to them in structure, as in orthoxylene, orthoxazine. See BENZENE RING. Abbr. o-. c See NAPHTHALENE.
3. Petrog. A prefix used to indicate: a That a metamorphic rock was originally igneous; as, orthogneiss. Cf. PARA-. b That the feldspar (of a rock) is orthoclase or other potash feldspar; as, or'tho·gran'ite.

or'tho (ôr'thō), adj. = ORTHO-, 2 a; as, ortho position.

or'tho·bi·o'sis (ôr'thō·bī·ō'sĭs), n. [NL., fr. ortho- + -biosis.] Correct living; normal life; living according to proper hygienic and moral principles.

or'tho·bo'rate (-bō'rāt; 181), n. A salt or ester of orthoboric acid.

or'tho·brach'y·ce·phal'ic (-brăk'ĭ·sē·făl'ĭk), adj. Craniol. Being both orthocephalic and brachycephalic.

or'tho·car·bon'ic (ôr'thō·kär·bŏn'ĭk), adj. [ortho- + carbonic.] Chem. Pertaining to or designating a hypothetical acid, $C(OH)_4$, known in the form of its esters, which are prepared by the action of chloropicrin on alcoholates. The ethyl ester, or orthocarbonic ester or ether, $C(OC_2H_5)_4$, is a liquid having a pleasant odor.

or'tho·car'pous (ôr'thō·kär'pŭs), adj. [ortho- + -carpous.] Bot. Having straight fruit.

Or'tho·car'pus (-kär'pŭs), n. [NL., fr. ortho- + -carpus.] Bot. A genus of American herbs, family Scrophulariaceae, with alternate leaves and showy, varicolored flowers. The species are mostly Californian, being known as owl's-clover.

or'tho·cen'ter, or -cen'tre (ôr'thō·sĕn'tĕr), n. [ortho- + center.] Geom. The common intersection of the three altitudes of a triangle, or of the four altitudes of a tetrahedron provided these latter meet in a point. — or'tho·cen'tric (-trĭk), adj.

or'tho·ce·phal'ic (ôr'thō·sē·făl'ĭk), or'tho·ceph'a·lous (-sĕf'ä·lŭs), adj. [ortho- + cephalic, cephalous.] Craniom. Having the relation of the height to the length or breadth of the skull medium. — or'tho·ceph'a·ly (-sĕf'ä·lĭ), n.

or'tho·cer'a·cone (ôr'thō·sĕr'ä·kōn), n. Paleontol. A straight nautiloid shell resembling those of Orthoceras.

Or·thoc'er·as (ôr·thŏs'ĕr·ăs), n. [NL., fr. ortho- + Gr. keras a horn.] Paleontol. A genus of tetrabranchiate Orthoceras (O. duseri), reduced.

cephalopods having a long, nearly or quite straight, tapering, almost smooth and many-chambered, shell. It is the type of a family, Or'tho·ce·rat'i·dae (ôr'thō·sē·răt'ĭ·dē). — Or·thoc'er·an (ôr·thŏs'ĕr·ăn), adj. — or'tho·cer'a·toid (ôr'thō·sĕr'ä·toid), adj.

or'tho·cer'a·tite (ôr'thō·sĕr'ä·tīt), n. [ortho- + Gr. keras, -atos, a horn.] Paleontol. A fossil cephalopod of Orthoceras or allied genus. — or'tho·cer'a·tit'ic (-tĭt'ĭk), adj.

or'tho·chlo'rite (-klō'rīt; 181), n. Mineral. Any distinctly crystalline form of chlorite, as clinochlore; — opposed to leptochlorite.

or'tho·chro·mat'ic (ôr'thō·krō·măt'ĭk), adj. [ortho- + chromatic.] Photog. a Of, pertaining to, or producing, tone values (of light and shade) in a photograph, corresponding to the tones of nature. b Incorrectly, designating a film made sensitive to green, but not to red, light.

orthochromatic erythrocyte. Anat. A red blood corpuscle staining only with acid stains.

or'tho·chro'ma·tize (ôr'thō·krō'mä·tīz), v. t.; -TIZED (-tīzd); -TIZ'ING (-tīz'ĭng). To render orthochromatic.

or'tho·chrome T (ôr'thō·krōm), n. Photog. An isocyanine dye used in sensitizing the green and orange regions of the spectrum. See ISOCYANINE.

or'tho·clase (ôr'thō·klās; -klāz), n. [ortho- + -clase.] Mineral. Common or potash feldspar, usually colorless to white, cream-yellow, or flesh-red. It is monoclinic and orthoclastic. Sodium is often present, replacing the potassium in part. H., 6. Sp. gr., 2.57. See FELDSPAR.

or'tho·clase–ba'salt, n. Petrog. A basaltlike rock containing pyroxene and usually olivine, but with a groundmass of orthoclase.

or'tho·clase–gab'bro, n. Petrog. A coarse gabbrolike rock consisting of labradorite, augite, and interstitial orthoclase.

or'tho·cla'site (-klā'zīt; -sīt), n. [See 1st -ITE, 4.] Petrog. a Any rock, with or without quartz, in which orthoclase is the principal feldspar, as granite, syenite, and rhyolite. b A rock composed almost entirely of orthoclase.

or'tho·clas'tic (-klăs'tĭk), adj. Cryst. Cleaving in directions at right angles to each other; — said esp. of the monoclinic feldspars.

or'tho–cous'in (ôr'thō·kŭz'n), n. One of cousins who are children of two brothers or two sisters; — opp. to cross-cousin.

Orthodox Church. The body of Christians using the Byzantine rite in various languages (see LITURGY, 1) who are in union with the Ecumenical Patriarch and in schism with the Pope; — officially called The Holy Orthodox Catholic Apostolic Eastern Church. The Orthodox Church is the dominant Christian body in Eastern Europe, Asia, and Egypt, and has many representatives in the United States. Before the World War it comprised 16 independent churches; there are now the following eleven (the last five of which [7–11] being offshoots of the first have their dates of independence included): (1) The Great Church, the Patriarchate of Constantinople under the Ecumenical Patriarch. The plenary civil and spiritual authority of the Patriarch in the Turkish Empire (see PHANAR) was restricted by the Treaty of Lausanne (1923) to merely ecclesiastical jurisdiction. (2) Patriarchate of Alexandria, including Egypt, Libya, Arabia, and Nubia, under the patriarch styled Pope, All Holiness, Ecumenical Judge. (3) Patriarchate of Antioch, including Syria, Cilicia, and Mesopotamia. (4) Patriarchate of Jerusalem, comprising Palestine, the French Syrian Protectorate, and Sinai. (5) Church or Monastery of Mt. Sinai with its dependencies forming an autocephalous church. (6) Church of Cyprus composed of the Orthodox Christians of that island. (7) Church of Russia (1589), governed by a Holy Synod. The Patriarchate was restored in 1917. (8) Church of Greece (1850), including the Ionian Islands, Thessaly, and Crete. (9) Church of Bulgaria (1872). (10) Church of Yugoslavia, earlier Serbia (1879), which in 1920 absorbed the formerly autocephalous churches of Karlowitz (1765), the Serbian Church of Hungary, of Czernagora (1756), the national church of Montenegro, and of Bosnia-Herzegovina (1890). (11) Church of Rumania (1885), which has absorbed the once autocephalous churches of Hermannstadt, the Rumanian Church of Hungary, and of Czernowitz, the church of the Orthodox Ruthenians of Bucovina. The churches of Georgia and the Ukraine proclaimed their independence in 1920. The proclamation has not been confirmed by the Ecumenical Patriarch. An autocephalous church was proclaimed in Albania (1922) to which the patriarch in Constantinople refused recognition but which is governed by a Holy Synod constituted in 1929. All these various churches constitute one body in communion with one another, and except Bulgaria, with the Ecumenical Patriarch. They have the same faith, the same canon law, and all accept the first seven Ecumenical Councils. Though schismatics in the eyes of the Western Church their orders and sacraments are looked on by the latter as valid. They have seven sacraments, venerate the saints, and revere icons, and they have many monasteries. They reject the supremacy of the Pope and exclude the filioque from the Creed. They have a married clergy (bishops are celibates chosen from the monasteries) and they administer communion in both species. A body, called usually American Orthodox Catholic Church, was incorporated in Massachusetts in 1927 with the aim of uniting the members of all the Orthodox churches in America under one North American Holy Synod.

or'tho·graph (ôr'thō·grăf; 83), n. [ortho- + -graph.] Arch. An orthographic projection, sometimes partly in section, esp. of a building.

or·thog'ra·pher (ôr·thŏg'rə·fẽr), n. One versed in orthography; one who spells correctly.

or'tho·graph'ic (ôr'thō·grăf'ĭk), or'tho·graph'i·cal (-ĭ·kăl), adj. 1. [See ORTHOGRAPHY.] Of or pertaining to orthography; also, correct in spelling.
2. [See ORTHOGRAPH.] Geom. Of or pertaining to perpendicular lines or right angles.
— or'tho·graph'i·cal·ly, adv.

orthographic pro'jection. Projection in which the projecting lines are perpendicular to the plane of projection. In mechanical drawing, the two vertical planes are revolved about their respective lines of intersection with the horizontal plane so as to show all three views in a single plane, the plane of the paper.

Orthographic Projection.

or·thog'ra·phist (ôr·thŏg'rə·fĭst), n. A specialist in orthography.

or·thog'ra·phize (-fīz), v. t. & i.; -PHIZED (-fīzd); -PHIZ'ING (-fīz'ĭng). To spell correctly or according to usage; to correct in regard to spelling; to spell.

or·thog'ra·phy (-fĭ), n.; pl. -PHIES (-fĭz). [ME. ortographie, fr. OF. ortographie, fr. L. orthographia, fr. Gr. orthographia, fr. orthographos writing correctly, fr. orthos right + graphein to write. See ORTHO-; -GRAPH.]
1. Art of writing words with the proper letters, according to standard usage; correct spelling; also, mode of spelling; as, vicious orthography.
2. The part of grammar which treats of the letters and of the art of spelling.
3. A drawing in correct projection, esp. an elevation.

or·thol'o·gy (ôr·thŏl'ō·jĭ), n. [Gr. orthologia, fr. orthos right + logos speech.] Art of using words correctly. — or·thol'o·ger (-jẽr), or'tho·lo'gi·an (ôr'thō·lō'jĭ·ăn), n. — or'tho·log'i·cal (ôr'thō·lŏj'ĭ·kăl), adj.

or'tho·me·top'ic (ôr'thō·mē·tŏp'ĭk), adj. [ortho- + metopic.] Characterized by a vertical forehead, as most women and children of the white and yellow races.

or·thom'et·ric (ôr'thō·mĕt'rĭk), adj. [See ORTHO-; -METRIC.] Cryst. Having the axes at right angles to one another; — said of crystals or crystalline forms.

or·thom'e·try (ôr·thŏm'ē·trĭ), n. [ortho- + -metry.] Art of correct versification. Rare.

Or'tho·nec'ti·da (ôr'thō·nĕk'tĭ·dä), n. pl. [NL., fr. Gr. orthos straight + nēktos swimming.] Zool. A small group of minute parasitic animals of doubtful relationship (see MESOZOA), differing from the Dicyemida in having a number of internal or endodermal cells. The chief genus is Rhopalura.

or·thop'a·thy (ôr·thŏp'ə·thĭ), n. [ortho- + -pathy.] Treatment of illness without drugs. — or'tho·path (ôr'·thō·păth), n. — or'tho·path'ic (-păth'ĭk), adj. — or'tho·path'i·cal·ly (-ĭ·kăl·ĭ), adv.

or'tho·pe'di·a, or'tho·pae'di·a (ôr'thō·pē'dĭ·ə), n. [NL.] Orthopedics.

or'tho·pe'dic, or'tho·pae'dic (-pē'dĭk), adj. Also -di·cal (-dĭ·kăl). Med. Pertaining or relating to, or employed in, orthopedics. — -di·cal·ly, adv.

or'tho·pe'dics, or'tho·pae'dics (-pē'dĭks), n. [ortho- + Gr. pais, paidos, a child.] Med. Correction or prevention of deformities, esp. in children. See -ICS.

or'tho·pe'dist, or'tho·pae'dist (ôr'thō·pē'dĭst), n. Med. One who practices orthopedics.

or'tho·pe'dy, or'tho·pae'dy (ôr'thō·pē'dĭ), n. [F. orthopédie.] Med. Orthopedics.

or·thoph'o·ny (ôr·thŏf'ō·nĭ), n. [ortho- + -phony.] Art of correct articulation; voice training. — or'tho·phon'ic (ôr'thō·fŏn'ĭk), adj. or'tho·pho'ri·a (ôr'thō·fō'rĭ·ä; 181), n. [NL. See ORTHO-; -PHOROUS.] Med. Normal condition of balance of the ocular muscles of the two eyes, in which their visual lines meet at the object toward which they are directed. — or'tho·phor'ic (-fŏr'ĭk), adj.

or'tho·phos'phate (-fŏs'fāt), n. Chem. A salt or ester of orthophosphoric acid.

or'tho·phos·phor'ic (-fŏs·fôr'ĭk), adj. [ortho- + phosphoric.] Chem. Pertaining to or designating ordinary phosphoric acid, H_3PO_4; — distinguished from metaphosphoric, etc. See ORTHO, 2 a; PHOSPHORIC ACID, 1.

or'tho·phyre (ôr'thō·fīr), n. [orthoclase + -phyre.] Petrog. A feldspathic porphyry consisting of a compact groundmass of alkalic feldspar with embedded crystals, chiefly of orthoclase, but no quartz. It occurs in intrusions such as dikes, sheets, etc.

or'tho·phy'ric (-fī'rĭk), adj. Petrog. Relating to a texture found in certain trachytes and orthophyres in which the feldspars have quadratic or short rectangular cross sections.

or'tho·pin'a·coid (-pĭn'ə·koid), n. [ortho- + pinacoid.] Cryst. See PINACOID. — or'tho·pin'a·coi'dal (-koi'dăl), adj. or'tho·pla'sy (ôr'thō·plā'sĭ), n. [ortho- + -plasy.] Biol. The operation of organic selection as a factor in determinate or orthogenetic evolution. See ORGANIC SELECTION.

or'thop·ne'a, or'thop·noe'a (ôr'thŏp·nē'ä), n. [L. orthopnoea, fr. Gr. orthopnoia, fr. orthos straight, right + pnein to breathe.] Med. A morbid condition in which respiration can be performed only in an erect posture.

or'thop·ne'ic, or'thop·noe'ic (-ĭk), adj. Med. Pertaining to or affected with orthopnoea. — n. An orthopnoeic person.

or'tho·prax'y (ôr'thō·prăk'sĭ), n. Also or'tho·prax'is (-prăk'sĭs). [ortho- + Gr. praxis a doing.] a Right action or practice. b Med. The treatment of deformities in the body by mechanical appliances; orthopedic surgery.

or'tho·prism (ôr'thō·prĭz'm), n. [ortho- + prism.] Cryst. See PRISM.

or'tho·psy·chi'a·try (-sĭ·kī'ə·trĭ; -psī-; 205), n. [ortho- + psychiatry.] Prophylactic psychiatry, concerned especially with incipient mental and behavioral disorders in childhood and youth. — or'tho·psy·chi·at'ric (-sĭ'kĭ·ăt'rĭk), -at'ri·cal (-rĭ·kăl), adj. — or'tho·psy·chi'a·trist (-sĭ·kī'ə·trĭst), n.

or·thop'ter (ôr·thŏp'tẽr), n. [F. orthoptère, fr. Gr. orthos straight + pteron wing.] Aeronautics. A flying machine propelled by flapping of wings; a mechanical bird.

or·thop'ter (ôr·thŏp'tẽr), n. An orthopteron.

Or·thop'ter·a (ôr·thŏp'tẽr·ä), n. pl. [NL., fr. ortho- + Gr. pteron feather, wing.] Zool. An order of insects comprising the grasshoppers, locusts, crickets, cockroaches, Mantidae, Phasmatidae, and in some classifications the earwigs, but more recently restricted to the grasshoppers, locusts, and crickets. Their mouth parts are fitted for biting, and there are typically two pairs of wings, of which the first pair are coriaceous and much narrower than the thin, transparent second pair, which fold longitudinally like a fan. Many are wingless. The Orthoptera undergo an incomplete metamorphosis. The group is divided into two chief divisions, Cursoria and Saltatoria (which see). See INSECTA, Table.
— or·thop'ter·an (-ăn), adj. & n. — -ter·ous (-ŭs), adj.

or·thop'ter·ist (-ĭst), n. An orthopterologist.

or·thop'ter·oid (ôr·thŏp'tẽr·oid), adj. Zool. Resembling the Orthoptera (in the broad sense). — n. An orthopteroid insect.

Or·thop'ter·oi'dea (-oi'dē·ä), n. pl. [NL.] Paleontol. A group of extinct insects (order Palaeodictyoptera) whose fragmentary remains suggest relationship with the Orthoptera. — or·thop'ter·oid (ôr·thŏp'tẽr·oid), adj. & n.

or·thop'ter·ol'o·gy (-ŏl'ō·jĭ), n. [Orthoptera + -logy.] The study of, or a treatise on, the Orthoptera. — or·thop'·ter·o·log'i·cal (-ō·lŏj'ĭ·kăl), adj. — or·thop'ter·ol'o·gist (-ŏl'ō·jĭst), n.

or·thop'ter·on (ôr·thŏp'tẽr·ŏn), n. [NL.] Zool. One of the Orthoptera.

or·thop'tic (-tĭk), adj. [orth- + optic.] 1. Med. Pertaining to, characterized by, or securing, normal binocular vision; as, orthoptic exercises, in which the ocular muscles are exercised by means of prisms or forced movements of the eyes in order to correct ocular deviation.
2. Math. Of or pertaining to mutually perpendicular tangents to a given curve, esp. to the locus of their intersections (called orthoptic curve). Cf. ISOPTIC.

or'tho·pyr'a·mid (ôr'thō·pĭr'ə·mĭd), n. [ortho- + pyramid.] Cryst. A pyramid in the monoclinic system, lying between the orthodomes and the zone of unit pyramids.

or'tho·py·rox'ene (-pī·rŏk'sēn), n. Mineral. Any one of the orthorhombic pyroxenes. Cf. CLINOPYROXENE.

or'tho·rhom'bic (-rŏm'bĭk), adj. [ortho- + rhombic.] Cryst. Pert. to or designating the system (orthorhombic system) of crystallization which has three unequal axes at right angles to each other; trimetric. See CRYSTALLIZATION.

Or·thor'rha·pha (ôr·thôr'ə·fə), n. pl. [NL. See ORTHO-; -RHAPHY.] Zool. A large suborder of Diptera in which the pupa case opens by a T-shaped opening behind the head or by a transverse slit between the seventh and eighth abdominal segments. It usually includes the Nematocera and many of the Brachycera but is sometimes restricted to only the more primitive families of Brachycera. — or·thor'rha·phous (-fŭs), adj. — or·thor'rha·phy (-fĭ), n.

or'tho·scope (ôr'thō·skōp), n. [ortho- + -scope.] 1. Med., etc. a An instrument for examining the superficial parts of the eye, esp. the iris. It is usually designed so that the cornea is in contact with water, which neutralizes the corneal refraction. b An instrument for measurements on the surface of the skull.
2. Photog. An orthoscopic lens.

or'tho·scop'ic (-skŏp'ĭk), adj. Optics. Giving an image in correct or normal proportions; giving a flat field of view.

or'those (ôr'thōs), n. [orth- + -ose.] Mineral. Orthoclase.

or'tho·si·lic'ic (ôr'thō·sĭ·lĭs'ĭk), adj. See SILICIC ACID.

or·tho'sis (ôr·thō'sĭs), n. [NL., fr. orth- + -osis.] Psychol. Any corrective treatment of maladjusted or neurotic individuals.

or'tho·site (ôr'thō·sīt), n. [See ORTHOCLASE; -ITE.] Petrog. A granular igneous rock composed essentially of orthoclase.

or'tho·so·mat'ic (-sō·măt'ĭk), adj. [ortho- + somatic.] Zool. Having the body straight, as certain insect larvae.

or'tho·sper'mous (-spûr'mŭs), adj. [ortho- + Gr. sperma seed.] Bot. Having the seeds straight, as certain umbellifers; — opposed to coelospermous.

or'tho·stat'ic (-stăt'ĭk), adj. [ortho- + -static.] Of, pert. to, or caused by, erect posture; also, standing upright.

orthostatic albuminuria. Med. A form of albuminuria occurring only when the person is in the upright position and disappearing when he lies down for a short time.

or·thos'ti·chous (ôr·thŏs'tĭ·kŭs), adj. [See ORTHOSTICHY.] In phyllotaxy, straight-ranked; arranged in vertical ranks.

or·thos'ti·chy (ôr·thŏs'tĭ·kĭ), n.; pl. -CHIES (-kĭz). [ortho- + Gr. stichos row.] Bot. In phyllotaxis, a vertical line in which lies a rank or row of leaves or scales on an axis, or the arrangement of leaves or scales in such lines. Cf. PARASTICHY, and see PHYLLOTAXY.

or'tho·style (ôr'thō·stīl), n. [ortho- + Gr. stylos column.] Arch. An arrangement of columns in a straight row. — adj. Of, pertaining to, or designating, such an arrangement.

or'tho·sub'sti·tut'ed (-sŭb'stĭ·tūt'ĕd; -ĭd; 119), adj. Org. Chem. Substituted in the ortho position.

or'tho·tec'tic (-tĕk'tĭk), adj. [ortho- + L. tectum, past part. of tegere to enclose.] Geol. Designating or pertaining to processes, or to the results of processes, that are purely and directly magmatic, as the segregation of an ore body from molten material or magma.

or·thot'ic (ôr·thŏt'ĭk), adj. Orthostatic.

orthotomic circle. Geom. The circle that cuts three given circles at right angles.

or'tho·for'mic, n. Chem. See ORTHO, 2 a.

or·thog'a·my (ôr·thŏg'ə·mĭ), n. [ortho- + -gamy.] = AUTOGAMY. — or·thog'a·mous (-mŭs), adj.

or'tho·gneiss', n. Petrog. See ORTHO-, 3; GNEISS.

or·thog'ra·fer, or'tho·graf'ic, or'tho·graf'i·cal, or'tho·graf'y. Orthographer, etc. Raf. Sp.

or'tho·hy'dro·gen, n. Chem. See ORTHO-, HYDROGEN.

or'tho·or'sel·lin'ic, n. See ORTHO-. [See 2d PERIODIC.]

or'tho·phen'yl·ene, n. Chem. See PHENYLENE.

or'tho·plum'bate (ôr'thō·plŭm'·bāt), n., or'tho·plum'bic ac'id (-blĭk). See PLUMBIC ACID.

Or·thop'o·da (ôr·thŏp'ō·də), n. pl. [NL., fr. ortho- + -poda.] Paleontol. Syn. of ORNITHISCHIA. — or'tho·pod, n. & adj.

or'tho·qui·none', n. See QUINONE.

Or·thor'ha·pha, n. pl. See ORTHORRHAPHA, etc. [Chem. See SEMIDINE.]

or'tho·sem'i·dine, n. Also -din. Chem. See TOLIDINE. [TOLUIC.]

or'tho·sil'i·cate, n. Chem. See SILICATE.

or'tho·ti·tan'ic ac'id. Chem. See TITANIC ACID.

or'tho·tol'i·dine, n. Also -din. Chem. See TOLIDINE. [TOLUIC.]

or'tho·to·lu'ic, adj. Chem. See or'tho·to·lu'i·dine, n. Also -din. Chem. See TOLUIDINE.

orthotomic co-ordinates. See 3d CO-ORDINATE, 2.

or'tho·tone (ôr'thō·tōn), adj. [Gr. orthotonos with the right accent, fr. orthos straight, right + tonos tone, accent.] Gr. Gram. Having or retaining an independent accent; not enclitic or proclitic; — said esp. of certain indefinite pronouns and adverbs when used interrogatively, which otherwise are ordinarily enclitic. — n. An orthotone word.

or'tho·tone, v. t. To accent; to pronounce as an orthotone.

or'tho·to·ne'sis (-tō·nē'sĭs), n. [NL., fr. Gr. orthotonēsis.] Pronunciation as an orthotone. — or'tho·ton'ic (-tŏn'ĭk), adj.

or·thot'o·nus (ôr·thŏt'ō·nŭs), n. [NL., fr. ortho- + Gr. tonos tension.] Med. Tetanic spasm characterized by rigid straightness of the body.

or·thot'ro·pal (ôr·thŏt'rō·păl), adj. Bot. Orthotropous.

or·thot'ro·pism (ôr·thŏt'rō·pĭz'm), n. [ortho- + -tropism.] Plant Physiol. Vertical growth; the tendency to elongate vertically, as most primary stems and roots. Cf. PLAGIOTROPISM. — or'tho·trop'ic (ôr'thō·trŏp'ĭk), adj.

or·thot'ro·pous (ôr·thŏt'rō·pŭs), adj. [ortho- + Gr. trepein to turn.] Bot. a Having the nucellus straight, so that the chalaza, hilum, and micropyle are in the same axial line; — applied to certain ovules, as those of Polygonaceae. b = HOMOTROPOUS. c = ORTHOTROPIC.

or·thot'ro·py (ôr·thŏt'rō·pĭ), n. [ortho- + -tropy.] Bot. Condition of being orthotropous.

or'tho·type (ôr'thō·tīp), n. [ortho- + -type.] A genotype (sense 1) designated in the first publication of a generic name.

or'tho·ty'pous (ôr'thō·tī'pŭs; ôr·thŏt'ĭ·pŭs), adj. Mineral Having a perpendicular cleavage.

or'tho·van'a·date (ôr'thō·văn'ā·dāt), n. Chem. A salt of orthovanadic acid.

or'tho·ve·ra'tric (-vē·rā'trĭk; -răt'-), adj. See VERATRIC, adj.

or'thron (ôr'thrŏn), n. Also or'thros (-thrŏs), n. [Gr. orthros dawn.] Eastern Ch. The morning office, somewhat corresponding to the Latin Lauds.

or·ti'ga (ôr·tē'gȧ; Sp. ôr·tē'gä), n. [Sp., nettle, fr. L. urtica.] In tropical America any of several plants of the nettle family, esp. those with stinging hairs, and those yielding fiber, as the introduced ramie; also, other plants resembling a nettle.

or'tive (ôr'tĭv), adj. [L. ortivus, fr. oriri, ortus, to rise.] Of or pertaining to the time or act of rising; eastern; as, the ortive amplitude of a planet. Rare.

Or'tol (ôr'tŏl; -tōl), n. [G., a trade name.] A trade-mark for a yellowish-white powder, soluble in water and used as a photographic developer; hence [sometimes not cap.], this powder. It is a compound or mixture of o-methylamino-phenol and hydroquinone.

or'to·lan (ôr'tō·lăn), n. [F., fr. Pr. ortolan ortolan, gardener, fr. L. hortulanus gardener, fr. hortulus, dim. of hortus garden; — so called because it frequents the hedges of gardens. See YARD enclosure.] 1. A European bunting (Emberiza hortulana). It is about six inches long, with a greenish-gray head, brown-and-black wings and back, yellowish breast, and buff abdomen. Large numbers of them are netted and fattened for table delicacies.

Ortolan (Emberiza hortulana).

2. a Local, Eng. The wheatear. b The sora rail. c Local, U. S. The bobolink.

orts'ta'ler (ôrts'tä'lĕr), n. [G.] In certain German states, a taler of small size. Obs.

ort'stein' (ôrt'stīn'; G. ôrt'shtīn'), n. [G.] Hardpan.

or'ty·gan (ôr'tĭ·găn), n. [Gr. ortyx, -ygos, a quail.] One of several East Indian birds of the genus Turnix.

Or·tyg'i·an (ôr·tĭj'ĭ·ăn), adj. a Of or pertaining to Delos; as, Ortygian Artemis. b Of or pertaining to Ortygia, the island on which modern Syracuse, Sicily, is built.

Or'ty·gi'nae (ôr'tĭ·jī'nē), n. pl. [NL., fr. Gr. ortyx, ortygos, quail.] Zool. A subfamily of quails, equiv. to Odontophorinae. — or'ty·gine (ôr'tĭ·jĭn; -jīn; 156), adj.

O·run'chun (ō·rōōn'chōōn), n. sing. & pl. A Siberian hunting tribe, known also as the Fishskin Tatars.

or'vi·e'tan (ôr'vĭ·ē'tăn), n. [F. orviétan, fr. It. orvietano; — because invented at Orvieto, in Italy.] A counterpoison formerly in vogue. Obs. exc. Hist.

or·vie'tite (ôr·vyā'tīt), n. [From Orvieto, Italy.] Petrog. An extrusive orthoclase-bearing leucite-basanite from Toscanella, Italy.

Or·vie'to (ôr·vyā'tō), n. A kind of muscatel wine from Orvieto, Italy. See MUSCATEL, 1.

or'y (ôr'ĭ; 181), adj. [ore + 3d -y.] Resembling or containing metallic ore.

or'y (ôr'ĭ), adj. [ore seaweed + 3d -y.] Resembling seaweed. Dial. Eng.

-ory. [F. or L.; ONF. -ori, -orie, OF. -oir, -oire, fr. L. -orius, -oria, -orium.] An adjective suffix meaning of or pertaining to, serving for, as in auditory, prohibitory, amendatory. Cf. -ORIAL; -ORIOUS.

-ory. [L. -orium; cf. F. -oire.] A noun suffix denoting place of or for, or that which pertains to or serves for, as in ambulatory, offertory, consistory. Cf. -ORIUM.

Or'yc·ter'o·pus (ôr'ĭk·tĕr'ō·pŭs), n. [NL., fr. Gr. oryktēr digger + pous foot.] Zool. The genus consisting of the aardvarks. It constitutes a family, Or'yc·ter'o·pod'i·dae (-pŏd'ĭ·dē).

o·ryc'tics (ō·rĭk'tĭks), n. [Gr. oryktikos pertaining to digging.] Oryctology. Rare.

orycto-. A combining form from Greek oryktos, meaning dug, quarried, used to denote fossil, mineral, as in oryctology, oryctognosy.

or'yc·tog'no·sy (ôr'ĭk·tŏg'nō·sĭ), n. [F. oryctognosie, fr. Gr. oryktos dug up + gnōsis knowledge.] Mineralogy. — or'yc·tog·nos'tic (-tŏg·nŏs'tĭk), adj. — or'yc·tog·nos'ti·cal (-tĭ·kăl), adj. — or'yc·tog·nos'ti·cal·ly, adv. All Obs.

Or'yc·tol'a·gus (-tŏl'ȧ·gŭs), n. [NL., fr. oryctolagos, fr. Gr. oryktos dug up + lagōs hare.] Zool. The genus constituted by the common European rabbit. See RABBIT.

or'yc·tol'o·gy (-tŏl'ō·jĭ), n. [Gr. oryktos dug up + -logy; cf. F. oryctologie.] The science of things dug from the earth; specif.: a Mineralogy. b Paleontology. — or'yc·to·log'ic (-tō·lŏj'ĭk), -log'i·cal (-ĭ·kăl), adj. — or'yc·tol'o·gist (-tŏl'ō·jĭst), n. All Obs.

O·rys'si·dae (ō·rĭs'ĭ·dē), n. pl. [NL., fr. Orycsus, type genus (fr. Gr. oryssein to dig) + -idae.] Zool. A small, widely distributed family of parasitic horntails constituting the suborder Idiogasta. O·rys'sus (-ŭs) is the type genus. — o·rys'sid (-ĭd), n. & adj.

O'ryx (ō'rĭks; ŏr'ĭks; 181), n. [NL., fr. L. oryx a kind of gazelle or antelope, fr. Gr. oryx.] 1. Zool. A genus of large African antelopes having (in both sexes) long, cylindrical, and nearly straight horns ribbed in their basal half and projecting backward in nearly exact continuation of the plane of the forehead and nose. The principal species are the gemsbok, beisa, beatrix, and leucoryx antelopes.

Oryx (O. beatrix).

2. [not cap.] pl. ORYXES (-ĕz; -ĭz; 119), sometimes ORYX. See PLURAL, Note. Any antelope of the genus Oryx.

O·ry'za (ō·rī'zȧ), n. [L., rice, fr. Gr. oryza. See RICE.] Bot. A small genus of tropical cereal grasses known by the perfect flowers with six stamens. O. sativa, the rice, is the most important species. See RICE.

o·ry'za·nin (-nĭn), n. Also -nine (-nĭn; -nēn; 157). [Oryza + -in.] Biochem. A concentrated antineuritic vitamin preparation obtained from rice (Oryza sativa) bran. See VITAMIN B.

o·ry'ze·nin (-zē·nĭn), n. [Oryza + -in.] Biochem. A globulin found in the seeds of rice (Oryza sativa).

or'y·ziv'o·rous (ôr'ĭ·zĭv'ō·rŭs), adj. [Gr. oryza rice + -vorous.] Feeding on rice.

O·ry'zo·mys (ō·rī'zō·mĭs; ō·rĭz'ō-), n. [NL., fr. Gr. oryza rice + mys mouse.] Zool. A large genus of cricetine rodents including the rice rats.

Or'y·zop'sis (ôr'ĭ·zŏp'sĭs), n. [NL., fr. Gr. oryza rice + -opsis.] Bot. A genus of American tufted grasses with open panicles composed of one-flowered spikelets remotely suggesting rice, whence the species are known as mountain rice. See SILK GRASS a.

O·ry'zo·ric'tes (ō·rī'zō·rĭk'tēz), n. [NL., fr. Gr. oryza rice + oryktēs digger.] Zool. A genus of small molelike insectivores of Madagascar, related to the tenrec. It is the type of a subfamily, O·ry'zo·ric·ti'nae (-rĭk·tī'nē).

‖os (ŏs), n.; pl. ORA (ō'rȧ). [L.] Anat. A mouth; an opening.

os (ōs), n.; pl. OSAR (ō'sär). [Sw. ås ridge, chain of hills, pl. åsar.] Geol. Esker.

OS (ō ĕs), v. t.; OS·ED (ō ĕst); OS·ING (ō ĕs'ĭng). [Telegraph signal for order sheet, or on sheet.] Railroad Teleg. To record the time of arrival and departure of (a train) by telegraphing this information prefixed by the signal OS and the office call. Cant.

-os. A termination in nouns from Greek ending in -os and in -ōs, corresponding to -us in nouns from Latin, as in Dolichos, Helios, rhinoceros.

O·sage' (ō·sāj'; in attributive use generally ō'sāj, esp. when the following word is a monosyllable or is accented on the first syllable), n.; pl. OSAGES (-ĕz; -ĭz; 119). [Osage Wazhazhe war people.] 1. One of a tribe of Siouan Indians, formerly dwelling between the Missouri and the Arkansas rivers in Missouri, Arkansas, and Oklahoma, now citizens of Oklahoma.

2. [From the Osage River, Missouri.] Geol. A series of the Mississippian (Subcarboniferous) in the Mississippi basin and lying above the Kinderhook and below the St. Louis. See GEOLOGY, Chart.

3. Short for OSAGE ORANGE; also, its wood.

O'sage or'ange or apple (ō'sāj). An ornamental American tree (Maclura pomifera) having hard, bright-orange wood yielding a dye; also, its wood and its yellowish, tubercled, apple-shaped fruit, composed of the united fleshy calyxes of the pistillate flowers. The tree was first found in the country of the Osage Indians, and is now commonly planted for hedges.

os'a·mine (ŏs'ȧ·mēn; -mĭn; 157), n. Also os'a·min. [G. osamin. See -OSE; AMINE.] Chem. Any of a class of compounds derived from sugars by replacement of a hydroxyl with the amino group.

-osan. Chem. A suffix, -ose + -an, used in naming certain polysaccharides, as in pentosan.

o'sa·zone' (ō'sȧ·zōn'; ŏs'ȧ-), n. [-ose + hydr*azone.*] Chem. A dihydrazone, esp. one from phenylhydrazine, having the two hydrazone groups (:N.NHR) attached to two adjacent carbon atoms; as, gluco*sazone.* See HYDRAZONE. The osazones are usually formed by the action of phenylhydrazine on compounds containing the grouping -CO-CO-, or (as in the case of the sugars) -CH(OH)-CO-, in the latter case with oxidation of the alcohol group. Certain other similar classes of compounds also yield them. The osazones are yellow compounds. Because they are well crystallized, nearly insoluble, and easily distinguishable from one another by melting point, etc., they are of great importance in the isolation and study of the various sugars.

Os'bal·dis'tone, Francis (ŏz'bȧl·dĭs'tŭn). A leading character in Scott's romance Rob Roy. He falls in love with Diana Vernon, his cousin, and with the aid of Rob Roy rescues her from his unprincipled cousin Rash'leigh Os'baldis'tone (răsh'lĭ), whom Rob Roy kills.

Os'borne, John (ŏz'bĕrn). In Thackeray's Vanity Fair, a grasping, arrogant London merchant, whose son, George Osborne, against his father's wishes, marries Amelia Sedley, the daughter of a bankrupt. George falls at the battle of Waterloo. See DOBBIN, MAJOR.

Os'can (ŏs'kăn), n. a One of a people of ancient Italy occupying Campania. b The language of Oscans, originally that of the Samnites, preserved in inscriptions of various kinds, written in an alphabet of Etruscan origin. See INDO-EUROPEAN LANGUAGES, Table; cf. NORTH OSCAN, SABELLIAN, SAFINE, SAMNITE, UMBRIAN. — Os'can, adj.

Os'car (ŏs'kĕr; 185), n. [Cf. OSWALD.] Masc. proper name. L. Oscarus (ŏs'kȧ·rŭs).

Os'ca·rel'li·dae (ŏs'kȧ·rĕl'ĭ·dē), n. pl. [NL.] Zool. A family of Myxospongida with spherical ciliated chambers. Os'ca·rel'la (-ȧ) is the type genus.

os'che- (ŏs'kē-). = OSCHEO- (which see), as in os'che·l'tis, os'che·o'ma, os'che·on'cus.

os'che·al (ŏs'kē·ăl), adj. [Gr. oscheon scrotum.] Anat. Of or pertaining to the scrotum.

os'che·o- (ŏs'kē·ō-), os'che- (ŏs'kē-). A combining form from Greek oscheon, meaning the scrotum, as in os'che·o·car'ci·no'ma, os'che·o·cele', os'che·o·lith', os'che·o·plas'ty. See CARCINOMA, -CELE, etc.

os'cho·pho'ri·a (ŏs'kō·fō'rĭ·ȧ; 181), n. pl. [Gr., fr. oschos young branch + pherein to bear.] An Athenian festival, held in honor of Dionysus and Athena in the month Pyanepsion, preparatory to the vintage.

os'cil·lance (ŏs'ĭ·lăns), os'cil·lan·cy (-lăn·sĭ), n. Oscillation. — os'cil·lant (-lănt), adj. Both Rare.

os'cil·late (ŏs'ĭ·lāt), v.; -LAT'ED (-lāt'ĕd; -ĭd; 119); -LAT'ING (-lāt'ĭng). [L. oscillare to swing.] Intrans.: 1. To move or swing backward and forward; to vibrate like a pendulum.

2. To vary or fluctuate between fixed limits or between opposing beliefs or opinions; to act or move in a fickle or fluctuating manner.

3. Elec. = GENERATE, v. i., 3. Cant.

4. Physics, Math., etc. To vibrate or vary above and below a mean value. See OSCILLATION, 4 & 5.

——, Transitive: To cause to oscillate.

Syn. — See FLUCTUATE.

os'cil·lat'ing cur'rent (ŏs'ĭ·lāt'ĭng). Elec. Current consisting of electric oscillations. See ELECTRIC OSCILLATIONS.

os'cil·lat'ing–cyl'in·der en'gine, oscillating engine. See ENGINE, n., 5.

oscillating wave. = GREGARIOUS WAVE.

os'cil·la'tion (ŏs'ĭ·lā'shŭn), n. [L. oscillatio a swinging.] 1. Act or fact of oscillating; a swinging or moving backward and forward, like a pendulum; vibration.

2. Fluctuation; variation; change back and forth.

His mind oscillated, undoubtedly; but the extreme points of the oscillation were not very remote. Macaulay.

3. Elec. a = ELECTRIC OSCILLATIONS; in pl., = OSCILLATING CURRENT. b Production of an electric current. Cf. OSCILLATE, 3.

4. Math. The variation of a function between limits; specif., the difference between the superior and the inferior limits of the values of a real function of a point set over the set.

5. Physics. A single swing from one extreme limit to the other of an oscillating body. Oscillations are damped when continually decreasing in amplitude, undamped (or persistent) when maintained with undiminished amplitude, free when they are those of a body that has been given an impulse and left to itself, forced when they are those of a body that can perform free oscillations but which is subjected to a periodic force. Cf. DAMPED HARMONIC OSCILLATION.

oscillation circuit. Elec. A circuit designed to produce electric oscillations. An oscillation circuit that includes a condenser is called closed when the condenser plates are apart a distance that is small compared with their linear dimensions and open when this distance is relatively large.

oscillation constant. Elec. In an oscillating circuit, the time of one oscillation divided by 2π. It is equal to the square root of the product of inductance and capacity ($\sqrt{LC}$) and is the reciprocal of the oscillation number.

oscillation number. Elec. In an oscillating circuit, the number of oscillations in 2π seconds.

oscillation transformer. Elec. An air-core transformer of oscillating currents.

os'cil·la'tive (ŏs'ĭ·lā'tĭv), adj. Tending to oscillate; vibratory. — os'cil·la'tive·ly, adv.

os'cil·la'tor (-lā'tĕr), n. [NL.] One who or that which oscillates; specif.: a An instrument for measuring rigidity by the torsional oscillations of a weighted wire. b Elec. Any device for producing electric oscillations; specif., Radio, a radio -frequency generator, esp. one of a nonrotating type. Oscillators include spark, arc, and electron-tube generators, but not radio-frequency alternators.

Os'cil·la·to'ri·a (ŏs'ĭ·lȧ·tō'rĭ·ȧ; 181), n. [NL., fr. L. oscillare to swing.] Bot. A genus of blue-green algae typifying the family Oscillatoriaceae.

Os'cil·la·to'ri·a'ce·ae (-ā'sē·ē), n. pl. [NL. See OSCILLATORIA.] Bot. A family of blue-green algae (order Hormogoneales) containing about five or six genera and numerous species, growing in water or on damp ground. They consist of slender filaments, often matted together, and commonly exhibiting oscillating movements. Reproduction is entirely vegetative, by means of segments (hormogonia) into which the filaments divide. — os'cil·la·to'ri·a'ceous (-shŭs), adj. — os'cil·la·to'ri·an (-tō'rĭ·ăn), n.

os'cil·la·to'ry (ŏs'ĭ·lȧ·tō'rĭ or, esp. Brit., -lā'tĕr·ĭ, -lȧ·tĕr·ĭ; 68), adj. [See OSCILLATE.] Characterized by oscillation; oscillating; vibratory.

oscillatory circuit. Radio. A circuit containing capacity and inductance such that a single voltage impulse would give rise to a damped alternating current.

oscillatory current. = OSCILLATING CURRENT.

oscillatory discharge. Elec. See DISCHARGE, n., 12 a.

os'cil·lo·gram' (ŏs'ĭ·lō·grăm'; ŏ·sĭl'ō-), n. [L. oscillare + -gram.] An autographic record made by an oscillograph.

os'cil·lo·graph' (-grȧf'; 83), n. [L. oscillare to swing + -graph.] Elec. An apparatus for recording or indicating alternating-current wave forms or other electrical oscillations, usually consisting of a galvanometer with strong field; specif., such a galvanometer for recording acoustical phenomena transformed to electrical energy upon a sensitized film. — os'cil·lo·graph'ic (-grăf'ĭk), adj. — os'cil·log'ra·phy (ŏs'ĭ·lŏg'rȧ·fĭ), n.

os'cil·lom'e·ter (-lŏm'ē·tĕr), n. [L. oscillare to swing + -meter.] a An instrument for measuring the angle through which a ship rolls or pitches at sea. b Med. An instrument for measuring the oscillations of blood pressure. — os'cil·lo·met'ric (-lō·mĕt'rĭk), adj. — os'cil·lom'e·try (-lŏm'ē·trĭ), n.

os·cil'lo·scope (ŏ·sĭl'ō·skōp), n. [L. oscillare to swing + -scope.] Elec. An instrument for showing visually the changes in a varying current.

os'cine (ŏs'ēn; -ĭn), n. Also os'cin. [G. oscin, formed fr. hyoscin to indicate similarity of derivation to that of tropin from atropin.] Chem. Scopoline.

os'cine (ŏs'ĭn; -īn), adj. Zool. Relating to, or having the character of, the Oscines. — n. One of the Oscines.

Os'ci·nes (ŏs'ĭ·nēz), n. pl. [L., pl. of oscen, -inis, singing bird, fr. ob (see OB-) + canere to sing.] Zool. A suborder (in some classifications a superfamily) of over 50 families of passerine birds comprising those with the most highly specialized vocal apparatus. They are commonly referred to as the singing birds, though many among them do not sing. As now restricted the group consists of eleutherodactyl forms having four to five pairs of diacromyodian syringeal muscles, and comprises by far the majority (about 5,000 species) of the Passeriformes.

os·chi'tis (ŏs·kī'tĭs). Var. of OSCHEITIS.

Os'cil·la'ri·a (ŏs'ĭ·lăr'ĭ·ȧ; 79), n. [NL.] Syn. of OSCILLATORIA.

os'cil·lat'ing, pres. part. & verbal n. of OSCILLATE.

Os'ci·nis (ŏs'ĭ·nĭs), n. [NL., prob. fr. L. oscen, oscinis, a singing bird.] Zool. A genus of small acalyptrate dipterous flies, the type of a family, Os·cin'i·dae (ŏ·sĭn'ĭ·dē), whose larvae usually burrow in the stalks of grasses or the leaves of succulent plants. The frit fly (Oscinis frit) is an example.

os'ci·tan·cy (ŏs'ĭ·tăn·sĭ), os'ci·tance (-tăns), n. [See OSCITANT.] a Act of gaping or yawning. b Drowsiness; hence, dullness; sluggishness.

os'ci·tant (-tănt), adj. [L. oscitans, -antis, pres. part. of oscitare, fr. os the mouth + citare, v. intens. fr. ciere to move.] a Yawning; gaping. b Sleepy; drowsy; hence, dull; sluggish; careless. — os'ci·tant·ly, adv.

os'ci·tate (-tāt), v. i. To yawn. — os'ci·ta'tion, n.

osc'node' (ŏsk'nōd'), n. [osculate + node.] Math. A three-point contact of two branches of a curve, the tangent at which counts as three double tangents. It may be regarded as arising through the coincidence of three ordinary double points of the curve.

Os'co-Um'bri·an (ŏs'kō·ŭm'brĭ·ăn), adj. Of, pertaining to, or designating, the language group comprising Oscan and Umbrian. See INDO-EUROPEAN LANGUAGES, Table.

os'cu·la·ble (ŏs'kū·lȧ·b'l), adj. [See OSCULATE.] Kissable.

os'cu·lant (ŏs'kū·lănt), adj. [L. osculans, -antis, pres. part. of osculari to kiss. See OSCULATE.] a Kissing; hence, meeting; clinging. b Biol. Intermediate in character; forming a connecting link between two groups. c Zool. Adhering closely; embracing.

os'cu·lar (-lĕr), adj. [L. osculum little mouth, a kiss.] 1. Of or pertaining to the mouth or a kiss. 2. Math. Relating to contact of higher than the first order. 3. Zool. Of or pertaining to an osculum. — os'cu·lar'i·ty (ŏs'kū·lăr'ĭ·tĭ), adj.

os'cu·late (ŏs'kū·lāt), v. t. & i.; -LAT'ED (-lāt'ĕd; -ĭd; 119); -LAT'ING (-lāt'ĭng). [L. osculatus, past part. of osculari to kiss, fr. osculum a kiss, a little mouth. See ORAL.] 1. To kiss. 2. Biol. To have characters in common with two groups. See OSCULANT, adj., b. 3. Geom. To touch closely so as to have three or more points in common at the point of contact; specif., to have the highest order of contact (with a given curve or surface) that is possible for the particular kind of osculating curve or surface. Thus a circle (in general) osculates a curve when it has contact of second order or meets the curve in three consecutive points; but a conic may osculate at five consecutive points, and a sphere osculates a twisted curve at four consecutive points. See OSCULATION, 2.

os'cu·la'tion (-lā'shŭn), n. [L. osculatio a kissing.] 1. Act of kissing; a kiss. 2. Geom. The contact of a curve or surface with an osculating curve or surface. See OSCULATE, 3.

os'cu·la·to'ry (ŏs'kū·lȧ·tō'rĭ or, esp. Brit., -tĕr·ĭ; 68), adj. 1. Of or pertaining to kissing; kissing. 2. Geom. Osculating; relating to osculation.

os'cu·la·to'ry, n.; pl. -RIES (-rĭz). [ML. osculatorium.] = 1st PAX, 2 b.

os'cu·la'trix (-lā'trĭks), n.; pl. -TRIXES (-trĭk·sĕz; -sĭz; 119). [NL.] Geom. a An osculating curve. b The envelope of the osculating planes of a twisted curve.

os'cule (ŏs'kūl), n. [Cf. F. oscule.] Zool. An osculum.

os'cu·lif'er·ous (ŏs'kū·lĭf'ĕr·ŭs), adj. Zool. [L. osculum + -ferous.] Having oscules.

ose (ōs), n. [See -OSE.] Chem. A monosaccharide. See GLUCIDE.

-ose (-ōs; see note below). [L. -osus. Cf. -OUS.] A suffix equivalent to -ous, in words from or simulating Latin, esp. when technical, as in verbose, comatose, globose. Corresponding nouns denoting state or quality are usually formed in -os'i·ty (-ŏs'ĭ·tĭ).

☞ The original accent in adjectives in -ose is on the suffix, and this remains in some common adjectives, esp. disyllables, as mo·rose', ver·bose', but otherwise the accent has usually shifted, or is shifting, esp. in polysyllables and scientific terms, as flex'u·ose, cy'mose.

-ose (-ōs). [F. -ose, fr. glucose. See GLUCOSE.] Chem. A suffix indicating that the substance to the name of which it is affixed is: a A carbohydrate, as in cellulose, fructose, etc. b A primary alteration, or hydrolysis, product of a protein, as in proteose, elastose, albumose, etc.

-ose. Plant Pathol. = OSIS, 2.

o·se'la (ō·sā'lä), o·sel'la (ō·sĕl'lä), n.; pl. OSELE (ō·sā'lē), OSELLE (ō·sĕl'lē). Also os·cel'la. [It. dial. (Venetian) osela, fr. oselo, uselo, Tuscan uccello, bird, fr. L. aucellus, avicellus (fem. -a), dim. of avis. See AVIARY.] Venetian Hist. A silver (or, occasionally, gold) medal, with the figure of a bird, struck (1522–1797) by order of the doge, as a substitute for a present of wild fowl formerly sent by him to each of the noble families of the republic on New Year's Day.

o'shac (ō'shăk), n. [Ar. ushshaq.] The ammoniac plant.

O'si·an'dri·an (ō'zĭ·ăn'drĭ·ăn), n. Also O'si·an'drist (-drĭst). Eccl. Hist. An adherent of Andreas Osiander (1498–1552), who held that justification by faith, in Luther's sense, involves that, through a real indwelling of Christ in him, the believer is made righteous (not merely forgiven) by God. — O'si·an'dri·an, adj.

-o·side (-ō·sĭd; -sīd). Also -o·sid (-sĭd). Chem. A suffix, -ose + -ide, used in naming compounds of a simple sugar with some other substance, as in glucoside, fructoside, heteroside.

o'side (ō'sīd; -sĭd), o'sid, n. See GLUCIDE.

o'sier (ō'zhĕr), n. [OF. (F. also dial. osière), fr. ML. ausaria osier bed, perh. of Celt. origin; cf. Bret. aoz river bed.] 1. Any of various willows whose pliable twigs are used for furniture, basketry, etc. The common osier widely cultivated for this purpose is the European Salix viminalis, sometimes called also velvet osier. Other useful species are the almond willow S. amygdalina; the golden willow (S. vitellina); and the purple willow (S. purpurea). 2. An osier rod used in basketry, esp. a coarse unstripped rod used for making hampers, etc. The finer rods are usually stripped and whitened. 3. Any of several American dogwoods (Cornus).

osier-bordered osier-fringed osier-woven o'sier (ō'zhĕr), adj. Made of, covered with, or containing, osiers.

osier cornel or dogwood. = RED OSIER b.

o'siered (ō'zhĕrd), adj. Covered or adorned with osiers.

osier willow. Any willow used as an osier.

o'sier·y (ō'zhĕr·ĭ), n.; pl. OSIERIES (-ĭz). A bed where osiers are grown; also, work made of osiers.

O·si'ri·an (ō·sĭ'rĭ·ăn), adj. Of, or pertaining to Osiris.

O·si'ride (ō·sĭ'rĭd), adj. O'si·rid'e·an (ō'sĭ·rĭd'ē·ăn), adj. Osirian; esp., designating a pillar or pier having an image of Osiris set before it.

O·si'ri·fy (-rĭ·fī), v. t. To identify as or with Osiris. — O·si'ri·fi·ca'tion (-fĭ·kā'shŭn), n.

O·si'ris (ō·sī'rĭs), n. [L., fr. Gr. Osiris, fr. Egypt. Ȧs-ȧr or Us-ȧr. Cf. ISIS.] Egypt. Relig. The great god of the underworld and judge of the dead. He was the son of Geb and Nut, brother and husband of Isis, father of Horus and Anubis. He is said to have been a wise and beneficent king of Egypt, who, with the aid of Isis, taught his subjects agriculture and all the arts and crafts, conquering the rest of the world to civilize it. His brother Set treacherously murdered him, and cast the coffin containing the body into the Nile. It drifted away to Byblos, was discovered by Isis and taken back to Egypt. Set again found the corpse, cut it in pieces, which he cast into the Nile; but Isis found them. Then came Horus to avenge his father Osiris. The gods justified Osiris, and restored his body to life and immortality. Osiris, originally a god of fertility whose symbol was a lopped-off cypress tree, came to Egypt from Western Asia. In the Delta, at a place later called Busiris, he became identified with the fertilizing power of the Nile and generally with the changing phases of nature. As a nature and fertility god he suffered, died, and rose to life immortal, and became god of the underworld and judge of the dead; as such also he symbolized the sun, overcome at night, and rising again the next day, being thus identified with Ra, and becoming a cosmic deity. The Greeks identified Osiris with Dionysus, who also underwent an annual death and resurrection. The worship of Osiris overspread Egypt, his principal seat being Abydos. He is commonly represented as a mummified figure, wearing the crown of Upper Egypt, and carrying a whip and crook.

Osiris.

O·si'rism (ō·sī'rĭz'm), n. Worship of Osiris.

-o'sis (-ō'sĭs); pl. -OSES (-ō'sēz). [L. or Gr.; L. -osis, fr. Gr. -ōsis, as in metamorphōsis metamorphosis.] A suffix signifying: 1. a Condition, state, process, and the like, as in hypnosis, psychosis, osmosis; specif., in pathology, abnormal or diseased condition, as in melanosis, stenosis, varicosis, etc. b A physiological increase or formation (of something specified), as in chylosis, leucocytosis, etc.

2. In plant pathology, a disease of which a (specified) fungus is the causal agent; a mycosis; as in chytridiosis.

-os'i·ty (-ŏs'ĭ·tĭ). [F. or L.; F. -osité, fr. L. ositas.] A suffix of nouns corresponding to adjectives in -ose and -ous. See -OSE, -OUS, -ITY.

Os'lo (ŏs'lō), n. a Capital of Norway (formerly Christiania). b Figuratively, the government of Norway.

-os'ma (-ŏz'mȧ; -ŏs'mȧ). [NL.] Bot. A combining form from Greek -osmos, from osmē, a smell, meaning -smelling, used to denote a genus of plants having a (specified) distinctive odor, as in Barosma, Coprosma.

Os·man'li (ŏs·măn'lĭ; ŏz-), n.; pl. -LIS (-lĭz). [Turk. 'Osmānli belonging to 'Osmān, Ar. 'Uthmān. See OTTOMAN.] 1. A Turk of the Western branch of the Turkish peoples, characteristically tall, brunet, and brachycephalic, but differing little in feature from the surrounding European population. 2. Also Osmanli Turkish. The dominant Turkic language of Turkey; Ottoman Turkish. See TURKISH, n.; URAL-ALTAIC LANGUAGES, Table.
— Os·man'li, adj.

Os·man'thus (ŏs·măn'thŭs; ŏz-), n. [NL., fr. osm- + -anthus.] Bot. A small, widely distributed genus of evergreen shrubs or trees (family Oleaceae), with inconspicuous, bisexual flowers, and handsome, sometimes hollylike foliage. O. americanus, the devilwood, is the only North American species.

os'mate (ŏz'māt; ŏs'-), n. Chem. a Any of a series of compounds obtained from osmium tetroxide by reduction in the presence of bases, and regarded as salts of the supposed osmic acid, H_2OsO_4. b A supposed salt of the so-called osmic acid (osmium tetroxide); a perosmate.

os·mat'ic (ŏs·măt'ĭk; ŏz-), adj. [Gr. osmē smell.] Zool. Having effective organs of smell. — os'ma·tism (ŏs'mȧ·tĭz'm; ŏz'-), n.

os'ma·zome (ŏs'mȧ·zōm; ŏz'-), n. [F. osmazôme, fr. Gr. osmē smell, odor + zōmos broth.] a Old Chem. The mixture formerly supposed to be a savory principle of flesh, and obtained as a brown substance by extracting broth or the like with alcohol. b Figuratively, a quintessence. — os'ma·zo·mat'ic (-zō·măt'ĭk), os'ma·zom'a·tous (-zŏm'ȧ·tŭs; -zō'mȧ-), adj.

Os·mer'i·dae (ŏs·mĕr'ĭ·dē; ŏz-), n. pl. [NL., fr. Osmerus, type genus (fr. Gr. osmēros odorous) + -idae.] Zool. The family to which the true smelts belong. The type genus is Os·me'rus (ŏs·mē'rŭs; ŏz-).

os·me'sis (ŏs·mē'sĭs; ŏz-), n. [NL., fr. Gr. osmēsis.] Physiol. The act of smelling; olfaction. — os·met'ic (-mĕt'ĭk), adj.

os·me·te'ri·um (ŏs'mē·tē'rĭ·ŭm; ŏz'-), n.; pl. -RIA (-ȧ). [NL., fr. Gr. osmē smell.] Zool. A protrusile forked process, emitting a disagreeable odor, borne on the first thoracic segment of the larvae of many butterflies of the family Papilionidae. It is probably a defensive organ.

os'mic (ŏz'mĭk; ŏs'-), adj. Chem. Of or pertaining to osmium; — said specif. of certain compounds in which this element exhibits a relatively high valence.

os'mi·dro'sis (-mĭ·drō'sĭs), n. [NL., fr. Gr. osmē smell + hidroun to sweat.] Med. Secretion of fetid sweat.

os'mi·o- (ŏz'mĭ·ō-; ŏs'-). Chem. A combining form for osmium.

os'mi·ous (-mĭ·ŭs), adj. Chem. Of or pertaining to osmium; — said of certain compounds in which this element exhibits a relatively low valence.

os'mi·um (ŏz'mĭ·ŭm; ŏs'-), n. [NL., fr. Gr. osmē a smell, odor; akin to Gr. ozein to smell. So named in allusion to the strong chlorinelike odor of osmium tetroxide. See ODOR.] Chem. A hard, bluish-white or grayish-white metallic element of the platinum group, the heaviest substance known (sp. gr. in crystalline form, 22.48). Symbol, Os; at. no., 76; at. wt., 190.2. Osmium was discovered by Tennant in 1803. It is found as an alloy (chiefly with iridium) in the form of small hard grains or scales in platinum ores. In compact form it is insoluble in all acids, including aqua regia. It melts at about 2700° C. Its alloy with iridium is used for compass bearings and for tipping gold pens; its alloy with platinum, for standard weights and measures. Chemically, osmium exhibits the valences 2, 3, 4, 6, and 8.

osmium lamp. Elec. An incandescent lamp with a filament of osimum or an alloy thereof. Cf. TUNGSTEN LAMP.

osmium oxide. Chem. Any oxide of osmium. Osmium monoxide or protoxide, OsO, is obtained as a grayish-black powder, and osmium sesquioxide, Os_2O_3, as a black powder or red crystals. Osmium dioxide, or osmic oxide, OsO_2, is a bluish-black or copper-colored, crystalline or colloidal solid. Osmium tetroxide or peroxide, or less properly, osmic or perosmic acid, OsO_4, a white or yellow volatile crystalline substance, is the most stable and characteristic of the compounds of osmium. It has a burning taste and gives off a vapor which is a powerful irritant poison, violently attacking the eyes, and emitting a strong chlorinelike odor. A solution of it is used in microscopy for hardening and coloring tissues.

os'mo- (ŏs'mō-; ŏz'-). 1. A combining form, Greek osmo-, from osmē, meaning smell, odor, as in os'mo·dys·pho'ri·a, os·mol'o·gy, os·mom'e·ter, os'mo·met'ric, os·mom'e·try. See DYSPHORIA, -LOGY, etc. 2. Chem. A combining form for osmious.

os'mo-. A combining form for osmosis, and osmotic, as in os'mo·lag'ni·a, os·mol'o·gy, os·mom'e·ter, os'mo·met'ric, os·mom'e·try. See -LOGY, METER, etc.

os'mo·gene (ŏs'mō·jēn; ŏz'-), n. [osmose + -gene.] An apparatus, consisting of a number of cells whose sides are of parchment paper, for conducting the process of osmosis. It is used esp. in sugar refining to remove potassium salts from the molasses.

os'mo·graph (-grȧf; 83), n. [osmose + -graph.] Physics. An instrument for recording the height of the liquid in an endosmometer or for registering osmotic pressures.

os'mond (ŏz'mŭnd). Var. of OSMUND.

Os'mond (ŏz'mŭnd), Os'mund (ŏz'mŭnd), n. [AS. Osmund, fr. ōs- (in comp.) god + mund mund.] Literally, protection of God; — masc. proper name. F. Osmont (ôz'môN').

osmond brake. Var. of OSMUND BRAKE.

os'mond·ite (ŏz'mŭn·dīt), n. [After M. Osmond, French engineer.] Metal. A solid solution of iron carbide in α-ferrite, occurring in steel hardened by quenching. See FERRITE, 1 b.

Os'mo·rhi'za (ŏs'mō·rī'zȧ; ŏz'-), n. [NL., fr. osmo- + -rhiza.] Bot. A genus of American and Asiatic white-flowered herbs (family Ammiaceae), the sweet cicelies, with decompound leaves and fleshy, aromatic roots. Syn. Washingtonia.

os'mo·scope (ŏz'mō·skōp), n. [1st osmo- + -scope.] A meter for measuring odor intensity.

os'mose (ŏs'mōs; ŏz'-), v. t. Chem. To subject to osmosis; to dialyze. — v. i. To diffuse by osmosis.

os·mo'sis (ŏs·mō'sĭs; ŏz-), n. Also os'mose (ŏs'mōs; ŏz'-). [NL. osmosis. Osmose is fr. endosmose, exosmose (Oxf. E. D.), which are fr. F., the second part coming fr. Gr. ōsmos impulse (fr. ōthein to push) + -ose, fr. L. -osis, fr. Gr. -ōsis, in abstract nouns from verbs.] 1. Physical Chem. & Physiol. The diffusion which proceeds through a semipermeable membrane (see SEMIPERMEABLE), typically separating two solutions, or a solvent and a solution, and tending to equalize their concentrations. It may be observed in a vertical tube containing sugar water, the lower end closed with an animal membrane and immersed in plain water; sugar is hindered from passage through the membrane and minore water particles pass inward (to where they are fewer per unit volume because of the sugar particles) than outward; the volume of liquid in the tube increases and osmotic pressure (which see) is produced. The net movement in osmosis is diffusion of solvent into the more concentrated solution, whether by vaporization, adsorption, or otherwise is not clear. Living cells characteristically have semipermeable membranes and depend for much of their activity on osmosis (see ABSORPTION, 4; SAP; TURGOR). See also ELECTROOSMOSIS, ENDOSMOSIS, EXOSMOSIS. 2. Figuratively, interaction or interchange, as of cultural groups, by mutual penetration, esp. through a separating medium.

-os·mo'sis. [NL.] A combining form of osmosis, denoting a (specified) kind of osmosis, as in chemo*osmosis,* endo*osmosis.* Derivative adjectives are formed in -os·mot'ic (-ŏs·mŏt'ĭk; -ōz-).

os'mo·tax'is (ŏs'mō·tăk'sĭs; ŏz'-), n. [NL.] Biol. A taxis in which a difference of osmotic pressure is the directing factor. — os'mo·tac'tic (-tăk'tĭk), adj.

os'mo·ther'a·py (-thĕr'ȧ·pĭ), n. [osmo- + -therapy.] Med. Treatment of disease by modifying the osmotic pressure of the blood and tissues, as by injecting hypertonic solutions into the blood stream.

os·mot'ic (ŏs·mŏt'ĭk; ŏz), adj. Of or pert. to, or having the property of, osmosis. — os·mot'i·cal·ly (-ĭ·kȧl·ĭ), adv.

osmotic equivalent. The ratio between the amount of solvent water that passes through the membrane or septum of an osmotic cell and the amount of solute which passes in the opposite direction.

osmotic pressure. Pressure produced by osmosis (which see). It is usually measured by forming a semipermeable membrane, as of copper ferricyanide, in the walls of a porous cell or tube and either (1) measuring the pressure caused by osmosis or (2) applying a measured excess of pressure just sufficient to prevent change of volume by osmosis. The osmotic pressure of a dilute solution of a nonelectrolyte (as sugar) is proportional to the absolute temperature and the molar concentration.

os'mous (ŏs'mŭs; ŏz'-), adj. Osmious.

os'mund (ŏs'mŭnd; ŏz'-), n. [F. osmonde, of unknown origin.] a Obs. Any of various ferns, as the male fern. b Any fern of the genus Osmunda, esp. O. regalis, the royal fern.

os'mund (ŏz'mŭnd), n. [Sw.; cf. LG. osmunt, osemund.] A superior kind of iron formerly imported into England from Sweden and used esp. for making arrowheads, fishhooks, clockworks, etc.; also, a piece of this iron.

Os·mun'da (ŏs·mŭn'dȧ; ŏz-), n. [ML. See 1st OSMUND.] Bot. A genus of large ferns typifying the family Osmundaceae. The large globose sporangia are borne on modified pinnae. See ROYAL FERN, CLAYTON FERN, CINNAMON FERN. — os·mun'dine (-dĭn), adj.

Os'mun·da'ce·ae (ŏs'mŭn·dā'sē·ē; ŏz'-), n. pl. [NL.] Bot. A family of large ferns, with stout rootstocks and pinnate or bipinnate circinate fronds. The only genera are Osmunda and Todea (see these terms). — os'mun·da'ceous (-shŭs), adj.

os'mund brake (ŏs'mŭnd; ŏz'-). The royal fern.

os'mund fur'nace (ŏz'mŭnd). [See 2d OSMUND.] A kind of high forge, intermediate in development between the Catalan forge and the blast furnace, formerly used for making a wrought iron for wire.

osmund iron. Osmund; also, iron made in the osmund furnace.

Os'na·burg (ŏz'nȧ·bûrg), n. a A species of coarse linen, originally made in Osnaburg (G. Osnabrück), Germany. b Now, a stout coarse cotton fabric used for overalls, sacking, etc.

o'so·ber'ry (ō'sō·bĕr'ĭ), n.; pl. -RIES (-ĭz). [Sp. oso bear (fr. L. ursus) + E. berry. See ARCTIC.] The blue-black, cherrylike fruit of the shrub Osmaronia cerasiformis (family Amygdalaceae) of Oregon and California; also, the plant.

O's of Ad'vent (ōz). Eccl. Seven anthems, each beginning with an invocation, as "O Sapientia," "O Adonai," sung at vespers one each day from December 17 until Christmas Eve; — called also Great Antiphons and Great O's.

os'one (ŏs'ōn; ō·sōn'), n. [G. oson, corresp. to -ose + -one in English.] Chem. Any of a series of soluble compounds obtained by hydrolyzing osazones with concentrated hydrochloric acid and characterized by the grouping -CO-CHO. They are hydroxy ketonic aldehydes, and yield sugars (ketoses) by reduction.

os'o·phy (ŏs'ō·fĭ), n.; pl. -PHIES (-fĭz). [From philosophy, etc.] A body of doctrine, theory, belief, or the like; — used disparagingly.

os·phra'di·um (ŏs·frā'dĭ·ŭm), n.; pl. -DIA (-ȧ). [NL., fr. Gr. osphradion strong scent.] Zool. A sense organ, single or paired, connected with one of the visceral ganglia, and situated near the gill or gills of most aquatic mollusks. It is supposed to be olfactory or to test the purity of the water passing to the gills. — os·phra'di·al (-ăl), adj.

-os·phre'si·a (-ŏs·frē'zhĭ·ȧ; -zĭ·ȧ; -sĭ·ȧ). [NL.] Med. A combining form from Greek osphrēsis, meaning sense of smell, as in oxyosphresia.

osphresio-. A combining form from Greek osphrēsis, sense of smell. The meanings of the following can be understood from the definitions of their elements.

osphresiolagnia	osphresiology	osphresiometry osphresiologic	osphresiometer	osphresiophilia

os·phre'sis (ŏs·frē'sĭs), n. [NL., fr. Gr. osphrēsis.] The sense of smell; olfaction.

os·phret'ic (-frĕt'ĭk), adj. [Gr. osphrētikos.] Olfactory.

Os'phro·men'i·dae (ŏs'frō·mĕn'ĭ·dē), n. pl. [NL., fr. Gr. osphromenos, pass. aorist of osphrainesthai, to smell; — from a resemblance of certain organs to another supposed by the namer to be an organ of smell.] Zool. A family of fresh-water spiny-finned fishes of southeastern Asia and Africa, including the gourami, paradise fish, etc.

os'phy·o- (ŏs'fĭ·ō-), os'phy-. A combining form from Greek osphys, meaning the loin, as in osphyalgia, pain in the loin. For words below see the word or element with which osphyo-, osphy-, is combined.

osphyalgia	osphyarthritis	osphyocele
osphyalgic	osphyitis	osphyomelitis

os'prey (ŏs'prĭ), n.; pl. -PREYS (-prĭz). [Prob. through OF. fr. L. ossifraga (orig., the bone-breaker); cf. F. orfraie, fr. L. See OSSIFRAGE.] 1. A large hawk (Pandion haliaëtus) of a dark-brown color above and mostly pure white below, remarkable for its habit of feeding on fish, which it captures by hovering over the water and diving; the fish hawk. It builds a bulky nest, placed in a tree or on the ground and often occupied year after year. The osprey is harmless, and where protected, often nests close to human habitations. It is found in most countries of the world. The American form is the subspecies P. h. carolinensis. Egret plumes are often erroneously called osprey plumes. No plumes are produced by the osprey. See AIGRETTE.

Osprey.

2. A type of feather trimming used in millinery.

‖os'sa (ŏs'ȧ), n., pl. of OS, bone.

Os'sa (ŏs'ȧ), n. [L., fr. Gr. Ossa.] A mountain of Larissa, Greece. See ALOADAE.

os'sal (ŏs'ăl; -'l), adj. = OSTEAL.

os'sa·ture (ŏs'ȧ·tûr), n. [F., prop., skeleton, fr. L. os, ossis, bone.] 1. The skeleton. Rare.
2. Arch. General framework, as of beams, ribs, etc.

osse (ŏs), n. A prophetic or ominous utterance. Obs.

osse (ŏs), v. i. & t. 1. To prophesy; presage. Obs.
2. To attempt; dare; promise; recommend. Dial. Eng.

os'se·in (ŏs'ē·ĭn), n. [L. osseus bony.] Biochem. The chief organic basis of bone tissue, which remains as a residue after removal of the mineral matters from bone by dilute acid. It is considered to be identical chemically with the collagen of connective tissue.

os'se·let (ŏs'ē·lĕt; ŏs'lĕt), n. [F.] 1. A little bone. Rare
2. Veter. a An exostosis on the inner aspect of the knee of the horse, usually commencing at the head of the internal rudimentary metacarpal bone and extending to all the bones of the carpus. b An exostosis on the anterior and lateral aspect of the fetlock, due to retraction of the flexor tendons and the concussion resulting from the abnormal position thus produced. c An exostosis on first phalanx.

osse'ments (ŏs'mĕnts), n. pl. [F.] Bones, or remains, of the dead. Rare.

os'se·o- (ŏs'ē·ō-). A combining form from Latin osseus, meaning bony, used to denote: a Bone; — in nouns, as in osseomucoid. b Osseous and; — in adjectives, as in os'se·o·ap'o·neu·rot'ic, os'se·o·car'ti·lag'i·nous, os'se·o·fi'brous.

os'se·o·al·bu'mi·noid (-ăl·bū'mĭ·noid), n. Physiol. The albuminoid of bone.

os'se·o·mu'coid (-mū'koid), n. Physiol. The mucoid of bone.

os'se·ous (ŏs'ē·ŭs; 277), adj. [L. osseus, fr. os, ossis, bone; akin to Gr. osteon, Skr. asthi, Alban. asht, Armen. oskr, W. asgwrn. Cf. OYSTER.] Composed of, or resembling, bone; bony; ossiferous. — os'se·ous·ly, adv.

osseous fishes. Zool. The Teleostei, or bony fishes.

osseous labyrinth. The bony labyrinth. See 1st EAR, 1.

Os'set (ŏs'ĕt), n. Also Os'sete (ŏs'ēt; ŏ·sĕt'). One of a people of central Caucasus, possibly immigrants from Persia and of Aryan descent and speech. They are tall, but not well-favored. Their religion is a mixture of Mohammedanism and Christianity. Called also Os'set·ine (ŏs'ē·tĭn; -tīn; 156).

ossi-. A combining form, Latin ossi-, from os, ossis, meaning bone, as in:

ossiferous	ossiform	ossivorous
ossific	ossifrangent

‖os·si'a (ŏs·sē'ȧ), conj. [It.] Music. Or else; — a direction indicating an alternative and, usually, simpler, form of a passage.

Os'sian (ŏsh'ăn; ŏs'ĭ·ăn; Ir. ŭsh·ēn'), n. [Gael. Oisin, dim. fr. os a fawn.] 1. An Irish hero of the 3d century, son of Finn Mac Cool. See FENIAN, n., 1; OSSIANIC.
2. The familiar short title of Macpherson's Poems of Ossian. See OSSIANIC, 2.

Os'sian·esque' (ŏsh'ăn·ĕsk'; ŏs'ĭ-), adj. After, or suggesting the style of, the Ossianic poems. See OSSIANIC. — n. Ossianesque style.

Os'si·an'ic (ŏsh'ĭ·ăn'ĭk; ŏs'ĭ-), adj. 1. Of or pertaining to Ossian, the poems ascribed to him, or the cycle of tales dealing with him, his father, Finn Mac Cool, and the Fianna. Cf. FENIAN, n., 1.
2. Pertaining to, designating, or resembling, the poetry or rhythmic prose employed by James Macpherson in The Poems of Ossian (pub. 1760, 1762), which he claimed to be translations of poems of Ossian. They do not, however, rest directly on any Gaelic text. These Ossianic poems or fragments include Fingal, an Epic Poem in Six Books, and Temora, an Epic Poem in Eight Books. Macpherson's work is characterized esp. by descriptions of wild scenery and, in spite of its grandiloquence and monotony, has considerable romantic charm.

Os'sian·ism (ŏsh'ăn·ĭz'm; ŏs'ĭ-), n. The realm of Ossianic legend and poetry.

Os'sian·ize (-īz), v. t. To make Ossianic in style or form.

os'si·cle (ŏs'ĭ·k'l), n. [L. ossiculum, dim. of os, ossis, a bone.] Anat. & Zool. A little bone or part resembling a small bone, as: a The malleus, incus, or stapes of the ear. b One of the small plates of bone in the sclerotic of some reptiles and birds. c One of the numerous small calcareous pieces of the skeleton of many echinoderms. d One of the parts of the gastric mill of the stomach of some crustaceans.

os·sic'u·lar (ŏ·sĭk'ū·lĕr), adj. Zool. Of, like, or pertaining to ossicles.

os·sic'u·late (-lăt), -lat'ed (-lāt'ĕd; -ĭd; 119), adj. Having ossicles.

os'si·cu·lec'to·my (ŏs'ĭ·kū·lĕk'tō·mĭ), n. [See OSSICLE; -ECTOMY.] The surgical removal of an auditory ossicle.

os'si·cu·lot'o·my (ŏs'ĭ·kū·lŏt'ō·mĭ), n. [L. ossiculum, dim. of os, ossis, bone + -tomy.] Surg. The division of one or more of the ossicles of the middle ear.

os·sic'u·lum (ŏ·sĭk'ū·lŭm), n.; pl. -LA (-lȧ). [L.] Zool. a An ossicle. b A lithodesma.

os'si·fi·ca'tion (ŏs'ĭ·fĭ·kā'shŭn), n. [Cf. F. ossification. See OSSIFY.] Physiol. 1. The formation of bone; the state or process of being converted into bone. Ossification begins at one or more points (called centers of ossification) for each future bone and is accomplished by mesoblastic cells called osteoblasts, which deposit the inorganic bone substance about themselves, becoming the bone cells or corpuscles of the completed bone. Ossification may take place in membrane (intermembranous ossification), that is, in connective tissue (see MEMBRANE BONE), or in cartilage (endochondral, or intercartilaginous, ossification). The latter is much the more complex process, involving the calcification (by deposition of lime salts) of the matrix of the cartilage, and its subsequent absorption and replacement by true but spongy bony tissue, which, in the interior of the limb bones, is mostly finally absorbed to form the marrow cavity, the bone meanwhile increasing in size by layers of bony tissue deposited on the outside under the periosteum.
2. The state of being changed into a bony substance; also, a mass or point of ossified tissue; bone.
3. Figuratively, the process of hardening or becoming callous, as in feeling, or fixed or set in a conventional form.

os'si·fied (ŏs'ĭ·fīd), adj. 1. Changed to bone or something resembling bone; hardened by deposits of mineral matter of any kind; — said of tissues.
2. Figuratively, fixed; hardened; set in a conventional form; ultraconservative.

os'si·fi'er (-fī'ĕr), n. One who or that which ossifies.

os·sif'lu·ent (ŏ·sĭf'lū·ĕnt), adj. [L. os, ossis, a bone + fluens, -entis, pres. part. of fluere to flow.] Med. Pert. to or derived from diseased, softening bone, as an abscess or the discharge from a fistula. — os·sif'lu·ence (-ĕns), n.

os'si·frage (ŏs'ĭ·frĭj), n. [L. ossifraga, ossifragus, fr. ossifragus bone-breaking, fr. os, ossis, a bone + frangere, fractum, to break. See OSSEOUS; BREAK. Cf. OSPREY.] a The lammergeier. b A young sea eagle. Obs. c The osprey; — called also breakbones.

os'si·fy (ŏs'ĭ·fī), v. i. & t.; os'SI·FIED (-fīd); os'SI·FY'ING (-fī'ĭng). [L. os, ossis, bone + -fy; cf. F. ossifier. See OSSEOUS.] 1. Physiol. To change into or form bone. See OSSIFICATION.
2. Figuratively, to harden; to become or make callous; to set or become set in a conventional form.

os'su·ar'i·um (ŏs'ū·âr'ĭ·ŭm; ŏsh'ū-), n. [LL.] An ossuary.

os'su·ar'y (ŏs'ū·ĕr'ĭ; -ēr·ĭ; ŏsh'ū-), n.; pl. -IES (-īz). [LL., ossuarium, fr. ossuarius of or for bones, fr. L. os, ossis, bone.] a A depository for the bones of the dead, as a charnel house, burial chamber, or urn. b Archaeol. A receptacle, as an urn, in which bones were placed for burial. — os'su·ar'y, adj.

os'sy·pite (ŏs'ĭ·pīt), n. [From the Ossipees, a tribe of Indians who formerly lived in New Hampshire.] Petrog. An olivine-gabbro composed of diallage, labradorite, olivine, and accessory magnetite.

ost (ŏst). VAR. of OAST.

ost-. = OSTEO- (which see), as in:

ostalgia	ostectomy	ostempyesis
ostarthritis	ostemia	ostitis

-ost (-ŏst). Zool. A combining form from Greek osteon, meaning bone, as in axon*ost.*

O star. See SPECTRAL TYPE.

Os·ta'ri·o·phy'si (ŏs·tā'rĭ·ō·fī'sī; 79), n. pl. [NL., fr. Gr. ostarion, dim. of osteon a bone + physa bladder.] Zool. An extensive division of teleost fishes having the anterior four vertebrae strongly modified, often grown together and supporting a chain of small bones which connect the air bladder with the ear. It includes the characins, carps, catfishes, the electric eel, etc. Called also Os·ta'ri·o·phy'se·an (-fĭ'sē·ē). — os·tar'i·o·phy'san (-târ'ĭ·ō·fī'săn), n. — os·tar'i·o·phys'i·al (-fĭz'ĭ·ăl), adj. — os·tar'i·o·phy'sous (-fī'sŭs), adj.

oste (ōst). Dial. var. of OAST.

os'te- (ŏs'tē-). = OSTEO- (which see), as in:

ostealgia	ostearthrotomy	osteectopy
osteanabrosis	osteectomy	osteodynia osteanagenesis	osteectopia	osteoncus

os'te·al (ŏs'tē·ăl), adj. [Gr. osteon a bone.] Of or like bone; pert. to bone; sounding like bone under percussion.

Os'te·ich'thy·es (-ĭk'thĭ·ēz), n. pl. [NL., fr. oste- + Gr. ichthys fish.] Zool. A division (in some classifications, a class) of fishes including the lungfishes, crossopterygians, teleosts, and sometimes the arthrodires and ostracoderms, distinguished from other fishlike forms by the presence of true bone in their skeleton.

-os·te'i·dae (-ŏs·tē'ĭ·dē). See -OSTEUS.

os'te·in (ŏs'tē·ĭn), n. [Gr. osteon bone.] Ossein.

os'te·i'tis (-ī'tĭs), n. [NL., fr. oste- + -itis.] Med. Inflammation of bone. — os'te·it'ic (-ĭt'ĭk), adj.

os·tend' (ŏs·tĕnd'), v. t. [L. ostendere to show.] To manifest; reveal; exhibit. Archaic.

Ost·end' Man'i·fes'to (ŏst·ĕnd'). U. S. Hist. A manifesto issued from Ostend, Belgium, in 1854, jointly by Buchanan, Mason, and Soulé, United States ministers to Great Britain, France, and Spain respectively, giving the grounds upon which the United States might seize Cuba in case of Spain's refusal to sell it.

os·ten'si·ble (ŏs·tĕn'sĭ·b'l), adj. [F., fr. L. ostendere, ostensum, -tum, to show, prop., to stretch out before, fr. obs- (fr. ob-) + tendere to stretch. See TEND.] 1. a Archaic. Capable of being shown; proper or intended to be shown. b Obs. Ostentatious; open to view.
2. Shown; exhibited; declared; avowed; professed; apparent; — often used as opposed to real or actual; as, an ostensible reason, motive, or aim.

Syn. — See SPECIOUS. Ant. — Actual, real, true. — os·ten'si·bil'i·ty (-bĭl'ĭ·tĭ), n. — os·ten'si·bly (ŏs·tĕn'sĭ·blĭ), adv.

os·ten'si·ble, n. One who or that which is ostensible.

ostensible partner. Law. See PARTNER, n., 5.

os·ten'sion (-shŭn), n. [F., fr. L. ostensio a showing. See OSTENSIBLE.] 1. Manifestation; exhibition. Obs.
2. Eccl. Exposition of the Host (see EXPOSITION, 3).

os·ten'sive (-sĭv), adj. [Cf. F. ostensif.] a Manifestly or professedly demonstrative. b Showing; exhibiting. c Ostensible. — os·ten'sive·ly, adv.

ostensive definition. Logic. A definition accomplished by exhibiting and characterizing the thing to be defined, or by pointing out and characterizing the cases or instances to be covered.

ostensive reduction. Logic. A reduction in which the propositions are the same as the original or their conversions; a direct reduction (which see).

os'ten·so'ri·um (ŏs'tĕn·sō'rĭ·ŭm; 181), n.; pl. -RIA (-ȧ). [ML. See OSTENSIBLE.] R.C.Ch. A monstrance.

os·ten'so·ry (ŏs·tĕn'sō·rĭ), n.; pl. -RIES (-rĭz). An ostensorium.

os·tent' (ŏs·tĕnt'; ŏs'tĕnt), n. [L. ostentus a showing, display, fr. ostendere (past part. ostensus and ostentus) to show. See OSTENSIBLE.] 1. [L. ostentum.] A token, portent, or prodigy. Now Rare.

os'te·o·blas'tic (-blăs'tĭk), adj. Pertaining to the formation of bone.

os'te·o·chon'dro- (ŏs'tē·ō·kŏn'drō-), osteochondr-. A combining form for osteochondrous, of both bone and cartilage, as in:

osteochondroma
osteochondrophyte osteochondrofibroma osteochondromatous

os'te·o·chon·drop'a·thy (-kŏn·drŏp'ȧ·thĭ), n. [osteo- + chondro- + -pathy.] Med. Any disease involving both bone and cartilage.

os'te·o·chon'drous (-kŏn'drŭs), adj. Also os'te·o·chon'dral (-drăl). [osteo- + Gr. chondros cartilage.] Anat. Pertaining to or composed of bone and cartilage.

os'te·oc'la·sis (ŏs'tē·ŏk'lȧ·sĭs), n. [NL. See OSTEOCLAST.] Surg. The operation of breaking a bone in order to correct deformity.

os'te·o·clast' (ŏs'tē·ō·klăst'), n. [osteo- + Gr. klastos broken.] 1. Anat. One of the large multinuclear cells in developing bone which absorb the bony tissue in the formation of the canals, marrow cavity, etc. Cf. MYELOPLAX. 2. Surg. An instrument for performing osteoclasis. — os'te·o·clas'tic (-klăs'tĭk), adj.

os'te·o·col'la (-kŏl'ȧ), n. [NL., fr. osteo- + Gr. kolla glue.] A cellular incrustation of calcium carbonate on stems and roots of plants, — formerly supposed to unite bones.

os'te·o·com'ma (ŏs'tē·ō·kŏm'ȧ), n. [NL., fr. osteo- + Gr. komma a piece.] A metamere of the vertebrate skeleton; a vertebra.

os'te·o·cra'ni·um (-krā'nĭ·ŭm), n. [NL.] Zool. The bony, as distinguished from the cartilaginous, cranium or chondrocranium.

os'te·o·den'tine (-dĕn'tēn; -tĭn), n. Also os'te·o·den'tin. [osteo- + dentine.] Zool. A modified dentine approaching true bone in structure, found chiefly in the teeth of fishes. — os'te·o·den'ti·nal (-tĭ·năl), adj.

os'te·o·derm' (ŏs'tē·ō·dûrm'), n. Also os'te·o·der'mis (-dûr'mĭs). [osteo- + -derm.] Zool. A bony dermal plate. — os'te·o·der'mal (-dûr'măl), adj.

os'te·o·der'ma·tous (-dûr'mȧ·tŭs), os'te·o·der'mous (-mŭs), adj. [osteo- + Gr. derma, -atos, skin.] Zool. Having the dermis more or less ossified, as many animals.

os'te·o·fi'brous (-fī'brŭs), adj. [osteo- + fibrous.] Anat. Composed of bone and fibrous connective tissue.

os'te·o·gen (ŏs'tē·ō·jĕn), n. [osteo- + -gen.] Physiol. The soft tissue or substance which ossifies to form bone.

os'te·o·gen'e·sis (-jĕn'ē·sĭs), n. [NL., fr. osteo- + -genesis.] Physiol. Development and formation of bone; ossification.

os'te·o·ge·net'ic (-ō·jē·nĕt'ĭk), adj. Physiol. a Pertaining to osteogenesis. b Originating in bone.

os'te·o·gen'ic (-jĕn'ĭk), adj. Osteogenetic.

os'te·og'e·nous (ŏs'tē·ŏj'ē·nŭs), adj. Osteogenetic.

os'te·og'e·ny (-nĭ), n. Osteogenesis. — os'te·og'e·nist (-nĭst), n.

oth'er (ŭth'ĕr), adj. [AS. ōther one of two, either, the second of two, other; akin to OS. āthar, ōthar, D. & G. ander, OHG. andar, ON. annarr, Sw. annan, Dan. anden, Goth. anthar, Skr. antara, Lith. antras; with compar. suff. fr. pronom. stem in Skr. anya other, Lith. anas, ans, that (one), Skr. ana.] 1. Being the one of two (or more) distinct from the one already mentioned or understood; (the) remaining; — often with a plural word, and usually preceded by a demonstrative or possessive word; as, his other friend; the other sons.

One half of the world knoweth not now the other half liveth. Rabelais (trans.).

3. a Second. Obs., except in every other, every second or alternate; as, every other day. b That precedes or follows (something). Obs., except in the other day, a recent, unspecified, day; formerly, specif.: (1) The second or next day; (2) A day ago.

oth'er (ŭth'ĕr), pron. 1. (pl. formerly OTHER, now OTHERS [-ĕrz]) One or ones remaining; part remaining; — the substantive use of other, adj., 1. Other (sing.) is now preceded by the or a demonstrative or possessive word, but was formerly used alone as correlative to each (cf. EACH OTHER), either, neither, whether; and as meaning "each preceding one"; as, "Controversy, which I am less fond of every day than other." Tillotson.

Whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also. Matt. v. 39.

If he is trimming, others are true. Thackeray.

2. (pl. OTHER, Archaic; OTHERS) A different or additional one; — the substantive use of OTHER, adj., 2. Other (sing.) in this sense is now used alone only in the correlative expressions: some . . . or other; one . . . or other; as, some person or other will be there. It generally occurs with one (cf. ANOTHER), any, no, none, some; as, no others could write. In the sense of "another thing," where the noun cannot be supplied from the context other is archaic; as, he could not find other than falsehood. Cf. also OTHER, adj., 2.

No other but such a one as he. Coleridge.

3. Obs. a Second one. b pl. The rest. Cf. OTHER, adj., 3.

4. Each other; one another. Now Scot. & Ir.

oth'er, adv. Otherwise; — with than.

oth'er, conj. [See OR.] Or; either; — often used with other or or for its correlative (as either . . . or is now used). Obs.

oth'er, n. Philos. That which exists as an opposite of, or as excluded by, something else; as, the nonego is the other of the ego, nonbeing the other of being, the objective world is the other of self-consciousness. Cf. ALTER.

out-. A combining form of the adverb out in its various senses (although, esp. in 2 b below, there is an extension of meaning not found in the purely adverbial uses). The chief meanings are: 1. (pron.: primary accent of nouns usually on out-, as in out'go'; but cf. OUT'SIDE', n.; of adjectives and adverbs the accent varies: cf. OUT'SIDE', adj., OUT'DOORS', adv.) With nouns and adjectives: a Situated or placed near or beyond the boundaries, or belonging to that which is so situated; as, specif.: beyond the walls or immediate boundaries; exterior; external; outside; as in outgarment, outhouse, outstair; out of or outside of (what is designated), as in outdoor; remote from the center; distant; as in outdistrict, outfield; residing, journeying, or employed outside or abroad, as in outclerk, outpatient, outpupil; foreign, as in outcity, outmerchant, outpeople. b Away from the center or source; forth; outward; — generally with the idea of motion, trend, extension, or direction, as in outbound, outbranching, outgoing, outvoyage; specif.: leading or opening outward, as in outpath, outlet; projecting or inclining outward, as in outlipped, outbowed.

out'law'ry (-rĭ), n.; pl. -RIES (-rĭz). 1. Act of outlawing; act or process of putting a man out of the protection of law; hence, formerly, banishment; exile. In the later times outlawry in civil cases, including contempt of court, incapacitated the outlaw from bringing an action in the courts, but did not deprive him of the right of self-defense. Civil outlawry was abolished by 42 & 43 Vict. c. 59, 1879, having been long obsolete; and criminal outlawry has been in practical abeyance since 1859, though still legally possible. Outlawry is entirely obsolete in the United States, and it is doubtful if it has been employed since the Revolution. In Scotland, when the accused is absent on the day on which he is summoned to appear and stand trial in the High Court, sentence of outlawry or fugitation is pronounced against him (cf. ATTAINDER, 1; CAPUT GERAT LUPINUM; FORFEITURE, 1 b; ESCHEAT, 1; EXACT, v. t., 5).

In vertebrates there are commonly two ovaries, which develop from an outgrowth (the genital ridge) of the Wolffian bodies and are hence of mesoblastic origin. In birds only one ovary usually is functional. The adult human ovaries are oval flattened organs about an inch and a half long, suspended from the dorsal surface of the broad ligaments one on each side of the uterus. They are composed of a fibrous vascular stroma in which are embedded the Graafian follicles (containing the eggs), and are invested externally with a condensed layer of the stroma, the tunica albuginea, and a layer of columnar cells (the germinal epithelium) continuous with the peritoneum. The eggs are discharged by the bursting of the Graafian follicles on the surface of the ovary. The eggs pass out into the body cavity, but are immediately received into the mouth of the oviduct (see FALLOPIAN TUBE).

2. Bot. In angiospermous plants, an enlarged (usually the basal) portion of the pistil or gynoecium, containing ovules. Morphologically the ovary is a closed sac consisting of a single sporophyll or carpel (simple, or monocarpellary, ovary), or of several carpels (compound, or polycarpellary, ovary, the ovules being borne on the inner margins or placentae. The separate cavities of a compound ovary are called loculi or cells. Such ovaries frequently exhibit additional (false) septa or dissepiments. (See PLACENTATION.) With respect to the calyx the ovary may be wholly free (superior) or more or less coalescent (inferior). See GYNOECIUM, CARPEL.

Three Types of Ovary, in Vertical Section. a Three-celled Ovary of St.-John's-wort (Hypericum) with Axile Placenta; b Simple Ovary of May Apple (Podophyllum) with Parietal Placenta; c One-celled Ovary of Spergularia, with Free Central Placenta.

Indicating passage either above the substance or thing, or on the surface of it, and beyond; specif.: a Across; from one side to the other of; to or at a place beyond; as, to leap over a stream or a table; to fly over the enemy's lines; to escape over the border. b Obs. Contrary to.
6. Indicating time or duration; specif.: a Obs. After the lapse of; after. b Throughout or during; from beginning to end of; as, to keep anything over night. c On or during the preceding (evening or night); — now only in over night. See OVERNIGHT.
7. Indicating occupation or consideration; specif.: a During occupation with; with respect to, or in reference to, as the subject of activity or concern; as, merry over their wine. b On account of; as, to laugh over the incident.
8. Card Games. To the left of (another player).
9. Her. Placed upon other charges, etc.; — said of a charge, ordinary, or escutcheon. Cf. EN SURTOUT.
Syn. — See ABOVE. Ant. — See BELOW.
— over all, over the side, over the top, etc., see under ALL, n., SIDE, n., etc. — over (one's) signature, name, etc. Having one's signature, etc., subscribed to the writing; — a substitute for the idiomatic English form with under. Cf. under the hand of, under HAND, n.

o'ver (ō'vĕr), adj. [Cf. AS. uferra, compar. See OVER, adv. & prep.] 1. Upper; covering; higher; superior; also, excessive; surplus; as, the over crust; an over copy. Cf. OVER-.
2. Used predicatively or postpositively: a Having reached the opposite side; as, the ferryboat is over. b Ended; beyond the limit of continuance; completed; finished. "Their distress was over." Macaulay. c Colloq. Having an excess or surplus; as, in weight twelve pounds over; to find the cashier several dollars over.
3. Radio. Near enough over an airport to receive; — used by an aircraft operator to report his position.

o'ver, n. 1. Something excessive; an excess. Rare.
2. That which goes, or is, over. Chiefly Slang.
3. A thing made or given in addition to a set number; as, the overs, or extra impressions, of a printed job.
4. pl. Thick felt boots combined with heavy rubber arctics, worn by lumbermen (lumbermen's overs), farmers, etc.
5. Cricket. a The series of balls (usually six or, in Australia, eight) bowled from each wicket alternately. b The play that results.
6. Mil. A shot which falls beyond the target.
7. pl. Milling. Material that does not pass through any given sieve in the milling process.

o'ver (ō'vĕr), v. t.; o'VERED (-vĕrd); o'VER-ING. [From OVER, adv.] 1. To overcome; to recover from. N. of Eng.
2. To raise (in amount). Obs.
3. To leap over or to go over.
4. To finish; bring to an end. Dial.
5. To be over with; as, the harvest is overed. Dial. Eng.
6. To cause to move over.

o'ver- (ō'vĕr-; the accent varies, even in the same word, according to meaning, being often stronger in sense 4, esp. 4 c; to the laws of accent in compounds (see PRON., § 63); to rhythm (§§ 64, 66); or to sense stress and emphasis (§ 69). A combining form of the adverb, the adjective, and the preposition over, in certain complex senses apparently formed either by composition of the simpler senses or analogically with respect to them. The principal meanings (4 c being far the most common) are: 1. Above; specif.: a Situated, extending, or moving above, as in the *over*arching sky, the *over*world. b Operating, directed, or coming, from above; down toward or upon, from above; as in an *over*bending tree, to *over*look a valley. c On the outside or surface; covering or traversing the surface; as in an *over*clouded sky, *over*grown with brush, *over*run by invaders, an *over*coat. d Above, or acting above, in degree, quality, station, or function, as in musical *over*tones, an *over*lord, to *over*office, that is, "hold or exercise office over." e Above, or reaching above, the top, or beyond the normal bound or capacity, as in an *over*flowing cup.
2. Across; specif.: a From limit to limit or from extremity to extremity, as in *over*festoon. b Through the extent; through or throughout; to the end; as in *over*name a hero's exploits. c Beyond; on the other side of, as in *over*sea. d Across the border or bound; from one side to the other, as in *over*bribe. Now Rare.
3. Hence: a Across upon the surface, as in *over*glide; across at a height or *over*head, as in *over*leap. b Across, or through, and more; through and beyond, as in *over*stay.
4. Above or beyond in degree; specif.: a More than; to a degree beyond or in excess; as in *over*balance, *over*time; hence, so as to exceed or surpass, as in *over*bid, to *over*plot; also (probably with some reference to 1 b), so as to defeat or get the better, as by descending upon, forcing down, outdoing, etc., as in *over*bear, *over*throw, *over*awe. b To a great or surpassing degree; abundantly or surpassingly, as in *over*glorious. c To an excessive degree; excessive or to excess; too; too much, as in *over*do, *over*heat, *over*confident.
5. So as to fall or become inverted, as in *over*balance, *over*throw, *over*turn.
6. Again; in repetition; as in *over*say, that is, "say over."
☞ The following compounds contain over- in sense 4 c. Most of the adjectives have derivatives in -ly and -ness.

—, Intransitive: 1. To revolve. Obs.
2. To turn over; esp., to upset or capsize.
Syn. — OVERTURN, OVERTHROW, SUBVERT, UPSET. OVERTHROW commonly suggests greater violence or more overwhelming ruin or defeat than OVERTURN; but the two words are often used with little or no distinction; as, "He knoweth their works, and he overturneth them in the night" (Job xxxiv. 25); "Like the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah . . .; which the Lord overthrew in his anger, and in his wrath" (Deut. xxix. 23). To SUBVERT is to overturn as from the foundations; the word sometimes implies an insidious or corrupting influence; as, "There is not any other medicine . . . so likely to subvert that gloomy empire of the spleen" (Berkeley); "Temptation and all guile on him to try — so to subvert whom he suspected" (Milton). UPSET is more familiar and colloquial; as, to upset one's plans, to upset one's composure, to upset an argument. Cf. CONQUER, DESTROY, REVERSE.
Ant. — Right; settle, confirm, strengthen.

b Ovally; — in adjectives, as in o'vo·el·lip'tic, o'vo·rhom'boid, o'vo·rhom·boi'dal.

o'void (ō'void), adj. [ovo- + -oid.] Egglike; egg-shaped; ovate; as, an ovoid apple; specif., Bot., egg-shaped with the large end toward the point of attachment.

o'void, n. An ovoid body.

o'vol'dal (ō·voi'dăl; -d'l), adj. Ovoid.

o'vo·lo (ō'vō·lō), n.; pl. OVOLI (-lē). [It. ovolo, uovolo, fr. L. ovum an egg. See OVULE.] Arch. A rounded, convex molding. See MOLDING, Illust. In Roman work it is usually a quarter circle in section; in Greek work it is flatter, and is equivalent to the echinus. In medieval architecture it is not distinguishable from other convex moldings.

o·vol'o·gy (ō·vŏl'ō·jĭ), n. [ovo- + -logy.] That branch of embryology which treats of the egg. Rare. — o'vo·log'ical (ō'vō·lŏj'ĭ·kăl), adj. — o·vol'o·gist (ō·vŏl'ō·jĭst), n.

o'vo·mu'coid (ō'vō·mū'koid), n. [ovo- + mucoid.] Biochem. A mucoid present in egg white.

o'vo·plasm (ō'vō·plăz'm), n. [ovo- + -plasm.] Biol. The protoplasm of an unfertilized egg. Haeckel. — o'vo·plas'mic (-plăz'mĭk), adj.

o'vo·pyr'i·form (-pĭr'ĭ·fôrm), adj. [ovo- + pyriform.] Having a form between that of a pear and an egg.

o'vo·tes'tis (-tĕs'tĭs), n. [NL., fr. ovo- + testis.] Zool. A hermaphrodite reproductive organ. — o'vo·tes·tic'u·lar (-tĕs·tĭk'ū·lĕr), adj.

O'vo·vi·vip'a·ra (ō'vō·vī·vĭp'ä·rä), n. pl. [NL. See OVOVIVIPAROUS.] Zool. An abandoned group including the marsupials and monotremes.

o'vo·vi·vip'a·rous (-rŭs), adj. [ovo- + viviparous.] Zool. Producing eggs that have a well-developed shell or covering, as in oviparous animals, but which hatch within the body of the parent, as in the case of many reptiles and elasmobranch fishes. — o'vo·vi·vip'a·rism (-rĭz'm), n. — o'vo·viv'i·par'i·ty (-vĭv'ĭ·pär'ĭ·tĭ), n. — o'vo·vi·vip'a·rous·ness (-vī·vĭp'ä·rŭs·nĕs), n. — o'vo·vi·vip'a·rous·ly, adv.

O'vu·la (ō'vū·lä), n. [NL. See OVULE.] Zool. A genus of marine snails of the family Cypraeidae. Cf. EGGSHELL, 2.

o'vu·lar (ō'vū·lĕr), adj. Also o'vu·lar'y (-lĕr'ĭ; -lĕr·ĭ). Bot. & Zool. Pertaining to, or of the nature of, an ovule.

o'vu·lar'i·an (-lär'ĭ·ăn; 79), adj. Resembling an egg.

o'vu·late (ō'vū·lāt), adj. Containing an ovule or ovules.

o'vu·late (ō'vū·lāt), v. i.; O'VU·LAT'ED (-lāt'ĕd; -lăd; 119); O'VU·LAT'ING (-lāt'ĭng). Biol. To produce eggs or ovules, or discharge them from an ovary. — o'vu·la'tion (-lā'shŭn), n.

o'vule (ō'vūl), n. [F., dim. fr. L. ovum an egg. See OVUM; cf. OVOLO, OVULUM.] 1. Bot. The megasporangium of a seed plant; popularly, an immature seed. It consists of a central mass of tissue, the nucellus (n in the Illust.), containing a single megaspore, the embryo sac (e), within which is the egg cell. The coat or integument of an ovule is usually double (primine and secundine) with a minute orifice (foramen) leading to an aperture (micropyle) through which the pollen tube usually penetrates at the time of fertilization. The point of attachment of the ovule to its support (placenta) is called the hilum; sometimes it has a slender stalk, or funiculus (f). The nucellus and its integuments are closely connected at a point termed the chalaza (c). With respect to the position it assumes during growth the ovule may be orthotropous (atropous), anatropous, campylotropous, amphitropous. See these words, also EMBRYO, 3; SEED.

Diagrammatic Section of Ovule of an Angiosperm. p, p Primine, and s, s Secundine, Integuments; m Micropyle.

2. A small egg; an egg in an early stage of growth.

o'vules of Na'both (ō'vūlz ŏv nä'bŏt). Nabothian glands.

ovuli-. A combining form for ovule, as in o'vu·lif'er·ous, o'vu·lig'er·ous.

o'vum (ō'vŭm), n.; pl. OVA (ō'vä). [L., an egg. See OVAL.] 1. Biol. A female germ cell; an egg cell, or egg, in the biological sense of that word. In animals it is a cell produced in the female reproductive organ or ovary, which is capable of developing into an organism inheriting more or less completely the characters of its ancestors, but it is commonly able to accomplish this only after it has undergone a process of maturation, and of fertilization, or fusion with a corresponding male, or sperm, cell. See FERTILIZATION, 2; PARTHENOGENESIS. The ovum differs from the sperm cell in its larger size, much larger amount of protoplasm (which usually contains nutritive yolk for the embryo), usually rounded or oval form, and lack of motility. Though the result of fertilization is a combination of the male and female germ cells, the latter so vastly exceeds the former in bulk that the term ovum or egg is still applied to the resulting cell, which may be regarded as the first stage in the life history of an individual. It is a stage in which even the most highly organized animal is temporarily in the unicellular condition characteristic of the lowest organisms. Development first manifests itself in repeated segmentation or cleavage of the ovum by a process of mitosis so that a mass of small cells results. In this mass the grouping of the cells into distinct germ layers (see GERM LAYER) and the beginning of their differentiation to form the various tissues soon becomes apparent. The cleavage may be total (holoblastic) or partial (meroblastic), according as the ovum contains little or much yolk. (See CLEAVAGE, 3.) In a strict sense the ovum becomes an embryo when cleavage has taken place, but the term ovum or egg is commonly still applied during the cleavage stages, and in some cases even longer, as in mammalian embryology, where the vesicle formed by the enveloping membranes of the embryo is called ovum even when the contained embryo has most of its organs already formed. In plants the ovum or egg is a nonmotile female gamete or oösphere. It is found throughout those groups in which fertilization replaces simple conjugation. Thus, while many of the lower algae are isogamous, in the higher forms one gamete has become greatly increased in size and has lost the power of movement, remaining passive but exerting a chemotropic attraction upon the small active gamete of the opposite sex. The same differentiation is found throughout the mosses, ferns, and seed plants, although there is increasing complexity in the mode of development of the structures. See SPORE, GAMETE.

Ovum of a Sea Urchin showing: 1 Cell Wall; 2 Cytoplasm containing Yolk Globules; 3 Germinal Spot (Nucleolus); 4 Germinal Vesicle (Nucleus); 5 Chromatin.

2. Arch. An egg-shaped ornament.

3. Bot. a An egg cell. b Rare. An ovule.

ow (ou), interj. An exclamation of pain, surprise, or the like; ough.

ow (ōō), interj. Oh. Obs. exc. Scot.

o·wa'la tree (ō·wä'lä). [Mpongwe, etc., owala, ovala, obala.] A tropical African tree (Pentaclethra africana), family Mimosaceae, the seeds of which yield a lubricant oil, owala oil.

owe (ō), v.; past tense OWED (ōd), formerly OUGHT (ôt), which, becoming specialized as a distinct verb (see OUGHT, v., 2), was replaced by owed; past part. OWED, formerly OW'EN, which became restricted to the adj. OWN (which see), also, Obs. or Dial., OUGHT, pres. part. & verbal n. OW'ING (ō'ĭng). [ME. owen, awen, aghen, to have, own, have (to do), hence, owe, fr. AS. āgan to have; akin to G. eigen, adj., own, ON. eiga to have, Dan. eie, Sw. äga, Goth. aigan, Skr. īśe, ῎ιξτε, he owns, controls. Cf. OUGHT, v., OWN, adj. & v., FRAUGHT.] Transitive: 1. To own; possess. Obs.

2. Hence: a Obs. To have as an obligation or duty; — followed by an infinitive with or without to. Cf. OUGHT, v., 2, 3 a. b Obs. To acknowledge as one's own; to own. c Dial. To claim as owner. d To have or bear (a feeling, involving a certain type of conduct); as, to owe a grudge; to owe good or ill will.

3. To have or be under an obligation to restore, pay, or render (something) in return or compensation for something received; to be indebted in the sum of or to be under obligation to render; as, the subject owes allegiance; the fortunate owe assistance to the unfortunate.

The one ought five hundred pence. Bible (1551).

5. To have or possess, as something derived or bestowed; to be obliged to ascribe (something to some source); to be indebted or obliged for; as, he owed his wealth to his father; he owed his victory to his lieutenants.

O deem thy fall not owed to man's decree. Pope.

6. To have or bear a character due to (a relation or quality); as, beauty owes no community with sentiment. Rare.

——, Intransitive: 1. To be in debt; as, he owes for his house.

2. To be under obligations to someone. Obs.

owl (oul), n. [ME. oule, ule, fr. AS. ūle; akin to D. uil, OHG. ūwila, G. eule, ON. ugla; of imitative origin.] 1. Any member of a well-defined group of widely distributed birds of prey distinguished by their large head and large, more or less forwardly directed eyes, short, hooked bill, strong talons with reversible outer toe, very soft, fluffy, usually mottled plumage, and more or less nocturnal habits, as well as by many anatomical characters. Many species have erectile earlike tufts of feathers, and the large eyes are usually surrounded by stiffened radiating feathers (constituting the facial disk) supported by an internal bony ring. They feed on small mammals, birds, reptiles, batrachians, and insects, and with few exceptions are beneficial to man. The owls, formerly included in the Raptores, are usually considered as constituting a separate order, Strigiformes, related to goatsuckers.

Great Gray Owl (Scotiaptex nebulosa).

2. A pigeon of a long-established breed from which it is supposed the turbits and satinettes were derived. They have a frill on the front of the neck, and the bill is very short, with the upper mandible downwardly curved. Two principal varieties, bred in various colors, are the very small African and the larger English.

See HUMOR; cf. AUROCHS.] 1. The domestic bovine quadruped (Bos taurus), esp. an adult castrated male (which is used for a draft animal or for food). Cf. BULL, STEER. Not applied to the individual female, or cow.
2. Any species of the genus Bos or a closely allied genus; any bovine quadruped; as, a wild ox; extinct oxen.

ox-. Chem. Short for oxal-, as in oxamide. See OXALO-.

ox-. Chem. A combining form denoting the presence of oxygen, esp. in the names of certain cyclic compounds, as in oxazole.

oxa-. Chem. A combining form denoting the presence of oxygen replacing carbon, esp. in a ring, as in oxadiazole.

ox'a·di'a·zole (ŏk'sȧ·dĭ'ȧ·zōl; -dī'ȧz'ōl), ox·di'a·zole (ŏks·dī'ȧ·zōl; ŏks'dĭ·ȧz'ōl), n. [2d ox- + diazole.] Chem. Any of four parent compounds, $C_2H_2N_2O$, containing a five-membered ring, or a derivative of one of these four; — called also furodiazole. Specif., the 1,3,4 variety, $\overset{\diagdown}{O}.CH:N.N:\overset{\diagdown}{C}H$. The 1,2,5 variety, $\overset{\diagdown}{O}.N:CH.CH:\overset{\diagdown}{N}$, is called also furazan or azoxazole; derivatives of the 1,2,4 variety, $\overset{\diagdown}{O}.N:CH.N:\overset{\diagdown}{C}H$, are called also azoximes, and of the 1,2,3 variety, $\overset{\diagdown}{O}.N:N.CH:\overset{\diagdown}{C}H$, diazo-oxides or cyclic diazoanhydrides.

ox'al·a·ce'tic (ŏk'sȧl·ȧ·sē'tĭk), adj. [oxal- + acetic.] Chem. Pert. to or designating a crystalline acid, $HO_2C.CO.CH_2CO_2H$, obtained by oxidizing malic acid.

ox'a·late (ŏk'sȧ·lāt), n. [F., fr. oxalique. See OXALIC.] Chem. A salt or ester of oxalic acid. — v. t. Biochem. To treat with an oxalate; specif., to add an oxalate to prevent coagulation, as of blood or plasma.

ox'a·le'mi·a, ox'a·lae'mi·a (ŏk'sȧ·lē'mĭ·ȧ), n. [NL., fr. oxal- + -emia.] Med. The presence of oxalates in the blood, esp. in excess.

ox·al'ic (ŏks·ăl'ĭk), adj. [F. oxalique, fr. L. oxalis. See OXALIS.] Chem. Pertaining to or designating an acid, $C_2H_2O_4$, or $(COOH)_2$, existing in oxalis as acid potassium oxalate, and in many plant tissues as calcium oxalate. Oxalic acid is obtained as a white crystalline compound, containing two molecules of water, by the action of nitric acid on sugar, starch, etc. It is prepared on a large scale by heating sodium formate or by the action of fused caustic soda or potash on sawdust. It has a strong acid taste, and is poisonous in large doses. It is used in dyeing, calico printing, bleaching flax and straw, removal of ink stains, etc.

Ox·al'i·da'ce·ae (ŏks·ăl'ĭ·dā'sē·ē), n. pl. [NL. See OXALIS.] Bot. A family of widely distributed herbs, rarely trees (order Geraniales), the sorrel family, having compound leaves and regular pentamerous flowers. Oxalis, Xanthoxalis, and Averrhoa are the most important genera. — ox·al'i·da'ceous (-shŭs), adj.

Ox'a·lis (ŏk'sȧ·lĭs; 277), n. [L., a kind of sorrel, fr. Gr. oxalis, fr. oxys sharp, pungent, acid. See EDGE.] Bot. a A large genus of acaulescent herbs, the wood sorrels, type of the family Oxalidaceae, having palmately or pinnately compound leaves and white, pink, or purple flowers with ten monadelphous stamens. Most species are of warm or tropical regions; some are bulbous. See OCA. The herbage is acid. b [not cap.] A plant or flower of this genus.

ox'a·lu'ra·mide (-lū'rȧ·mīd; -mĭd), n. Also -mid (-mĭd). [oxaluric + amide.] Chem. The amide, $NH_2CONH.COCONH_2$, of oxaluric acid, obtained as a crystalline powder by the action of ammonia and hydrocyanic acid on alloxan, and in other ways.

ox'a·lu'rate (-lū'rāt), n. A salt or ester of oxaluric acid.

ox'a·lu'ri·a (-lū'rĭ·ȧ), n. [NL., fr. oxal- + -uria.] Med. The presence of oxalic acid or oxalates in the urine, esp. in excess.

ox'a·lu'ric (-lū'rĭk), adj. [oxal- + uric.] Chem. Pertaining to or designating a crystalline acid, $NH_2CONH.COCO_2H$, salts of which are obtained from parabanic acid by action of alkalies.

ox'a·lyl (ŏk'sȧ·lĭl), n. [oxal- + -yl.] Chem. a The bivalent radical, $-COCO-$, of oxalic acid. Cf. BENZOYL. b Loosely, the univalent radical, HO_2CCO-, of oxalic acid. c Carbonyl. Obs. d Carboxyl. Obs.

ox'a·lyl·u·re'a (-ū·rē'ȧ; -ū'rē·ȧ), n. [NL.] Also oxalyl urea. Chem. Parabanic acid.

ox'a·mate (ŏk'sȧ·māt), n. A salt or ester of oxamic acid.

ox'a·meth'ane (ŏk'sȧ·mĕth'ān), n. [oxamic + ethyl.] Chem. Ethyl oxamate, $C_4H_7NO_3$, a white crystalline compound.

ox·am'ic (ŏks·ăm'ĭk), adj. [oxalic + amido.] Chem. Pert. to or designating a crystalline acid, NH_2COCO_2H, intermediate between oxalic acid and oxamide.

ox·am'ide (-ĭd; -īd; ŏk'sȧ·mīd; -mĭd; 157), n. Also -id. [oxalic + amide.] Chem. A white crystalline neutral compound, $(CONH_2)_2$, the amide of oxalic acid, obtained by treating ethyl oxalate with ammonia, and in other ways.

owse (ouz), ow'ser (ou'zĕr), n. = 1st OOZE, 2.

owt (ōt). Dial. var. of OUGHT.

ow'zel. Var. of OUZEL.

ox·ac'id (ŏks·ăs'ĭd), n. Chem. = OXYGEN ACID.

oxal-. Chem. = OXALO-.

ox'al·al'de·hyde (ŏk'sȧl·ăl'dē·hīd), n. Chem. = GLYOXAL.

ox'al·am'ide (-ăm'ĭd; -īd), n. Also -id. [oxal- + amide.] = OXAMIDE.

ox'a·lan (ŏk'sȧ·lăn), n. [Cf. OXALIC.] Chem. = OXALURAMIDE.

ox·al'de·hyde (ŏks·ăl'dē·hīd), n. [oxalic + aldehyde.] = GLYOXAL.

ox'a·lo·di'a·ce'tic (ŏk'sȧ·lō·dī'ȧ·sē'tĭk), adj. [oxalo- + diacetic.] Chem. = KETIPIC.

ox'a·lo·ni'trile (-nī'trĭl; -trēl), n. Also -tril. [oxalo- + nitrile.] Chem. = CYANOGEN b. ox·am'i·dine (ŏks·ăm'ĭ·dēn; -dĭn; 157), n. Also -din. [oxygen + amido.] a = AMIDOXIME. b The amidine, $C_2H_6N_2$, of oxalic acid.

ox·am'mite (ŏks·ăm'īt; ŏk'sȧ·mīt), n. [oxalic + ammonium + -ite.] Mineral. Ammonium oxalate, $(NH_4)_2C_2O_4.2H_2O$, occurring as a crystalline salt in guano.

ox'an (ŏk'săn), n. Also ox'ane. [2d oxy- a + 2d -an.] Chem. A colorless gas, CNO, formed by the action of nitrogen oxides on heated charcoal and in other ways. It is described by Lidov as existing in two varieties: α-oxan, O-C≡N, and β-oxan, O-N≡C, the latter being the less stable. Both resemble carbon dioxide, but show a tendency to polymerize. Each variety forms a series of unstable salts (ox'an·ates) corresponding to the acid H_2CNO_2 (ox·an'ic ac'id [ŏks·ăn'ĭk], α- and β-). α-Oxanates occur in many natural limestones.

ox·an'i·late (ŏks·ăn'ĭ·lāt), n. Chem. A salt or ester of oxanilic acid.

ox'a·nil'ic (ŏk'sȧ·nĭl'ĭk), adj. [oxalic + aniline.] Chem. Designating a crystalline acid, $C_6H_5NHCOCO_2H$, obtained by heating oxalic acid with aniline; phenyl-oxamic.

ox·an'i·lide (ŏks·ăn'ĭ·līd; -lĭd; 157), n. Also -lid. [oxalic + anilide.] Chem. A white crystalline compound, $(CO\text{-}NHC_6H_5)_2$, the anilide of oxalic acid, obtained by heating aniline oxalate, and in other ways; diphenyl-oxamide.

ox antelope. A bubaline antelope.

ox'a·zine (ŏk'sȧ·zēn; -zĭn; 157), n. Also -zin. [oxygen + azine.] Chem. Any of six parent compounds, C_4H_4NO, containing a ring of four carbon atoms, one oxygen atom and one nitrogen atom and called specif. orthoxazines, of which there are two, metoxazines, of which there are three, and paroxazine; also, any derivative of these. Certain paroxazine derivatives are important dyes.

ox'a·zole (ŏk'sȧ·zōl), n. [oxygen + azole.] Chem. A hypothetical parent compound, $\overset{\diagdown}{O}.CH:N.CH:\overset{\diagdown}{C}H$. Also, any derivative of it. Cf. ISOXAZOLE.

ox ball. A hair ball from an ox's stomach.

ox balm. = HORSE BALM a.

ox'bane' (ŏks'bān'), n. A poisonous South African plant (Buphane disticha), injurious to cattle.

ox'ber'ry (-bĕr'ĭ; -bĕr·ĭ); pl. -BERRIES (-ĭz). Dial. Eng. a The fruit of the black bryony Tamus communis. b The cuckoopint; also, its fruit.

ox bile. Ox gall.

ox'bird' (ŏks'bûrd'), n. a The dunlin. b Local, Eng. The sanderling or other sandpiper. c An African weaverbird (Textor albirostris). d An oxpecker.

ox'bit'er (ŏks'bĭt'ĕr), n. a Local, U. S. The cowbird. b An oxpecker.

ox'blood' (ŏks'blŭd'), n. Also oxblood red. A color, yellowish-red in hue, of medium saturation and low brilliance. Cf. COLOR.

ox bot or botfly. A warble fly.

ox'bow' (ŏks'bō'), n. 1. A frame, bent into the shape of the letter U, and embracing an ox's neck as a kind of collar, the upper ends passing through the bar of the yoke; a bow.
2. Anything shaped like an oxbow; specif., Phys. Geog., a river bend such that only a neck of land is left between two parts of the stream. The river may cut through, leaving a crescent-shaped lake. Cf. CUTOFF, 8 b. U. S.

ox'bow', adj. Having, as the front of cabinet furniture, a compound curve, the central curve of which is always concave; — the reverse of serpentine.

ox'boy' (-boi'), n. A boy who takes care of oxen.

ox'brake' (-brāk'), n. A frame in which oxen are shod.

ox'cart' (-kärt'), n. A cart drawn by oxen.

ox'cheek' (-chēk'), n. An ox's cheek, esp. as a cut of meat.

ox'e·a (ŏk'sē·ȧ; ŏk·sē'ȧ), n. [NL., fr. Gr. oxys sharp.] Zool. A needle-shaped sponge spicule sharp at both ends. — ox'e·ate (-āt), adj.

ox'er (ŏk'sĕr), n. [From ox.] Among fox hunters, a strong hedge with a wide ditch, and a single rail in front of it. A double oxer has a rail on each side. Eng.

ox'e·tone (ŏk'sē·tōn), n. [hydr*oxy* + ke*tone.*] Chem. Any of a class of compounds containing the grouping $\overset{\diagdown}{O.CHCH_2CH_2CCH_2CH.O}$ and derived indirectly from γ-lactones; specif., the simplest member, $C_7H_{12}O_2$, a mobile liquid of peppermint odor. The oxetones are spiro compounds containing two furan rings and may be regarded as anhydrides of γ, γ¹-dihydroxy ketones.

ox'eye' (ŏks'ĭ'), n. [ox + eye.] 1. Any of several composite plants having heads with a conspicuous disk and marginal rays: a The oxeye daisy. See DAISY, 2. b Eng. The field camomile. c Any plant of the genus Buphthalmum. d U. S. Any plant of the genus Heliopsis. e New Eng. The black-eyed Susan.
2. a A large East Indian and Australian fish (Megalops cyprinoides) related to the tarpon. b The boce.
3. a Local, Eng. (1) The dunlin or other small sandpiper. (2) Any of several titmice. b U. S. (1) The least sandpiper. (2) The black-bellied plover.
4. = BULL'S-EYE, 4 a & b.
5. An object suggestive of an ox's eye; esp.: a A round or oval window. b Naut. (1) A small cloud which on the African coasts precedes storm. (2) A glass bull's-eye.

oxeye bean. The large orbicular brown seed of a tall tropical American woody vine (Mucuna urens), having flat bristly pods; also, the vine.

oxeye camomile. The yellow camomile.

ox'-eyed' (-īd'), adj. Having eyes like those of an ox; — translation of Gr. boōpis boōpis, used by Homer as an epithet especially for Hera.

oxeye daisy. a See DAISY, 2. b = OXEYE, 1 d.

ox-eyed arch. A pointed arch.

oxeye molding. Arch. A form of molding somewhat similar to the cavetto or casement. The oxeye is somewhat deeper than the casement, the circle being struck from a center of a circle the diameter of the intended form, and thus returns at top and bottom.

ox fence. = OXER.

ox'fly' (ŏks'flĭ'), n. An ox warble fly or other fly troublesome to cattle.

ox'-foot', adj. Made of the feet of oxen; as, ox-foot jelly.

Ox'ford (ŏks'fĕrd), n. [AS. oxnaford, lit., oxen's ford, whence ML. Oxonia. See OX; FORD.] 1. The city in England, famous as the seat of Oxford University.
2. [sometimes not cap.] Any of certain articles of merchandise named after Oxford; as: a = OXFORD SHOE. b Oxford cloth (see OXFORD, adj.).

ox daisy. = DAISY, 2.

ox·di'a·zole. Var. of OXADIAZOLE.

ox'en, n., pl. of OX.

ox'e·ote (ŏk'sē·ōt), adj. Zool. = OXEATE.

ox'es. Obs. pl. of OX.

ox feather. = HORN, n., 3 b. Humorous.

owld (ould). Dial. var. of OLD.

owl'dom (oul'dŭm), n. See -DOM.

owl'ism, n. See -ISM.

owl'like', adj. See -LIKE.

ow'mer (ō'mĕr; ōō'mĕr). Dial. Eng. var. of UMBER.

own'er·less, adj. See -LESS.

own'self', Rare sp. of OWN SELF.

owr'ance. Var. of OWERANCE.

owre. ✝ HOUR; OAR; ORE, mineral; OUR; URE; YOUR.

owre'gane' (ōr'gān'; our'-). Scot. past part. of OVERGO.

owse (ous), ow'sen (ou'zĕn; -zĭn). Vars. of OX, OXEN. Scot. & N. of Eng.

3. = OXFORD GRAY.
4. = OXFORD DOWN.

Ox'ford (ŏks'fĕrd), adj. a Designating a woolen fabric woven of dyed threads, usually black and white. b Designating a printed cotton fabric used for dresses, shirts, etc.

Oxford blue. A color, reddish-blue in hue, of low saturation and very low brilliance. Cf. COLOR.

Oxford chrome. = YELLOW OCHER b.

Oxford clay. Geol. A clay formation which belongs to the Middle Oölite of the English Jurassic period.

Oxford corner. Printing, Binding, etc. A plain border rule projecting in each outward direction, making a square outside at each corner.

Book Cover with Oxford Corners.

Oxford dash. See 2d DASH, 13.

Oxford Down. [From Oxfordshire, England.] A hornless sheep of the largest of the Down breeds, developed by crossing Cotswolds and Hampshire Downs. The fleece is rather long and of medium quality and the mutton excellent.

Oxford gray. A neutral gray of medium brilliance. Cf. COLOR.

Oxford Group movement. A movement founded in 1921 at Oxford, England, by Frank Buchman, and now international in scope.

The Oxford Group is a Christian revolution, active in more than fifty countries, the aim of which is a new social order under the dictatorship of the Spirit of God, and which issues in personal, social, racial, national, and supernational renaissance. Frank Buchman.

Ox·for'di·an (ŏks·fôr'dĭ·ăn; 181), adj. [From Oxford, England.] Geol. Designating a subdivision of the British Jurassic. See GEOLOGY, Chart. — Ox·for'di·an, n.

Ox'ford·ism (ŏks'fĕr·dĭz'm), n. a An Oxford trait or peculiarity. b = TRACTARIANISM. — Ox'ford·ist, n.

Oxford marbles. See ARUNDEL MARBLES.

Oxford movement. See TRACTARIANISM.

Oxford ocher. a A superior yellow ocher well found near Oxford, England. b = YELLOW OCHER b.

Oxford shoe or tie. A low shoe tied over the instep.

ox gall. The gall of the ox dried and used in medicine.

ox'gall' (ŏks'gôl'), n. The color light chrome yellow.

ox'gang' (-găng'), ox'gate' (-gāt'), n. [See OX; GANG, n., 1; GATE a way.] A bovate. Hist.

ox'goad' (-gōd'), n. A goad for driving oxen.

Ox'-god', n. Egypt. Relig. Apis.

ox'har'row (-hăr'ō), n. A kind of large primitive harrow. — v. t. & i. To till (soil) with an oxharrow.

ox'head' (ŏks'hĕd'), n. a The head of an ox. b A dolt.

ox'heart' (-härt'), n. Hort. a Any of certain varieties of the sweet cherry, as Napoleon. b A race of cabbage with oval or conical heads.

ox'hide' (-hīd'), n. 1. The skin of the ox, or leather made from it.

2. Erroneously taken (by confusion with hide, a land measure) as the name of a measure of land.

ox'horn' (-hôrn'), n. 1. The horn of an ox, or a drinking cup made of an ox's horn.

2. The black olive.

ox'house' (-hous'), n. A stable for oxen.

ox'i·da·ble (ŏk'sĭ·dä·b'l), adj. [F., now oxydable.] Oxidizable. — ox'i·da·bil'i·ty (-bĭl'ĭ·tĭ), n.

ox'i·dant (ŏk'sĭ·dănt), n. [F., now oxydant.] An oxidizing agent.

ox'i·dase (ŏk'sĭ·dās; -dāz), n. [oxidation + -ase.] Biochem. Any of a group of enzymes, as laccase, tyrosinase, etc., that promote the oxidation of various substances.

ox'i·date (ŏk'sĭ·dāt), v. t. & i.; -DAT'ED (-dāt'ĕd; -ĭd; 119); -DAT'ING (-dāt'ĭng). [F. oxider, now oxyder.] To oxidize.

ox'i·da'tion (-dā'shŭn), n. [F., now oxydation.] Chem. Act or process of oxidizing, or the state or result of being oxidized. — ox'i·da'tion·al (-ăl), adj.

ox'i·da'tion–re·duc'tion po·ten'tial. Physical Chem. In an electrochemical cell, the potential at which oxidation will occur at the anode and reduction at the cathode.

ox'i·da'tive (ŏk'sĭ·dā'tĭv), adj. Pertaining to, or characterized by, oxidation; having oxidizing powers.

ox'i·da'tor (-dā'tĕr), n. 1. An oxidizer. Rare.

2. A contrivance for causing a current of air to impinge on the flame of the Argand lamp.

ox'ide (ŏk'sīd; -sĭd; 157), n. Also ox'id. [F. oxide, oxyde, fr. oxygene oxygen + acide acid. The French word was originally correctly spelt oxide; but later the spelling oxyde became substituted to conform it to oxygen, and probably from ignorance of the true origin of the name.] Chem. A binary compound of oxygen with an element or radical; as, iron oxide, ethyl oxide, etc. — ox·id'ic (ŏks·ĭd'ĭk), adj.

☞ In the nomenclature adopted by Lavoisier and his associates, the term oxides was made to include all compounds of oxygen which had no acid (F. acide) properties, as contrasted with the acids, all of which were at that time supposed to contain oxygen.

oxide brown or purple. A color, reddish red-yellow in hue, of medium saturation and low brilliance. Cf. COLOR.

oxide of iron. = IRON OXIDE.

oxide red. Any of several colors, as Indian red, Venetian red, bole, iron-oxide red, etc., resembling those of ferric oxide under various conditions.

oxide yellow. = YELLOW OCHER b.

ox'i·diz'a·ble (ŏk'sĭ·dīz'ä·b'l), adj. Capable of being oxidized. — ox'i·diz'a·bil'i·ty (-ä·bĭl'ĭ·tĭ), n.

ox'i·dize (ŏk'sĭ·dīz), v.; OX'I·DIZED (-dīzd); OX'I·DIZ'ING (-dīz'ĭng). Transitive: 1. Chem. a To combine with oxygen or with more oxygen; to add oxygen to; as, to oxidize nitrous acid to nitric acid. b To deprive (a compound) of hydrogen, as by the action of oxygen; as, to oxidize an alcohol to an aldehyde. c By extension, to change (a compound) by increasing the proportion of the electronegative part, or to change (an element) from a lower to a higher positive valence; to deprive (an atom or ion) of electrons; as, to oxidize mercurous to mercuric chloride; to oxidize ferrous to ferric iron.

☞ All these senses are opposed to reduce. See REDUCE, v. t., 15 d.

2. To produce on (a metallic surface) a decorative film, usually of some compound, as a sulphide.

3. Electrotyping. To produce a conducting copper coating on (a wax surface).

4. Philately. To change in color, usually to brown or black, by the action of sulphur fumes; — used esp. in the past part., erroneously but commonly, for sulphureted.

—, Intransitive: Chem. To become oxidized.

ox'i·dized oil (ŏk'sĭ·dīzd). Specif., a blown oil (which see).

oxidized silver. Silver darkened with a coating of sulphide. Trade Name.

ox'i·diz'er (ŏk'sĭ·dīz'ĕr), n. One who or that which oxidizes; specif., an oxidizing agent, as nitric acid, chromic acid, etc.

ox'i·do- (ŏk'sĭ·dō-). Chem. A combining form of oxide, used for oxide, oxidation; specif., in organic chemistry, epoxy-. — ox'i·do (-dō), adj.

ox'i·do·re·duc'tion (-rē·dŭk'shŭn), n. Physical Chem. Oxidation reduction; as, every electrochemical reaction is an oxidoreduction reaction.

ox·id'u·lat'ed (ŏks·ĭd'ū·lāt'ĕd; -ĭd; 119), adj. [Dim. fr. oxidate.] Chem. Existing in an inferior state of oxidation; as, oxidulated iron (magnetic iron oxide, Fe_3O_4). Obs.

ox'i·mate (ŏk'sĭ·māt), v. t. Chem. To convert into an oxime. — ox'i·ma'tion (-mā'shŭn), n.

ox'ime (ŏk'sēm; -sĭm), n. Also ox'im. [oxygen + imide.] Chem. Any of a series of compounds obtained chiefly by the action of hydroxylamine on aldehydes (aldoximes) and ketones (ketoximes), in which the oxygen of the carbonyl group is replaced by the group :NOH (called the isonitroso group, or oxime group). Many oximes of aldehydes and of unsymmetrical ketones are known in two stereoisomeric forms, distinguished by the prefixes syn- and anti-. Cf. BENZALDOXIME.

ox'i·mi'do- (ŏk'sĭ·mē'dō-; ŏks·ĭm'ĭ·dō-). Also ox'i·mi'no- (-mē'nō-; -ĭm'ĭ·nō-). Chem. A combining form, 1st ox- + imido-, used to designate presence of the oxime group, :NOH; isonitroso-.

ox'lip' (ŏks'lĭp'), n. [AS. oxanslyppe. See OX; SLOP. Cf. COWSLIP.] a Orig., a hybrid primrose. b A Eurasian primula (Primula elatior) differing from the cowslip (P. veris) chiefly in the flat corolla limb.

ox louse. A cattle louse.

ox'man (ŏks'măn), n.; pl. -MEN (-mĕn). A man who tends or drives oxen. — ox'man·ship, n.

ox'o- (ŏk'sō-). Chem. A combining form from 2d oxy-, denoting the presence of oxygen, esp. replacing H_2 in a methylene group, as in ox'o·in'do·line; — distinguished from oxy-. — ox'o (-sō), adj.

Ox·o'ni·an (ŏks·ō'nĭ·ăn), adj. [ML. Oxonia Oxford. See OXFORD.] Of or pertaining to the city of Oxford, or the university of Oxford, England. — n. A native or inhabitant of Oxford; usually, a student or a graduate of Oxford University.

ox·o'ni·um (ŏks·ō'nĭ·ŭm), n. [NL., fr. oxygen + ammonium.] Chem. A univalent basic radical OH_3, composed of basic quadrivalent oxygen and of hydrogen and known esp. in the form of organic derivatives; as, diethyl-oxonium chloride, $(C_2H_5)_2O{<}^{H}_{Cl}$

ox'o·zone (ŏk'sō·zōn), n. [2d oxy- a + ozone.] Chem. An allotropic form of oxygen, O_4, believed to be formed with, and to exist in solution in, ozone. Organic oxidation products corresponding to it have been prepared from unsaturated hydrocarbons. These products, called ox·o'·zo·nides (ŏks·ō'zō·nīd; ŏk'sō·zō'nĭd), are highly explosive oils.

ox'peck'er (ŏks'pĕk'ĕr), n. A beefeater (bird).

ox penny. Eng. Law. A tax on oxen. Obs.

ox rail. An oxer. Eng.

ox ray. A horned ray.

ox'reim' (ŏks'rēm'), n. [D. os ox + riem thong.] A narrow strip of oxhide, flat or twisted, as for straps. S. Africa.

ox'shoe' (ŏks'shōō'), n. A shoe for an ox, usually consisting of two pieces, one for each side of the hoof.

ox'skin' (-skĭn'), n. The skin of the ox, or leather made from it.

ox sole. The whiff (fish). Ireland.

ox'tail' (ŏks'tāl'), n. The tail of an ox, esp. the skinned tail, used for soup. — ox'tail', adj.

ox team. A team of oxen.

ox'ter (ŏk'stĕr), n. [AS. ōhsta; akin to G. achsel shoulder. See AISLE.] The armpit; the space between the inside of the upper arm and the body; also, an arm or the arms. — v. t. & i. To lead or support with the arm; to go or walk arm in arm (with); to put the arm around; to embrace; to put under the arm; also, to elbow. Both Scot. & Dial.

oxter plate. Shipbuilding. A molded plate used to continue the shell plates immediately above the propeller aperture, esp. when this aperture is kept low to secure shorter, and therefore stronger, stern and propeller posts.

ox'tongue' (ŏks'tŭng'), n. Any of several plants having rough, tongue-shaped leaves, as: a An Old World annual herb (Picris echioides) of the chicory family, with bristly, oblong-lanceolate leaves and flowers in small, yellow heads. b The bugloss Anchusa officinalis. c The borage (Borago officinalis).

ox warble. See WARBLE FLY.

ox'wort' (-wûrt'), n. The butterbur.

ox'y (ŏk'sĭ), adj. Of or pertaining to an ox.

ox'y- (ŏk'sĭ-). [See OXALIS.] 1. A combining form, Greek oxy-, from oxys, in its senses sharp, keen, acute, acid, shrill, quick, as in oxygon, oxymel, oxymoron, oxyrhynchus, oxytone. Specif., acid, as in oxychromatic, oxygen.

2. Bot. & Zool. a Pointed; acute; as in oxyphyllous, oxyrhine. b Smooth, as in oxygnathous.

3. Med. Denoting: a Acuteness of perception; hyper-; as in oxyblepsia, oxygeusia. b Swift, as in oxytocic. c Sharp in pitch, as in oxyphonia. d Acute, as in oxyosphresia.

ox'y-. A prefix from oxygen, denoting: a Presence or addition of oxygen; specif., in organic chemistry, an oxygen atom united to two different atoms, as distinguished from keto- and oxo-, as in ox'y·di'a·ce'tic ac'id, $O(CH_2CO_2H)_2$. Examples are:

oxyberberine	oxycobaltammine	oxypurine
oxycarbonate	oxycopaivic	oxyterpene
oxycholesterol	oxynarcotine

b The presence of the hydroxyl group (in this sense more properly hydroxy-), as in:

oxyamine	oxyethyl	oxyproline
oxyanthraquinone	oxymandelic	oxypropionic oxybenzaldehyde	oxynaphthoic	oxyquinone oxybenzyl	oxynaphthoquinone	oxysalicylic oxycamphor	oxyphenol	oxystearic oxycaproic	oxyphenyl	oxytoluene oxycinnamic	oxyphthalic	oxytoluic oxycoumarin	oxypicric

ox'y (ŏk'sĭ), adj. Chem. = 2d OXY-.

ox'y·a·can'thine (ŏk'sĭ·ä·kăn'thēn; -thĭn; 157), n. Also -thin. [oxyacanthous + -ine.] Chem. A white crystalline alkaloid obtained from barberry root ox'y·a·can'thous (-thŭs), adj. [Cf. Gr. oxyakanthos a plant having sharp thorns. See 1st OXY-; ACANTHA.] Bot. Having sharp spines or thorns.

ox'y·a·cet'y·lene (-ä·sĕt'ĭ·lēn), adj. Of, pertaining to, or consisting of, a mixture of oxygen and acetylene.

oxyacetylene blowpipe or torch. A welding blowpipe using oxygen and acetylene. See WELDING BLOWPIPE.

oxyacetylene cutting. = OXYGEN-ACETYLENE CUTTING.

oxyacetylene welding. = OXYGEN-ACETYLENE WELDING.

ox'y·al'de·hyde (-ăl'dē·hīd), n. [2d oxy- + aldehyde.] Chem. A hydroxy derivative of an aldehyde.

ox'y·a'phi·a (-ā'fĭ·ä; -ăf'ĭ·ä), n. [NL., fr. 1st oxy- + Gr. haphē touch.] Med. Acuteness of touch.

ox'y·as'ter (ŏk'sĭ·ăs'tĕr), n. [NL., fr. 1st oxy- + Gr. astēr star.] Zool. A stellate sponge spicule having acute rays.

ox'y·az'o- (-ăz'ō-; -ā'zō-). Chem. A combining form, oxy- + azo-, denoting presence of the oxy and azo groups. — ox'y·az'o (-ō), adj.

ox·yb'a·phon (ŏks·ĭb'ä·fŏn), n.; pl. -PHA (-fä). [Gr., vinegar saucer, fr. oxys acid + the root of baptein to dip, baphē dipping.] 1. Gr. Archæol. A vase or vessel for holding sauces, etc. The shape is not precisely known, but the vessel has been wrongly identified with the bell-shaped crater.

2. See MEASURE, Table.

ox'y·blep'si·a (ŏk'sĭ·blĕp'sĭ·ä), n. [NL., fr. Gr. oxyblepsia, fr. oxys sharp + blepein to see.] Med. Acuteness of sight.

ox'y·bro'mide (-brō'mīd; -mĭd; 157), n. Also -mid. [2d oxy- + bromide.] Chem. A compound of oxygen and bromine with an element or radical; as, phosphorus oxybromide, $POBr_3$.

ox'y·bu·tyr'ĭ·a (-bū·tĭr'ĭ·ä), n. [NL.] Med. The presence of hydroxybutyric acid or its salts in the urine.

ox'y·cal'ci·um (-kăl'sĭ·ŭm), adj. [2d oxy- + calcium.] Of or pertaining to oxygen and calcium; as, the oxycalcium light or limelight.

ox'y·cal'o·rim'e·ter (-kăl'ō·rĭm'ē·tĕr), n. A calorimeter in which the energy content of a substance is determined by the direct measurement of the oxygen consumed.

ox'y·cel'lu·lose (-sĕl'ū·lōs), n. [2d oxy- + cellulose.] Chem. Any of a group of substances regarded as oxidized cellulose, occurring in wood fiber, or obtained artificially by oxidizing cellulose. They fix basic dyes.

ox'y·ceph'a·ly (-sĕf'ä·lĭ), n. [1st oxy- + Gr. kephalē head.] Craniol. Loftiness of skull due to early synostosis of the parietal and occipital bones with compensating growth in the region of the anterior fontanel. — ox'y·ce·phal'ic (-sē·făl'ĭk), adj.—ox'y·ceph'a·lism (-sĕf'ä·lĭz'm), n. — ox'y·ceph'a·lous (-lŭs), adj.

ox'y·chlo'ric (-klō'rĭk; 181), ox'y·chlo'rine (-rēn; -rĭn), adj. [2d oxy- + chloric.] Chem. Of, pertaining to, or designating, certain compounds containing oxygen and chlorine; as, oxychloric acid, or perchloric acid. See PERCHLORIC. — ox'y·chlo'rate (-rāt) (see -ATE, 3 b), n.

ox'y·chlo'ride (-rīd; -rĭd; 157), n. Also -rid. [2d oxy- + chloride.] Chem. A compound of oxygen and chlorine with an element or radical; as, phosphorus oxychloride, $POCl_3$.

ox'y·chro'ma·tin (-krō'mä·tĭn), n. [2d oxy- + chromatin.] Biol. Oxyphilic chromatin, often held to include the linin. — ox'y·chro·mat'ic (-krō·măt'ĭk), ox'y·chro'ma·tin'ic (-krō'mä·tĭn'ĭk), adj.

Ox'y·coc'cus (-kŏk'ŭs), n. [NL., fr. 1st oxy- + Gr. kokkos grain, seed.] Bot. A small genus of trailing, prostrate evergreen shrubs, the cranberries, family Vacciniaceæ, natives of the Northern Hemisphere. They have small thick leaves and drooping red or pink flowers, succeeded by many-seeded berries. See CRANBERRY, 2.

ox'y·crate (ŏk'sĭ·krāt), n. [Gr. oxykraton, fr. oxys acid + kerannynai to mix.] Pharm. A mixture of water and vinegar.

ox'y·cy'a·nide (-sī'ä·nīd; -nĭd; 157), n. Also -nid. [2d oxy- + cyanide.] Chem. A compound of oxygen and cyanogen with an element or radical; as, mercuric oxycyanide, $Hg_2O(CN)_2$.

ox'y·dac'tyl (-dăk'tĭl), adj. [1st oxy- + dactyl.] Zool. Having slender, tapered digits.

Ox'y·den'drum (-dĕn'drŭm), n. [NL., fr. 1st oxy- + Gr. dendron tree.] Bot. A genus of North American trees (family Ericaceæ). O. arboreum, the sorrel tree, is the only known species.

ox'y·di'act (-dĭ'ăkt), adj. [1st oxy- + di- + Gr. aktis ray.] Zool. Having three axes, but only two rays developed; — said of certain sponge spicules.

ox'y·es·the'sĭ·a (ŏk'sĭ·ĕs·thē'zhĭ·ä; -zhä; -zĭ·ä), n. [NL., fr. 1st oxy- + esthesia.] Med. Abnormal acuteness of sensation.

ox'y·e'ther (-ē'thĕr), adj. [2d oxy- + ether.] Of or pertaining to a mixture of oxygen and ether vapor. Cf. OXYHYDROGEN.

Ox'ford·shire Down (ŏks'fĕrd·shĭr; -shēr). = OXFORD DOWN.

ox'-head'ed, adj. See -HEADED.

ox'heal', n. = BEAR'S-FOOT a.

ox'hoft' (ŏks'hôft'), n. sing. & pl. [G., fr. D. See OKSHOOFD.] See MEASURE, Table.

ox'huv'ud (-hōōv'ŭd), n. sing. & pl. [Sw., fr. D. See OKSHOOFD.] See MEASURE, Table.

ox'id (ŏk'sĭd). Var. of OXIDE.

ox'i·di·za'tion (ŏk'sĭ·dĭ·zā'shŭn; -dĭ·zā'shŭn), n. = OXIDATION.

ox'i·dize'ment, n. = OXIDATION.

ox'i·diz'ing (ŏk'sĭ·dīz'ĭng), pres. part. & verbal n. of OXIDIZE. — oxidizing flame. See FLAME, n., 1.

ox'i·do·re·duc'tase (ŏk'sĭ·dō·rē·dŭk'tās), n. Biochem. = DEHYDROGENASE.

ox'i·mi'no- (ŏk'sĭ·m·ē'nō-; ŏks·ĭm'ĭ·nō-). = OXIMIDO-.

ox'i·salt. Var. of OXYSALT.

ox'i·tone. Oxytone. Ref. Sp.

ox'land, n. Eng. Hist. An oxgang. = BOVATE.

ox'like', adj. See -LIKE.

ox·on'ic ac'id (ŏks·ŏn'ĭk). [oxygen + carb*onic.*] = ALLANTOXANIC ACID.

ox'y·ac'id (ŏk'sĭ·ăs'ĭd), n. [2d oxy- + acid.] a = OXYGEN ACID. b = HYDROXY ACID.

oxy acid. = OXYACID.

ox'y·es·the'sĭ·a. Var. of OXYESthesia.

Ox·yb'a·phus (ŏks·ĭb'ä·fŭs), n. [NL., fr. Gr. oxybaphos vessel, vase; — from shape of involucre.] Syn. of ALLIONIA.

ox'y·ben'zene, n. [2d oxy- + benzene.] Chem. = PHENOL.

ox'y·ben·zoic ac'id (ŏk'sĭ·bĕn·zō'ĭk). Chem. = HYDROXYBENZOIC ACID.

ox'y·bu·tyr'ic ac'id (ŏk'sĭ·bū·tĭr'ĭk). [2d oxy- + butyric.] Chem. = HYDROXYBUTYRIC ACID.

ox'yd, ox'yde. Vars. of OXIDE.

ox'y·dant, ox'y·dase, ox'y·date, ox'y·da'tion, ox'y·de, ox'y·dize, etc. Vars. of OXIDANT, OXIDASE, etc.

ox'y·der'ci·cal, adj. [Gr. oxyderkikos, fr. oxys sharp + root of derkesthai to see.] Making the sight sharp. Obs.

ox'y·di'a·zole. Chem. Var. of OXADIAZOLE.

ox'y·fat'ty ac'id (ŏk'sĭ·făt'ĭ). A hydroxy derivative of a fatty acid, as lactic acid.

ox'y·flu'o·ride (-flōō'ō·rīd; -rĭd; 157), n. Also -id. [2d oxy- + fluoride.] Chem. A compound of oxygen and fluorine with an element or radical.

ox'y·gas' (-găs'), adj. Of or pertaining to a mixture of oxygen and industrial gas. Cf. OXYHYDROGEN.

ox'y·gen (ŏk'sĭ·jĕn), n. [F. oxygène, fr. Gr. oxys sharp, acid + root of gignesthai to be born. So called by Lavoisier because supposed by him to be an essential part of every acid. See 1st OXY-; -GEN.] 1. Chem. An element occurring free as a colorless, tasteless, odorless gas (ordinary oxygen) in the atmosphere, of which it forms about 23 per cent by weight and about 21 per cent by volume, being slightly heavier than nitrogen. Symbol, O; at. no., 8; at. wt., 16.000. Oxygen is the most abundant of all the elements on the earth's surface, for, in addition to its occurrence free in air, it forms, in combination, eight-ninths by weight of water and nearly one-half by weight of the rocks composing the earth's crust, being a constituent of silica, the silicates, the carbonates, the sulphates, etc. It is also a constituent of a large proportion of organic compounds. It is indispensable in respiration. Ordinary oxygen was discovered in 1774 by Priestley (who called it dephlogisticated air) and independently by Scheele. The pure gas may be prepared by heating potassium chlorate (best with addition of manganese dioxide), and by various other methods. The chief industrial methods are the liquefaction of air and the electrolysis of water. Sp. gr. referred to air, 1.105. Weight of a liter, 1.429 g. Molecular formula, O_2. It is used in oxyacetylene and oxyhydrogen blowpipes, in metal cutting, in liquid-oxygen explosives, in purifying illuminating gas, in medicine to aid respiration, and for a few other purposes. Oxygen can be condensed to a pale-blue liquid boiling at −183° C., and to a pale-blue solid melting at −218.4° C. The liquid is strongly magnetic. Ordinary oxygen is moderately active at ordinary temperatures, and its activity is greatly increased by heat. It combines with all the elements except those of the argon group and fluorine, the process being called oxidation, of which ordinary combustion is only an intense form. The element oxygen is commonly bivalent (but see OXONIUM). It is a constituent of all but a very few acids (as hydrochloric, hydrobromic, etc.), and, in general, the greater the proportion of oxygen with which an element combines, the more acidic does it become. Oxygen is also known in an allotropic, more active form, ozone (which see). See also OXOZONE.

2. Chlorine used in bleaching. Manufacturing Name.

ox'y·gen–a·cet'y·lene cut'ting. Gas cutting with oxygen and acetylene.

oxygen–acetylene welding. Gas welding with oxygen and acetylene.

oxygen acid. Chem. An acid containing oxygen, as chloric acid, sulphuric acid.

ox·yg'e·nant (ŏk·sĭj'ē·nănt), n. [F. oxygénant, pres. part.] An oxidizing agent.

ox'y·gen·ate (ŏk'sĭ·jĕn·āt), v. t.; -ĀT'ED (-āt'ĕd; -ĭd; 119); -AT'ING (-āt'ĭng). [F. oxygéner.] Chem. To impregnate or combine with oxygen; to treat with oxygen; to oxidize; as, to oxygenate the blood. — ox'y·gen·a'tion (-ā'shŭn), n.

ox'y·gen·at'ed wa'ter (-āt'ĕd; -ĭd; 119). a Water impregnated with oxygen gas. b Hydrogen peroxide.

ox'y·gen·a'tor (-ā'tĕr), n. Something which oxygenates, as a lung; oxidizer.

ox'y·gen'er·a'tor (-jĕn'ĕr·ā'tĕr), n. A machine for making oxygen.

ox'y·gen–hy'dro·gen weld'ing. Gas welding with oxygen and hydrogen. The heat of the flame produced, estimated at over 5,000° F., is sufficient to consume the diamond and easily fuse platinum. See GAS WELDING.

ox'y·gen'ic (ŏk'sĭ·jĕn'ĭk), adj. Chem. Pertaining to, consisting of, containing, or resembling, oxygen. — ox'y·gen·ic'i·ty (-jĕn·ĭs'ĭ·tĭ), n.

ox'y·ge'ni·um (ŏk'sĭ·jē'nĭ·ŭm), n. [NL.] Pharm. The Latinized form of OXYGEN. Rare.

ox'y·gen·ize (ŏk'sĭ·jĕn·īz), v. t.; -IZED (-īzd); -IZ'ING (-īz'ĭng). To oxidize; to oxygenate. — ox'y·gen·iz'a·ble (-īz'ā·b'l), adj. — ox'y·gen·iz'er (-īz'ĕr), n.

ox·yg'e·nous (ŏks·ĭj'ē·nŭs), adj. Oxygenic.

oxygen ratio. = ACIDITY COEFFICIENT.

ox'y·geu'si·a (ŏk'sĭ·gū'sĭ·ā), n. [NL., fr. 1st -oxy- + Gr. geusis taste.] Med. Excessive or morbid acuteness of sense of taste.

ox·yg'na·thous (ŏks·ĭg'nā·thŭs), adj. [oxy- + -gnathous.] Zool. Having smooth or nearly smooth jaws, as certain land snails and slugs.

ox'y·gon (ŏk'sĭ·gŏn), n. [Gr. oxygōnios acute-angled, fr. oxys sharp + gōnia angle.] A triangle having three acute angles. — ox·yg'o·nal (ŏks·ĭg'ō·năl), ox'y·go'ni·al (ŏk'sĭ·gō'nĭ·ăl), adj. All Obs.

ox'y·hal'ide (-hăl'ĭd; -īd; -hā'lĭd; -lĭd; 157), n. Also -id (-īd). [oxy- + halogen + -ide.] Chem. A compound of oxygen and a halogen with an element or radical, as the oxychlorides, oxybromides, etc. — ox'y·hal'oid (-hăl'oid; hā'loid), adj.

ox'y·hem'a·tin, ox'y·haem'a·tin (ŏk'sĭ·hĕm'ā·tĭn; -hē'mā·tĭn), n. [2d oxy- + hematin.] Biochem. Hematin in combination with oxygen.

ox'y·hex·ac'tine (-hĕks·ăk'tĭn; -tīn), n. [1st oxy- + hexactine.] Zool. A hexactinal sponge spicule whose rays end in sharp points.

ox'y·hex·as'ter (-hĕks·ăs'tĕr), n. [1st oxy- + hexaster.] Zool. A hexaster whose rays end in sharp points.

ox'y·hy'drate (-hī'drāt), n. Chem. A hydroxide.

ox'y·hy'dric (-drĭk), adj. a Composed of oxygen and hydrogen in combination; as, oxyhydric acid (a name sometimes given to water). b = OXYHYDROGEN.

ox'y·hy'dro·gen (-hī'drō·jĕn), adj. [2d oxy- + hydrogen.] Chem. Of, pertaining to, or consisting of, a mixture of oxygen and hydrogen. — n. Oxyhydrogen gas.

oxyhydrogen blowpipe or torch. A welding blowpipe using oxygen and hydrogen. See WELDING BLOWPIPE.

oxyhydrogen light. A light produced by the incandescence of some substance, esp. lime, in the oxyhydrogen flame. See LIMELIGHT, 1.

oxyhydrogen microscope. A form of microscope arranged so as to use the oxyhydrogen light as a source of illumination.

ox'y·i'o·dide (ŏk'sĭ·ī'ō·dīd; -dĭd; 157), adj. Also -did. [2d oxy- + iodide.] Chem. A compound of oxygen and iodine, with an element or radical.

ox'y·ke'tone (-kē'tōn), n. [2d oxy- + ketone.] Chem. A hydroxy derivative of a ketone. Cf. KETOL.

ox'yl (ŏk'sĭl), n. [2d oxy- + -yl.] Chem. Any radical having an oxygen atom with one free valence.

ox'y·lu·cif'er·in (ŏk'sĭ·lū·sĭf'ĕr·ĭn), n. [2d oxy- + luciferin.] Biochem. The nonluminous oxidation product of luciferin (which see), yielding luciferin under the reducing action of light.

ox'y·mel (ŏk'sĭ·mĕl), n. [L., fr. Gr. oxymeli, fr. oxys acid + meli honey.] Pharm. A mixture of honey and dilute acetic acid, used as an excipient. Cf. HONEY, n., 7.

ox'y·meth'yl·ene (ŏk'sĭ·mĕth'ĭ·lēn), n. [2d oxy- + methylene.] Chem. See FORMALDEHYDE.

ox'y·mo'ron (-mō'rŏn; 181), n.; pl. -RA (-rā). [NL., fr. Gr. oxymōron, fr. oxymōros pointedly foolish, fr. oxys sharp + mōros foolish.] Rhet. A combination for epigrammatic effect of contradictory or incongruous words (cruel kindness; laborious idleness).

ox'y·mu'ri·ate (-mū'rĭ·āt), n. [2d oxy- + muriate.] Old Chem. A salt of "oxymuriatic acid"; a chloride or chlorate; as, oxymuriate of mercury (mercuric chloride), of potash (potassium chlorate), etc.

ox'y·mu'ri·at'ic (-ăt'ĭk), adj. [2d oxy- + muriatic.] Old Chem. Pertaining to, or consisting of, oxidized muriatic (hydrochloric) acid, that is, chlorine; as, oxymuriatic acid, oxymuriatic gas, names given to chlorine before it was known to be an element.

oxymuriatic, or oxymuriate, matches. Matches tipped with oxymuriate of potash (potassium chlorate).

ox'y·neu'rine (ŏk'sĭ·nū'rēn; -rĭn), n. Also -rin. Betaine. See BETAINE a.

ox'y·ni'trate (ŏk'sĭ·nī'trāt), n. [2d oxy- + nitrate.] Chem. A compound of oxygen and the nitrate group with an element or radical; as, bismuth oxynitrate, $BiONO_3$.

ox·yn'tic (ŏks·ĭn'tĭk), adj. [Gr. oxynein to make acid.] Secreting acid; — applied esp. to the parietal cells of the gastric glands, or the entire glands. See CARDIAC GLANDS a.

ox'y·o·phit'ic (ŏk'sĭ·ō·fĭt'ĭk), adj. [1st oxy- + ophitic.] Designating a variety of ophitic texture in which plagioclase laths are inserted in a mesostasis of quartz and orthoclase. Cf. BASIOPHITIC.

ox'y·o'pi·a (ŏk'sĭ·ō'pĭ·ā), ox'y·o'py (ŏk'sĭ·ō'pĭ), n. [NL. oxyopia, fr. 1st oxy- + -opia.] Med. Unusual acuteness of sight.

Ox'y·op'i·dae (-ŏp'ĭ·dē), n. pl. [NL., fr. Gr. oxyōpēs sharp-eyed.] Zool. A family of diurnal hunting spiders with eight eyes and long legs. They do not use webs to trap their prey.

ox'y·os·phre'si·a (-ŏs·frē'zhĭ·ā; -zĭ·ā), n. [NL., fr. 1st oxy- + Gr. osphrēsis sense of smell.] Med. Great acuteness of smell.

ox'y·pet'al·ous (-pĕt'ăl·ŭs), adj. [1st oxy- + -petalous.] Having sharp-pointed petals.

ox'y·phile (ŏk'sĭ·fīl; -fĭl), ox'y·phil (-fĭl), adj. [1st oxy- + -phile, -phil.] Biol. Oxyphilic. — n. An oxyphilic substance, organism, cell, etc.; specif., one of a group of leucocytes having granules staining with acid dyes.

ox'y·phil'ic (ŏk'sĭ·fĭl'ĭk), ox·yph'i·lous (ŏks·ĭf'ĭ·lŭs), adj. [See OXYPHILE.] Biol. Staining readily with acid stains, as eosin; hence, often, eosinophilic.

ox'y·pho'ni·a (ŏk'sĭ·fō'nĭ·ā), ox·yph'o·ny (ŏks·ĭf'ō·nĭ), n. [NL. oxyphonia, fr. Gr. oxyphōnia, fr. oxys shrill + phōnē voice.] Med. Shrillness of voice.

ox'y·phos'phate (-fŏs'fāt), n. [2d oxy- + phosphate.] Chem. a Obs. A higher phosphate. b A compound of oxygen and the phosphate group (PO_4) with an element or radical, specif. one of zinc used by dentists as a filling.

ox'y·phyte (ŏk'sĭ·fīt), n. [oxy- + -phyte.] A plant growing in soil which lacks oxygen.

ox'y·pyc'nos (-pĭk'nŏs), n. [Gr. oxypyknos, adj., fr. oxys sharp, high + pyknon a small interval.] Gr. & Medieval Music. a A tetrachord having the half step at its upper end. b A mode composed of such tetrachords.

ox'y·quin'o·line (-kwĭn'ō·lēn; -lĭn), n. Also -lin. [2d oxy- + quinoline.] Chem. A hydroxy derivative of quinoline; specif., carbostyril.

oxyquinoline sulphate. Pharm. A yellow crystalline compound, $(C_9H_7NO)_2.H_2SO_4$, the normal sulphate of 8-hydroxy-quinoline, used as an antiseptic.

ox'y·rhine (ŏk'sĭ·rīn; -rĭn), adj. [1st oxy- + -rhine.] Zool. a Having a sharp-pointed rostrum, or snout. b Having an acute sense of smell.

ox'y·rhi'nous (-rī'nŭs), adj. Oxyrhine.

ox'y·rhynch (ŏk'sĭ·rĭngk), n. [1st oxy- + Gr. rhynchos snout.] Zool. a A crab having a pointed rostrum; one of the Oxyrrhyncha of Maioidea. b Also ox'y·rhyn'chus (-rĭng'kŭs). The sacred fish Mormyrus oxyrhynchus.

ox'y·rhyn'chous (-rĭng'kŭs), adj. Sharp-snouted; sharp-billed.

Ox'y·rhyn'chus pa·py'ri (ŏk'sĭ·rĭng'kŭs). The collections of papyri found at Oxyrhynchus (see Gaz.) in 1896–97, and in 1905–06, by B. P. Grenfell and A. S. Hunt. Several thousand in number, they include literary manuscripts, both classic Greek and early Christian, of importance, and also a mass of nonliterary, commercial documents, letters, etc., from the 3d century B.C. to the 7th century A.D.

Ox'y·rhyn'cha (ŏk'sĭ·rĭng'kā), n. pl. Also Ox'y·rhyn'cha. [NL., fr. 1st oxy- + Gr. rhynchos snout.] Zool. A superfamily or other division of crabs having typically a globose or subtriangular carapace with a conspicuously projecting rostrum, nine pairs of gills, and the male genital apertures in the basal segments of the last pair of legs. It includes many species mostly known as spider crabs. Syn. Maioidea. — ox'y·rhyn'chid, ox'y·rhyn'chid (-kĭd), adj.

ox'y·salt' (ŏk'sĭ·sôlt'), n. [2d oxy- + salt.] Chem. A salt of an oxyacid (oxygen acid), as a sulphate.

Ox'y·sto'ma·ta (ŏk'sĭ·stō'mā·tā; -stŏm'ā·tā), n. pl. [NL., fr. 1st oxy- + Gr. stoma, stomatos, mouth.] Zool. A small superfamily or other division of crabs having the buccal area produced anteriorly and more or less acutely triangular, and almost no rostrum. Cf. CALAPPA. — ox'y·stom'a·tous (-stŏm'ā·tŭs; -stō'mā-), adj. — ox'y·stome (ŏk'sĭ·stōm), adj. & n.

ox'y·sul'phate (-sŭl'fāt), n. [2d oxy- + sulphate.] Chem. a Obs. A higher sulphate; as, oxysulphate of iron (ferric sulphate). b A compound of oxygen and the sulphate group (SO_4) with an element or radical.

ox'y·sul'phide (-sŭl'fĭd; -fīd; 157), n. Also -phid, -fide, -fid. Chem. A compound of oxygen and sulphur with an element or radical. Oxysulphides may be regarded as sulphides in which part of the sulphur is replaced by oxygen.

ox'y·to'ci·a (-tō'shĭ·ā), n. [NL.] Med. Quick childbirth. — ox·yt'ō·cous (ŏks·ĭt'ō·kŭs), adj.

ox'y·to'cic (-tō'sĭk; -tŏs'ĭk), adj. [1st oxy- + Gr. tokos birth.] Med. a Pertaining to or designating the hastening of parturition. b Loosely, stimulating any plain muscle.

ox'y·to'cin (ŏk'sĭ·tō'sĭn), n. α-Hypophamine. See HYPOPHAMINE.

ox'y·tone (ŏk'sĭ·tōn), adj. [Gr. oxytonos, fr. oxys sharp + tonos tone.] Gram. Having an acute accent on the last syllable. — n. An oxytone word.

ox'y·tone, v. t. To pronounce or mark as an oxytone.

ox'y·to·ne'sis (ŏk'sĭ·tō·nē'sĭs), n. [NL., fr. Gr. oxytonēsis marking with an acute accent.] Pronunciation or marking as an oxytone.

ox'y·ton'i·cal (-tŏn'ĭ·kăl), adj. Gr. Gram. Oxytone; pertaining to oxytones.

ox'y·ton·ize (ŏk'sĭ·tŏn·īz), v. t. To oxytone.

Ox·yt'ri·cha (ŏks·ĭt'rĭ·kā), n. [NL., fr. oxy- + -tricha.] Zool. A widely distributed genus of ciliated protozoans, order Hypotricha, with eight frontal, five ventral and undeveloped caudal cirri.

Ox·yt'ro·pis (-rō·pĭs), n. [NL., fr. 1st oxy- + Gr. tropis keel.] Bot. A large, widely distributed, genus of often shrubby herbs of the pea family (Fabaceae) with odd-pinnate leaves, and racemose or spicate flowers. The pealike corolla has a clawed petal. A few species are poisonous to cattle. Syn. Aragallus.

ox·yt'y·lote (ŏks·ĭt'ĭ·lōt), n. [1st oxy- + Gr. tylos knot, knob.] Zool. A sponge spicule shaped like a common pin. — ox·yt'y·lo·tate (-lō·tāt), adj.

ox'y·u·ri'a·sis (ŏk'sĭ·ū·rī'ā·sĭs), n. [NL., fr. Oxyuris, type genus (fr. 1st oxy- + Gr. oura tail) + -iasis.] Infestation with pinworms of the family Ox'y·u'ri·dae (ŏk'sĭ·ū'rĭ·dē) (type genus Ox'y·u'ris [-ū'rĭs]), as Enterobius vermicularis of man or O. equi in the caecum of the horse.

ox'y·u'ri·cide (ŏk'sĭ·ū'rĭ·sīd), n. [Oxyuris + -cide.] Med. A substance that kills pinworms (Oxyuridae).

ox'y·weld'ing, n. Oxygen-acetylene welding.

oy, oye (oi), n. [Gael. ogha, odha, grandchild.] A grandchild; also, formerly, a nephew or niece. Scot.

O·ya'na (ō·yä'nä), n. An Indian of a Cariban tribe of the borderlands of Brazil and the Guianas.

oys'ter (ois'tĕr), n. [ME. oistre, fr. OF. oistre (F. huître), fr. L. ostrea, ostreum, fr. Gr. ostreon; akin to Gr. ostrakon hard shell, osteon bone. See OSSEOUS; cf. ASTACUS, ASTREA, OSPREY, OSTRACIZE.] 1. Any marine bivalve mollusk of the genus Ostrea or family Ostreidae. The oyster has a rough, irregular shell, closed by a single adductor muscle. The foot is small or wanting, and there is no siphon. Oysters are found lying on the bottom, or adhering to stones or other objects, in shallow water along the seacoasts or in brackish water in the mouths of rivers. Their food consists of minute plants and animals carried to them by the current. The American oyster (Ostrea virginica) of the Atlantic and Gulf coasts of North America, the European oyster (Ostrea edulis), and the native species (Ostrea lurida) of the Pacific coast of North America are the most important as food, the first two being extensively cultivated.

Oyster with the right Valve of the Shell and the right Mantle Lobe removed. a Muscle; b Gills; c c' Mantle; d Palpi; e Mouth; h Anus; i Intestine; f Liver.

2. Any of various other bivalve mollusks more or less resembling the true oyster, as the pearl oysters (genera Avicula and Pinctada) or the Bermuda oyster (Margaritophora radiata), which is used as food in Bermuda.

3. The delicate morsel contained in a concavity of the pelvic bone on each side of the lower part of the back of a fowl.

4. An extremely taciturn person. Slang.

5. A croquette, usually sautéed; as, corn oyster.

6. The color oyster white.

oys'ter (ois'tĕr), v. i. To gather or dredge oysters.

oyster agaric. = OYSTER MUSHROOM.

oys'ter·age (ois'tĕr·ĭj), n. An oyster bed.

oyster bar. A bar at which oysters are served.

oyster bay. A place, as a restaurant, where oysters and other sea food are served.

Oyster Bay pine. An Australian cypress pine (Callitris rhomboidea); also, the related C. oblonga.

oys'ter·bird' (ois'tĕr·bûrd'), n. a An oyster catcher b The sanderling. Local, Texas.

oyster catcher. Any of certain wading birds of the widely distributed genus Haematopus. They are from 16 to 20 inches long, and the stout legs and heavy wedge-shaped bill are usually pinkish or bright red. The common species of Europe, Asia, and northern Africa (H. ostralegus) and that of the American Atlantic coast (H. palliatus) have the plumage chiefly or entirely black and white. The black oyster catcher (H.

Oyster Catcher (Haematopus ostralegus).

oz'y·gen·ize'ment, n. = OXIDATION.

oz'y·he'mo·cy'a·nin (ŏk'sĭ·hē'mō·sī'ā·nĭn; -hēm'ō-), oz'y·he'ma·cy'a·nin (-hē'mā-; -hēm'ā-), n. Also ox'y·hae'-. [2d oxy- + hemocyanin, hemacyanin.] Biochem. See HEMOCYANIN.

oz'y·he'mo·glo'bin, oz'y·hae'mo· (-hē'mō·glō'bĭn; -hēm'ō-), n. [2d oxy- + hemoglobin.] See HEMOGLOBIN.

Ox'y·la·brac'i·dae (-lā·brăs'ĭ·dē), Ox'y·la'brax (-lā'brăks). Zool. Syns. of CENTROPOMIDAE, CENTROPOMUS.

Ox'y·lus (ŏk'sĭ·lŭs), n. [Gr. Oxylos.] See HERACLIDAE.

oxymuriate of tin. See STANNIC CHLORIDE.

ox'y·quin'a·sep'tol (ŏk'sĭ·kwĭn'ā·sĕp'tŏl; -tōl), n. = DIAPHTHERIN.

ox'y·ton. Var. of OXYTONE.

o'yes'ses, n., pl. of OYEZ.

bachmani) of both coasts of the North Pacific is entirely brownish black.

oyster crab. A crab (Pinnotheres ostreum) which lives as a commensal in the gill cavity of the oyster.

Oyster Crab. Nat. size.

oyster cracker. A small salted cracker for serving with oyster stew, soups, etc.

oyster culture. The cultivation of oysters in prepared beds. — oys'ter-cul'tur·ist, n.

oyster dredge. A dredge having a heavy iron frame with strong teeth along its lower lip and a bag of strong cord, used in taking oysters in deep water.

oyster drill. = 1st DRILL, 5.

oys'ter·er (-tĕr·ĕr), n. A gatherer or seller of oysters; a boat used in oyster fishing.

oys'ter·fish' (ois'tĕr·fĭsh'), n.; pl. -FISH, -FISHES (-fĭsh'ĕz; -ĭz; 119). See PLURAL, Note. a The tautog. b The toadfish (Opsanus tau).

oyster fork. See FORK, 2.

oyster fungus. = OYSTER MUSHROOM.

oyster grass. U. S. a Kelp. b Sea lettuce.

oys'ter·green' (ois'tĕr·grēn'), n. Oyster grass.

oys'ter·ing, n. 1. The act or business of taking oysters for the market.

2. Furniture. a The matching, as on two side-by-side doors of a bookcase, of two oval-grained pieces of wood which are split from one piece and suggest the shape of an opened oyster. b A kind of veneering, as on a table top, consisting of closely fitted pieces of attractively grained wood cut in diagonal section.

oys'ter·ling (ois'tĕr·lĭng), n. A young or small oyster.

oys'ter·man (-măn), n.; pl. -MEN (-mĕn). a A gatherer, breeder, or seller of oysters. b A vessel used for gathering oysters.

oyster mushroom. a An edible agaric (Pleurotus ostreatus) growing in shelving masses on dead wood; — so called from the resemblance to an oyster shell. b Any of several related species of this genus.

oys'ter·ous (ois'tĕr·ŭs), adj. Full of or like oysters.

oyster plover. Oyster catcher.

oyster rake. A long-handled rake, usually with curved teeth for gathering oysters in water of moderate depth.

oys'ter·root' (ois'tĕr·rōōt'; 200), n. Salsify.

oys'ter·shell' (-shĕl'), n. Crushed or ground oyster shells, used as a mineral supplement, esp. in feeding poultry.

oys'ter–shell' bark louse. The oyster-shell scale.

oyster–shell scale. An abundant, widely distributed scale insect (Lepidosaphes ulmi) which infests and greatly injures various trees and shrubs.

oyster tongs. A pair of wooden tongs, twelve to twenty feet long, bearing opposing rakelike baskets for gathering oysters.

oyster wench. A girl who deals in oysters. Archaic.

oyster white. A color, yellow in hue, of low saturation and very high brilliance.

oys'ter-wife' (ois'tĕr·wīf'), n. An oysterwoman. Archaic.

oys'ter-wom'an (ois'tĕr·wŏŏm'ăn), n. A woman who sells oysters.

O'zark (ō'zärk), n. [Corrupt. fr. F. Aux Arcs (taken as At the Bows, whence Bow Indians, former name of the Quapaw), early name for Arkansas Post, Ark., abbr. fr. F. aux Arkansas the Quapaw, lit., at or among the Arkansas, fr. Illinois Akansea.] An Indian of a division of the Quapaw. See QUAPAW.

o'zark·ite (-īt), n. [From the Ozark Mts., Ark.] Mineral. A white massive variety of thomsonite.

Ozark series. Geol. A series including Cambrian and Ordovician formations in Missouri.

Ozark State. Missouri; — a nickname.

o·ze'na, o·zae'na (ō·zē'nȧ), n. [NL., fr. L. ozaena, fr. Gr. ozaina, fr. ozein to smell.] Med. A discharge of fetid matter from the nostril, usually associated with chronic inflammation of the soft parts and disease of the bones of the nose.

O·zī'as (ō·zī'ăs), n. [LL. & Gr., fr. Heb. 'Uzzīyā.] Lit. strength of the Lord; — masc. proper name.

ozo-. 1. A combining form, Greek ozo-, from ozein, to smell, meaning a bad smell, as in *ozo*cerite.

2. Chem. = OZONO-.

o'zo·brome (ō'zō·brōm), adj. Photog. Designating a process of making a carbon print from a developed silver image, by bleaching the latter in a solution of a dichromate, a ferricyanide and a bromide and bringing into contact with carbon pigmented tissue, after which the tissue is detached, developed with warm water, and printed.

o·zo'ce·rite (ō·zō'kĕ·rīt; -sĕ·rīt; ō'zō·sē'rĭt), n. [Gr. ozein to smell + kēros wax.] Mineral. A waxlike mineral, colorless or white when pure, but often greenish, yellowish, or brown. Some varieties have an unpleasant odor. Ozocerite is a mixture of hydrocarbons. It is used in making ceresin, candles, etc., and in taking an impression to be electrotyped. Called also ader wax.

o'zo·nate (ō'zō·nāt), n. [ozone + -ate, 3 b.] Chem. Any of a series of yellow or orange salts, formed by the action of oxygen containing ozone on alkalies. On standing, they change slowly into the corresponding tetroxides.

o'zo·na'tion (ō'zō·nā'shŭn), n. Chem. Act of converting into, treating with, or producing, ozone; ozonization.

o'zone (ō'zōn; ō·zōn'), n. [Gr. ozein to smell. See OPOR.] 1. Chem. A faintly blue, gaseous, allotropic form of oxygen, present in minute amounts in the atmosphere, esp. in the upper regions, and obtained (usually much diluted) by the silent discharge of electricity in ordinary oxygen or in air, and by other methods; — so called from its peculiar odor, which recalls that of weak chlorine. It has the molecular formula O_3, being one and one half times as dense as ordinary oxygen gas. It is a much more powerful oxidizer than oxygen gas, and comparatively unstable. It may be condensed to a deep-blue magnetic liquid boiling at −112° C. Ozone is used commercially for sterilizing water, purifying air, bleaching, etc.

2. Hence, pure and refreshing air. Colloq.

o'zoned (ō'zōnd; ō·zōnd'; 66), adj. Provided with, or having, ozone.

ozone paper. Chem. Paper coated with starch and potassium iodide. It turns blue when exposed to oxidizers, as ozone.

o·zon'ic (ō·zŏn'ĭk; ō·zō'nĭk), adj. Pertaining to, like, or containing, ozone.

ozonic ether. A solution of hydrogen peroxide in ether.

o'zo·nide (ō'zō·nīd), n. Also -nid. Chem. a Obs. A compound, as lead dioxide, yielding ozone on decomposition. b A compound of ozone. Such compounds are formed esp. with various unsaturated organic compounds and are useful in determining the number and position of double bonds. They are in general sirupy or crystalline explosive compounds which decompose in water and are believed to contain the unstable grouping >C̄-O-O-O-C̄<. Perozonides (as the oxozonides) are characterized by the presence of four instead of three oxygen atoms.

o'zo·nif'er·ous (-nĭf'ĕr·ŭs), adj. [ozone + -ferous.] Bearing or producing ozone.

o·zo'ni·fy (ō·zō'nĭ·fī), v. t. [ozone + -fy.] To ozonize. — o·zo'ni·fi·ca'tion (-fĭ·kā'shŭn), n.

O·zo'ni·um (ō·zō'nĭ·ŭm), n. [NL., fr. Gr. ozos a branch + -onium.] Bot. A form genus of fungi of the group Mycelia-Sterilia.

o'zo·nize (ō'zō·nīz), v. t.; -NIZED (-nīzd); -NIZ'ING (-nīz'-ĭng). Chem. a To convert into ozone, as oxygen. b To treat or impregnate with ozone. — v. i. To become converted into ozone. — o'zo·ni·za'tion (-nĭ·zā'shŭn; -nĭ-zā'shŭn), n.

o'zo·niz'er (ō'zō·nīz'ĕr), n. Chem. One that ozonizes; esp., an apparatus for converting ordinary oxygen into ozone, usually by passing a silent electric discharge through a current of oxygen or air.

o'zo·nous (ō'zō·nŭs), adj. Pert. to, or containing, ozone.

o'zos·to'mi·a (ō'zŏs·tō'mĭ·ȧ), n. [NL., fr. Gr. ozostomos having foul breath.] Med. Foulness of breath.

P, p (pē), n.; pl. P's, p's, Ps, ps (pēz). 1. The sixteenth letter of the English alphabet. It comes through the Latin from the Greek (pi), which borrowed it from the Phoenician (Hebrew pe), where it represented the sound which it has ever since retained, that of a voiceless bilabial stopped consonant (English pet), corresponding to the voiced b (bet). P is sometimes silent in English, esp. in the initial combinations pn, ps, pt of words from the Greek (pneumatic; psychic; ptomaine). With h it unites to form the independent digraph ph, which represents the Greek phi and has the value of f in words from that language (phrase, graphic). See Pron., §§ 205–209. In cognate words English p corresponds to German pf, f, Gothic p, Latin b, Greek b, Lithuanian b, as in plow, G. pflug; hip, G. hüfte, Goth. hups, L. cubitum (elbow), G. kybos (loin); deep, G. tief, Goth. diups, Lith. dubus. But b was rare in Indo-European, and English p occurs most frequently in words of Greek, Latin, or French origin. See ALPHABET, GRIMM'S LAW.
2. a An instance of the letter P, p, printed, written, painted, etc. b A printer's type, a stamp, etc., for the letter P, p. c The sound, or any sound of the letter P. d [cap.] In medieval Roman numerals, 400 or, in the form P, 400,000.
3. Anything having the shape of the letter P.
4. As a symbol, used to denote or indicate: a Anyone or anything arbitrarily or conveniently so designated, esp. as the fifteenth or (see K, n., 2 a) the sixteenth in order or class. b Biol. In Mendelian inheritance, parental generation. See PARENTAL, adj., 3. c [cap.] Chess. [no period, P] The pawn.
5. As an abbreviation: see Abbreviations, in Appendix.

P, p (pē), adj. 1. Fifteenth or (see K, adj., 1) sixteenth in order or class; as, Company P.
2. Having the general form of capital P.

p-. Chem. See 1st PARA-, 5.

pa (pä; in some sections pô, pă), n.; pl. PAS (päz; pôz; păz). Papa; — a colloquial or childish form, sometimes regarded as vulgar.

pa, pah (pä), n. [From native name.] A stockaded or fortified native settlement; a native fort; loosely, any native village. New Zealand.

paar (pär), n. [Tamil pār layer of rock, ground.] A mass of sand cemented on the sea bottom into calcareous sandstone through the agency of coral-forming animals and algae. Southern India & Ceylon.

pab'ble (păb'l), v. i. [Imitative.] To make a bubbling noise. Scot.

pa'blo (pä'blō), n. A brown, yellowish red-yellow in hue, of medium saturation and brilliance. Cf. COLOR.

pab'u·lar (păb'ū·lẽr), adj. Also pab'u·lar'y (-lẽr'ĭ; -lẽr·ĭ). [L. pabularis.] Of or pertaining to pabulum. Rare.

pab'u·la'tion (-lā'shŭn), n. [L. pabulatio, fr. pabulari to feed.] Act of feeding; also, pabulum. Rare. — pab'u·la·to'ry (păb'ū·lȧ·tō'rĭ), adj. Rare.

pab'u·lum (păb'ū·lŭm), n. [L. See FOOD.] The means of sustenance to animals or plants; food; nourishment; hence, that which feeds or sustains, as fuel for a fire; also, that on which the mind or soul is nourished; as, intellectual pabulum.

Syn. — Sustenance, support. — PABULUM, ALIMENT, NUTRIMENT are here compared in their figurative senses. PABULUM denotes mental diet or food for the mind; ALIMENT suggests esp. sustenance or support; that is NUTRIMENT which nourishes, or which promotes growth; as, "The new celestial manna . . . this thrice-refined pabulum of transcendental moonshine" (Carlyle); "For the sustentation and aliment of the natural body . . . God hath given meat; . . . for the sustentation and reparation of the world God hath given marriage; . . . the world is one body, and marriage the aliment" (Donne); "If the spark with which Heaven lit my spirit had been with purer nutriment supplied" (Shelley). Cf. FOOD.

pac, pack (păk), n. [Lenape pacu. See SHOEPACK.] A moccasin, usually of oiltanned leather; also, a heavy felt half boot worn in winter by loggers, etc.

pa'ca (pä'kȧ; păk'ȧ), n. [Pg. & Sp., of Tupian origin; cf. Tupi páca, paqua, Guarani pag.] Any large South and Central American rodent of the genus Cuniculus (syn. Coelogenys) esp. C. paca. It is allied to the agouti and is reddish or chocolate brown, spotted with white. The skin is chiefly used for leather.

Paca (Cuniculus paca).

pa'ca·ble (pä'kȧ·b'l; păk'ȧ·b'l), adj. [L. pacare to pacify.] Placable.

Pa'ca·gua'ra (pä'kä·wä'rä; 142), n. An Indian of a group of Panoan tribes of Bolivia and Brazil, of which the Caripunas are the most important.

pa'ca·ra'na (pä'kä·rä'nä), n. [Tupi pacarana, fr. páca paca + rana false. Cf. UMBURANA.] A very rare South American mammal (Dinomys branickii) resembling the paca but having a hairy tail.

pa'cate (pā'kăt), adj. [L. pacatus, past part. of pacare to pacify.] Appeased; pacified. — pa'cate·ly, adv. — pa'cate·ness, n. All Obs.

pa'cate (pā'kăt), v. t. To calm or appease. — pa·ca'tion (pā·kā'shŭn), n. — pa'ca·tive (pā'kȧ·tĭv), adj. All Rare.

pa·cay' (pä·kī'), n. [Sp. pacay, pacai, fr. Quechua paccay, pakai.] a A tree (genus Inga, species uncertain) cultivated in Peru and Ecuador for ornament and for the edible pulp of its pods. b The mesquite. c The angelin.

pa·ca'ya (pä·kä'yä), n. [Sp., prob. of Cen. Am. Ind. origin.] Any Central American palm of the genus Chamaedorea, (family Arecaceae), esp. the low stemless species with edible spadices.

Pac'ca·na'rist (păk'ȧ·nä'rĭst), n. Eccl. Hist. A member of the order of Regular Clerks of the Faith of Jesus, founded by Nicolao Paccanari (or Baccanari) in 1797, and absorbed by the Society of Jesus in 1814.

Pac'chi·o'ni·an (păk'ĭ·ō'nĭ·ăn; 159), adj. Of or described by the Italian anatomist Pacchioni (1665–1726).

Pacchionian body, gland, or granulation. Anat. Any of the small whitish bodies, consisting of enlarged villi of the arachnoid membrane of the brain, protruding into the superior sagittal sinus and into depressions (Pacchionian depressions) in the neighboring bone.

pace (pās), n. [ME. pace, pas, fr. OF. pas, fr. L. passus a step, pace, orig., a spreading of the legs in walking, fr. pandere, passum, to spread, stretch; akin to L. patere to be open, extend. See FATHOM; cf. COMPASS, PAS, PASS.]
1. A movement of one foot over a space to a new position in walking, running, or dancing; a step.
2. The length of a step in walking, measured usually from the heel of one foot to the heel of the other; the distance covered in one step; — used as a vague, or as a definite but varying, unit in measuring lengths or distances; as, he advanced fifty paces. Ordinarily the pace is estimated at 2.5 feet; but in measuring distances by stepping, the pace is extended to three feet (one yard) or to 3.3 feet (one fifth of a rod). The geometrical pace, or great pace, is five feet. The regulation marching pace in the United States Army is 30 inches for quick time, and 36 inches for double time; in the British Army, 30 inches for slow and quick time and 40 inches for double time. The Roman pace (passus) was from the heel of one foot to the heel of the same foot when it next touched the ground, five Roman feet. Analogous units of length in various countries are called paso, passo, passus, etc. See MEASURE, Table.

pa/le·o·eth′nic, pa/lae·o·eth′nic (pā′lē·ō·ĕth′nĭk; păl′ē-), adj. [paleo- + ethnic.] Pertaining to the earliest human races.

pa/le·o·eth·nog′ra·phy (-ĕth·nŏg′rȧ·fĭ), n. The ethnography of early prehistoric or paleolithic man.

pa/le·o·ge·net′ic (-jē·nĕt′ĭk), adj. Originated in the past; specif., Biol., derived by palingenesis (sense 3 a).

pa/le·o·graph′, pa/lae·o·graph′ (pā′lē·ō·grăf′; păl′ē-; cf. PALEO-), n. a An ancient manuscript. b [Cf. F. paléographe.] A paleographer.

pa/le·og′ra·pher, pa/lae·og′ra·pher (-ŏg′rȧ·fẽr), n. One skilled in paleography.

pa/le·og′ra·phy, pa/lae·og′ra·phy (-fĭ), n. [paleo- + -graphy; cf. F. paléographie.] 1. An ancient manner of writing; ancient writings, collectively.
2. The study of ancient modes of writing including inscriptions; the art or science of deciphering ancient writings, determining their origin, period, etc. See DIPLOMATICS, 2.
— pa/le·o·graph′ic, or pa/lae·o- (-ō·grăf′ĭk), adj. — pa/le·o·graph′i·cal, or pa/lae·o- (-ĭ·kăl), adj. — pa/le·o·graph′i·cal·ly, or pa/lae·o-, adv. — pa/le·og′ra·phist, or pa/lae- (-ŏg′rȧ·fĭst), n.

pa/le·o·ki·net′ic (-kĭ·nĕt′ĭk; -kī-), adj. [paleo- + kinetic.] Designating a supposed system of peripheral motor nerves functioning in automatic associated movements under the control of the corpus striatum, and regarded as older phylogenetically than the system functioning in voluntary movements.

pa·le′o·la (pȧ·lē′ō·lȧ), n.; pl. -LAE (-lē). [NL., dim. fr. L. palea.] Bot. A small or secondary palea. — pa/le·o·late (pā′lē·ō·lāt; păl′ē-), adj.

pa/le·o·lith, pa/lae·o·lith (pā′lē·ō·lĭth; păl′ē-), n. [paleo- + -lith.] A paleolithic implement of chipped stone, unpolished.

pa/le·o·lith′ic (-lĭth′ĭk; 277), adj. [paleo- + -lith + -ic.] Of or pertaining to the early human culture characterized by rough or chipped stone implements; also, designating the period of this culture. The Stone Age is now generally divided into three periods, the Eolithic, the Paleolithic, and the Neolithic. These shade into each other. The Neolithic ended in western Europe about 2500 B.C., but many savage peoples are still living in the paleolithic or neolithic stages. The Paleolithic era is estimated to have endured for from 500,000 to 1,500,000 years. It has been divided into the following epochs or culture stages, earlier than the preceding:
UPPER PALEOLITHIC:
Azilian, transitional to the neolithic.
Magdalenian, cave art, painted tools of bone and ivory, harpoons of reindeer horn.
Solutrean, javelins, shouldered and laurel-leaf points; well-developed art.
Aurignacian, implements and lance points of bone, horn, and ivory, shapely and effective flints.
MIDDLE PALEOLITHIC:
Mousterian, animal traps and pitfalls, flint quarrying, well-defined hearths.
LOWER PALEOLITHIC:
Acheulean, scrapers, planing tools, awls.
Chellean, hand ax or coup de poing.
Pre-Chellean, indefinite.

pa/le·o·lith′i·cal, pa/lae·o·lith′i·cal (-ĭ·kăl), adj. Paleolithic.

paleolithic man. Anthropol. Any type of man of, or peculiar to, the Paleolithic period, as the Heidelberg, Piltdown, Neanderthal, or Cro-Magnon man.

pa/le·ol′o·gy, pa/lae·ol′o·gy (pā′lē·ŏl′ō·jĭ; păl′ē-), n. [paleo- + -logy.] The study or knowledge of antiquities, esp. prehistoric antiquities. — pa/le·o·log′i·cal, pa/lae·o- (-ō·lŏj′ĭ·kăl), adj. — pa/le·ol′o·gist, pa/lae- (-ŏl′ō·jĭst), n.

pa/le·on·tog′ra·phy, pa/lae·on·tog′ra·phy (-ŏn·tŏg′rȧ·fĭ), n. [paleo- + Gr. onta existing things + -graphy.] The description of fossils. — pa/le·on′to·graph′ic, or pa/lae- (-ŏn′tō·grăf′ĭk), adj. — pa/le·on′to·graph′i·cal, or pa/lae- (-ĭ·kăl), adj.

pa/le·on·tol′o·gy, pa/lae·on·tol′o·gy (pā′lē·ŏn·tŏl′ō·jĭ; păl′ē-; 277), n. [paleo- + Gr. onta existing things + -logy. Cf. ONTOLOGY.] 1. The science that deals with the life of past geological periods. It is based on the study of fossils (which see). Cuvier (1769–1832) and some of his contemporaries showed that the fossils of the lower and earlier formations differed from existing organisms more than those of the later or upper formations. The science is commonly considered under three subdivisions, vertebrate and invertebrate paleontology (paleozoology) and paleobotany. Its data may be treated from a biological standpoint (paleobiology, paleoecology, paleopathology) or with reference to geological aspects (stratigraphic paleontology, paleogeography, paleoclimatology). Its chief contribution has been to knowledge of the phylogeny and relationships of modern animals and plants and to the establishment of a chronology in the history of the earth. See FOSSIL, n., 2; GEOLOGY.
2. a A treatise on this science. b The materials of this science; fossils, collectively; the structural attributes of a fossil or extinct organism, type, or group.
— pa/le·on′to·log′ic, or pa/lae- (-ŏn′tō·lŏj′ĭk), adj. — pa/le·on′to·log′i·cal, pa/lae·on′to·log′i·cal (-ŏn′tō·lŏj′ĭ·kăl), adj. — pa/le·on′to·log′i·cal·ly, or -pa/lae-, adv. — pa/le·on·tol′o·gist, pa/lae·on·tol′o·gist (-ŏn·tŏl′ō·jĭst), n.

pa/le·o·pa·thol′o·gy, pa/lae·o·pa·thol′o·gy (pā′lē·ō·pȧ·thŏl′ō·jĭ; păl′ē-), n. [paleo- + pathology.] Med. The branch of pathology devoted to diseases of former times as evidenced in fossils, human remains, etc.

pa/le·o·phyt′ic, pa/lae·o·phyt′ic (pā′lē·ō·fĭt′ĭk; păl′ē-), adj. [paleo- + Gr. phyton plant.] Paleobotanical.

pa/le·o·phy·tol′o·gy, pa/lae·o- (-fĭ·tŏl′ō·jĭ), n. [paleo- + phytology.] Paleobotany. — pa/le·o·phy′to·log′i·cal, pa/lae·o- (-fĭ′tō·lŏj′ĭ·kăl), adj. — pa/le·o·phy·tol′o·gist, pa/lae·o- (-fĭ·tŏl′ō·jĭst), n.

pa/le·o·pic′rite (-pĭk′rīt), n. [paleo- + picrite.] Petrog. Picrite in Paleozoic formations.

pa/le·o·plain′ (pā′lē·ō·plān′; păl′ē-), n. Also pa/lae·o·plain′. [paleo- + plain.] Geol. An ancient plain of degradation, now more or less buried beneath deposits of later times.

pa/le·o·psy′chic (pā′lē·ō·sī′kĭk; păl′ē·ō-), adj. [paleo- + psychic.] Psychoanalysis. Of or pertaining to remotely ancestral modes of thought and desire, conceived as still operative in unconscious mentality.

pa/le·o·psy·chol′o·gy (-sī·kŏl′ō·jĭ), n. [paleo- + psychology.] Psychoanalysis. The study of paleopsychic phenomena. — pa/le·o·psy′cho·log′i·cal (-sī′kō·lŏj′ĭ·kăl), adj.

pa/le·or′ni·thol′o·gy, pa/lae·or′ni·thol′o·gy (-ôr′nĭ·thŏl′ō·jĭ), n. [paleo- + ornithology.] The study of fossil birds. — pa/le·or′ni·tho·log′i·cal, pa/lae- (-thō·lŏj′ĭ·kăl), adj.

pa/le·o·stri·a′tum (-strī·ā′tŭm), n. [NL., fr. paleo- + L. striatus, -um, past part. of striare to make channels in.] Anat. The phylogenetically older part of the corpus striatum, consisting of the globus pallidus (see LENTICULAR NUCLEUS). — pa/le·o·stri·a′tal (-tăl; -t′l), adj.

pa/le·o·thal′a·mus (-thăl′ȧ·mŭs), n. [NL., fr. paleo- + thalamus.] The phylogenetically older part of the thalamus. See THALAMUS.

pa/le·o·ther′mal (-thûr′măl), adj. [paleo- + thermal.] Also pa/le·o·ther′mic (-mĭk), adj. Pertaining to warm climates of past geological time.

Pa/le·o·trop′i·cal, Pa/lae·o·trop′i·cal (pā′lē·ō·trŏp′ĭ·kăl; păl′ē·ō-), adj. [paleo- + tropical.] Biogeog. Of, pert. to, or designating, the tropical and sub-tropical regions of the Old World, including the Oriental and Ethiopian regions.

pa/le·o·vol·can′ic, pa/lae·o·vol·can′ic (-vŏl·kăn′ĭk), adj. [paleo- + volcanic.] Geol. Of, pertaining to, or designating, igneous rocks erupted earlier than the Tertiary age.

Pa/le·o·zo′ic, Pa/lae·o·zo′ic (-zō′ĭk), adj. [paleo- + Gr. zōē life.] Geol. Of or pertaining to, or designating, a grand division of geological history from the beginning of the Cambrian to the close of the Permian. The Paleozoic era was characterized by the culmination of nearly all classes of invertebrates except the insects. In its later epochs land plants, amphibians, and reptiles first appeared. See GEOLOGY, Chart. — n. The Paleozoic era or group.

pa/le·o·zo·ol′o·gy, pa/lae·o·zo·ol′o·gy (-zō·ŏl′ō·jĭ), n. [paleo- + zoology.] The paleontology of animals. — pa/le·o·zo′o·log′i·cal (-zō′ō·lŏj′ĭ·kăl), pa/lae·o-, adj. — pa/le·o·zo·ol′o·gist, pa/lae·o- (-zō·ŏl′ō·jĭst), n.

pal′er (păl′ẽr), n. One in charge of palings. Obs.

Pa·ler′mo (pȧ·lûr′mō; pȧ·lĕr′mō), n. The wine of Palermo.

Palermo Stone. Egypt. Archaeol. A block of diorite, a piece of which is preserved in the Museum of Palermo, four other fragments being in the Cairo Museum. It contained annals of many predynastic kings and of kings of Egypt from Menes to about the middle of the Vth dynasty.

pale rose. The cabbage rose Rosa centifolia.

Pa′les (pā′lēz), n. [L.] Rom. Relig. God or goddess of shepherds and herdsmen. The festival (Parilia or Palilia) of this deity, celebrated on April 21, was the occasion of the lustration of the herds, and it included the building of bonfires (cf. NEEDFIRE, 1) over which men jumped and through which the herds were driven. Later the Parilia were celebrated as the anniversary of the founding of Rome, probably from confusion of Pales with Palatua, the tutelary goddess of the Palatine.

Pal′es·tin′i·an (păl′ĕs·tĭn′ĭ·ăn), adj. Of or pertaining to Palestine. — n. A native of Palestine.

Paleontology. Distribution in Geological Time of Important Groups of Fossils.

pa/le·o·gene (pā′lē·ō·jēn; păl′ē-), adj. & n. [paleo- + -gene.] = PALEOCENE.

pa/le·o·gen′e·sis (pā′lē·ō·jĕn′ē·sĭs; păl′ē-), n. [NL.] = PALINGENESIS, 3 a.

pales. ✝ PALACE.

pal′es. Var. of PALIS. Obs.

Pales′man (pālz′măn), n. = PALEMAN. Rare.

Palestinian Canon, Talmud, version. See CANON, 3 a; TALMUD; VERSION.

pa·les′tra, pa·les′tric, pa·les′trics, etc. Vars. of PALAESTRA, etc.

pal′et (păl′ĕt; -ĭt), n. = PALEA b.

pa/leth·nol′o·gy (pā′lĕth·nŏl′ō·jĭ; păl′ĕth-). Var. of PALAETHNOLOGY.

pal′gat (păl′găt), n. sing. & pl. See MEASURE, Table. [PALSGRAVE.]

pal′grave (pôl′grāv). Var. of PALIKAR.

pal′i·car. Var. of PALIKAR.

Pa·lil′i·a (pȧ·lĭl′ĭ·ȧ), n. pl. [L.] See PALES.

pa′les wee′vil (pā′lēz). [NL. pales, the specific name of uncert. origin.] A large brown weevil (Hylobius pales) destructive to white pine, esp. in the adult stage, when it destroys the bark of the seedlings.

pal′e·tot (păl′ē·tō; păl′tō), n. [F.; cf. ME. paltok, and E. PALL cloak.] a A kind of loose outer garment or coat for men; an overcoat or particular style of overcoat. b A woman's outer garment of varying fashion.

pal′ette (păl′ĕt; -ĭt; 119), n. [F. See PALLET a thin board.] 1. a A thin oval or square board or tablet, with a thumb hole at one end for holding it, or, by extension, any object, as a table top of glass or porcelain, on which a painter lays and mixes his pigments. b The set or assortment of colors put on the palette, as by a particular artist.
2. = PALLETTE.
3. Short for PALETTE KNIFE.
4. Mech. A breastplate for a breast drill.
5. Zool. a An adhesive organ on the tarsi of certain aquatic beetles (family Dytiscidae). b = 3d, PALLET, 11.

Palette.

palette knife. A knife, having a very flexible steel blade and no cutting edge, used by painters to mix colors, by printers for distributing ink, etc.; a spatula. See KNIFE, Illust.

pale′wise′ (pāl′wīz′), adv. Her. In the manner or direction of a pale or pales; by perpendicular lines or divisions.

pal′frey (pôl′frĭ; 277), n.; pl. -FREYS (-frĭz). [ME. palefrai, fr. OF. palefrei (F. palefroi), fr. LL. palefredus, parafredus, fr. paraveredus a horse for extraordinary occasions, an extra post horse, fr. Gr. para along, beside + L. veredus a post horse, of Celt. origin; cf. W. gorwydd horse.] 1. A saddle horse for the road, or for state occasions, as distinguished from a war horse.
2. A small saddle horse for ladies.

pal′freyed (pôl′frĭd), adj. Mounted on a palfrey.

pa′li (pä′lĭ), n., pl. of PALUS.

pa′li (pä′lē), n. [Hawaiian.] A precipice; also, a steep slope. Hawaii.

pal′i- (păl′ĭ-). Med. A combining form, Greek pali-, from palin, again, meaning backward, again, used to denote pathologic repetition, as in pal′i·ki·ne′si·a, pal′i·la′li·a, pal′i·phra′si·a, pal′ir·rhe′a, pal′i·stro′phi·a. See -KINESIA, -LALIA, etc.

Pa′li (pä′lē), n. [Skr. pāli row, line, series, applied to the series of Buddhist sacred texts.] A mixed dialect descended from Vedic Aryan, a dead language, except as used in the sacred writings of the Buddhist religion in Ceylon and Farther India. See PRAKRIT; INDO-EUROPEAN LANGUAGES, Table.

Pali Buddhism. See BUDDHISM.

Pal′i·cou′re·a (păl′ĭ·kōō′rē·ȧ), n. [NL., of unknown origin.] Bot. A large genus of tropical American shrubs, family Rubiaceae, having white or yellow flowers, the tube of the corolla distended within. Some of the species are poisonous. Cf. GOLD SHRUB.

pal′i·fi·ca′tion (păl′ĭ·fĭ·kā′shŭn), n. [ML. palificatio; cf. It. palificazione, and E. PALAFITTE.] Act or practice of driving piles or posts into the ground to make it firm. Rare.

pa′li·form (pā′lĭ·fôrm), adj. [palus + -form.] Zool. Resembling a palus; as, the paliform lobes of the septa in corals.

pal′i·kar (păl′ĭ·kär), n. [NGr. palikari, pallēkari, young man, dim. fr. Gr. pallēx, pallax, a youth.] a A Greek or Albanian soldier in the pay of the sultan of Turkey. b Esp., a soldier of the Greek militia in the war of independence (1821–28) against Turkey. — pal′i·kar·ism (-ĭz′m), n.

pa·li′la (pȧ·lē′lä), n. [Hawaiian.] A Hawaiian finchlike bird (Chloridops kona).

Pal′i·li′ci·um (păl′ĭ·lĭsh′ĭ·ŭm), n. Also Par′i·li′ci·um (păr′ĭ-). [L. (sc. sidus), neut. of Palilicius pertaining to Palilia; — because the star vanished during that festival.] Astron. Originally, the entire group of the Hyades; in Flamsteed's catalogues, Aldebaran.

pal′il·lo′gi·a, pal′i·lo′gi·a (păl′ĭ·lō′jĭ·ȧ), n. [LL. palilogia.] Palilogy.

pa·lil′o·gy (pȧ·lĭl′ō·jĭ), n. [LL. palilogia, fr. Gr. palillogia, fr. palin again + -logia speaking. See -LOGY.] Rhet. Repetition, esp. immediate repetition, of a word or words for emphasis ("The living, the living, he shall praise thee." Is. xxxviii. 19). — pa·lil′o·get′ic (-jĕt′ĭk), adj.

pa·lim′bac·chi′us (pȧ·lĭm′bȧ·kĭ′ŭs), n.; pl. -CHII (-ī). [L., fr. Gr. palimbakcheios, fr. palin back + bakcheios bacchius.] Gr. & Lat. Pros. An antibacchius. — pal′im·bac′chic (păl′ĭm·băk′ĭk), adj. & n.

pal′imp·sest (păl′ĭmp·sĕst), n. [L. palimpsestus fr. Gr. palimpsēstos scratched or scraped again, palimpsēston a palimpsest, fr. palin again + psēn to rub, rub away.] 1. A kind or portion of writing material, as parchment or paper, so prepared that the writing could be erased. Obs.
2. A parchment, tablet, or other portion of writing material, which has been used twice or three times (double palimpsest), the earlier writing having been erased; a manuscript in which one or two earlier erased writings are found; a codex rescriptus. This double or triple use in early times of writing material was chiefly due to scarcity of such material. Valuable texts or fragments have been recovered from palimpsests by the use of chemicals, etc.
3. A memorial brass having earlier engraving on the side opposite to that which is now exposed.

pal′imp·sest, adj. Rewritten or re-engraved; of a manuscript, having besides its present writing one or two earlier erased writings; of a memorial brass, having earlier engraving on the side opposite to that now exposed.

pal′imp·sest, v. t. To make a palimpsest of.

palm (päm), n. [AS., palm, palma, fr. L. palma; — so named from the resemblance of the leaf to a hand. See 1st PALM.] 1. Any monocotyledonous plant of the family Arecaceae. Palms are mostly trees with tall columnar trunks bearing a crown of gigantic leaves having stout, sheathing, often prickly petioles, the persistent bases of which sometimes clothe the trunk for part or all of its length. Some, as the saw palmetto, are low, nearly acaulescent undershrubs; a few, as the rattan palm, climb by means of hooks or prickles. The wood of palm stems, being without a definite cambium ring, is incapable of secondary growth. The leaves are either pinnate (feather palms) or palmately cleft (fan palms). The small flowers are borne in huge clusters subtended by spathes; the fruit varies greatly in size and structure, a date and a coconut well illustrating two extremes. Palms are the most important and valuable economic plants of the tropics, and their products are widely used in the arts. The trunks and leaves are used in building and thatching; the leaf sheaths, in the manufacture of boxes, wrapping, etc.; sugar and wine are made from the sap; the fruit is often used for food, and the seeds of many species yield valuable oils and fats. Wax and sago are occasional products. Nearly all palms are ornamental in cultivation. Among the most important kinds are the date palm, coconut palm, oil palm, betel palm, wax palm, piassava, rattan palm, assai, palmyra, and the various palmettos and cabbage palms. See ARECACEAE; COCONUT PALM, Illust.; CABBAGE PALMETTO, Illust.

OF. maistrie. See PALM of the hand; MASTERY.] 1. Art or practice of divining or telling fortunes, or of judging of character, aptitudes, and probabilities, by the lines, marks, etc., in the palm of the hand; art of reading, or inferring, a person's character or his past or possible future from his hand; chiromancy; chirognomy. Palmistry is based on a consideration of the character of the hand in general and esp. of the lines, mounts, and marks on the palm. The mounts are regions upon the palm (specially named from being formerly regarded as indicative of the influence of planets) considered to denote degrees of temperament or predominant traits. They are the mounts of Jupiter (A), ambition; Saturn (B), seriousness; Apollo (C), brilliancy; Mercury (D), practicality, adaptability in business; Venus (E), love, sense of harmony; Moon or Luna (F), imagination; Mars, the middle cross section of the hand, including upper Mars (G), aggression, lower Mars (H), courage, plain of Mars (I), temper, also indicated at 16. The principal lines (named from that concerning which they are considered to reveal information) are: line of life, or life line (1), vitality, duration of life; line of the head, or head line (2), mentality and judgment; line of the heart, or heart line (3), the heart, emotional nature, affection, generosity; line of fate, line of Saturn, or fate line (4), the influence of chance or haphazard, fortune, good or bad; line of Apollo, line of the sun, line of fortune, or line of brilliancy (5), mental brilliancy; taste, aptitude and success in art, literature, or pursuit of wealth; line of Mercury, line of health, line of the liver, hepatic line, or the hepatica (6), condition of the liver and digestive apparatus, or maladies due to their derangement. Minor lines, often absent, are: girdle of Venus (7), indicating nervousness, liability to hysteria, intensity in predominating traits; line of Mars (8), strengthening the life line; ring of Solomon or Jupiter (9), emphasizing the characteristics of the mount and implying ability in occult science; rascettes, or bracelets (10), generally three, strengthening the life line; line of intuition, line of the moon, or line of Luna (11), indicating, with other signs a strong intuitive faculty; via lascivia (12), usually a sister line to the line of Mercury, indicating intensity of sentiments, good or bad, and, sometimes, sensuality. The lines of affection (15) denote attachment to the opposite sex. Islands (13) are narrow lanceolate figures, usually on lines, and are interpreted as evil or unfavorable signs. An apex (16) is a triangle formed by capillary lines on the pads of the fingers and the mounts; it indicates the centers and affects the reading of these parts. The percussion (14) is formed by the outside of upper Mars and the moon. The quadrangle, or table, is the middle part of the palm, between the head and heart lines.

Pan (păn), n. [L., fr. Gr. Pan.] 1. Gr. Relig. A god of flocks and pastures, forests and their wild life, patron of shepherds, hunters, fishermen, etc. The original seat of his worship was Arcadia, where he was supposed to wander through the forests attended by nymphs, playing upon the syrinx, or "Pan's pipes," fabled to be his invention. He was also regarded as causing sudden and groundless fear, the panic; the Athenians, believing him to have caused the panic among the Persians at Marathon, established his worship in a grotto on the Acropolis. In later times Pan became a special god of the Orphics (who interpreted his name, probably originally ho Paōn, the feeder, as to Pan, the All) as a pantheistic nature god. Plutarch relates how a pilot, Thamus, passing near the island of Paxos in the time of Tiberius, heard a mighty voice commanding him to proclaim "Pan is dead" — probably a misunderstanding of the lament for Tammuz (which see). In later Christian mythology the story is made to coincide with the crucifixion, as if to mark the end of the pagan era. Pan was represented as having the legs and sometimes the ears and horns of a goat, and this type was often multiplied into a plurality — [not cap.] panes, panisci — who became lesser deities or sprites similar to the satyrs, sileni, fauns, etc. By the Romans he was identified with Faunus (which see) or Inuus. His cult survives in modern folk beliefs in the Balkan countries and in Italy.

2. Zool. The genus of anthropoid apes containing the chimpanzee. Syns. Anthropopithecus, Simia.

Gr. Panathēnaia, fr. pas, pan, all + Athēnē Athena.] The most ancient and important festival of Athens, celebrated in honor of Athena (which see), the tutelary goddess of the city. There were two celebrations, the Lesser Panathenaea being held every year, and the Greater Panathenaea once in four years, in the third year of the Olympiad. The festival was held in Hecatombaeon, the 28th of this month being the date of the great procession (represented on the Parthenon frieze) in which the people marched to the Acropolis bearing an embroidered peplos for the goddess. The Greater Panathenaea continued several days, and was characterized by the variety of its games (see AGONAE). The prizes in the athletic contests consisted of amphorae adorned with the figure of Athena and filled with olive oil (see AMPHORA, Illust.). The origin of the festival was ascribed to Erechtheus, or Erichthonius, and the institution of the greater penteteric celebration is believed to be due to Pisistratus. 2. A dramatic performance by actors using only, or chiefly, dumb show. The Roman pantomime was by masked actors, the mimicry being wholly bodily. The subjects were commonly well-known myths, but a chorus usually sang the story by way of interlude. In Italy the pantomime developed the characters of Harlequin, Pantaloon, Columbine, Scaramouch (which see), forming a kind of popular burlesque; in France, in the 17th and 18th centuries, the name was applied to allegorical spectacles with characters from classical mythology; in England a kind of folklore drama grew up with subjects largely from popular tales, of which dumb acting as well as burlesque dialogue, music, and dancing by Clown, Harlequin, etc., are features. It has become a characteristic feature of the Christmas season.
3. Hence, dumb show of any sort; significant gesticulation or facial expression.

pa'per (pā'pĕr), n. [OF. papier, fr. L. papyrus paper, papyrus, from which the Egyptians made a kind of paper, fr. Gr. papyros, of obscure origin. Cf. PAPYRUS, TAPER.] 1. A substance made in the form of thin sheets or leaves from rags, straw, bark, wood, or other fibrous material, for various uses. The essential processes in the manufacture of paper are: the reduction of the raw material to a thin pulp; the running of this pulp upon a flat sieve of fine mesh, which retains the fibers that become felted together; and the removal and drying of the felt so formed. These processes are usually accompanied by others, according to the use for which the paper is designed, as bleaching, sizing, pressing, or calendering, loading, tinting, etc. Machines for making paper in a continuous web were introduced about the year 1800, and most paper is now so made, though certain fine grades are still made by hand. In the Fourdrinier machine the sieve is a long endless wire cloth carried on rollers. A light cylinder, called the dandy roll, presses on the upper surface of the felt on the sieve, imparting the watermark and determining the character of the paper as wove (bearing the impression of a fine even gauze) or laid (marked with parallel lines). From this the felt passes on through rolls which express moisture, and over the driers, which are hollow cylinders heated with steam. A smooth surface is produced by calenders, and apparatus for sizing, etc., may also form a part of the machine. Where a high finish is required the paper is afterward passed through supercalenders. The cylinder machine differs from the Fourdrinier machine chiefly in having its sieve on a revolving cylinder, which dips into the vat of pulp. It is used principally in making heavy paper, board, and tissue paper. Paper consists of cellulose fibers in a more or less pure condition. It was made in early times from the inner bark of the paper mulberry by the Chinese, who extended the art to other materials and spread a knowledge of it among other nations. The best writing paper is made from linen rags. Newsprint is chiefly made from wood. Paper, when not sold in the roll, is furnished in various sizes (varying somewhat with different makers). The principal sizes are as follows:

par (pär), n. [L., equal, an equal, equality. See PEER an equal.] 1. The established value of the monetary unit of one country expressed in terms of the monetary unit of another using the same metal as the standard of value; — called in full the mint par of exchange. This par of exchange is determined solely on the basis of the relative amounts of precious metal contained in the standard monetary units of the two countries; commercial par of exchange (sometimes called real, or arbitrated, par) is the actual rate at a given time and is determined by the demand for and the supply of the foreign currency in a specific market. Thus, one pound sterling is worth at the mint par of exchange $4.86 in the currency of the United States; and (commercial) exchange is at par (of exchange) when, for example, a bill in New York, for the payment of one hundred pounds sterling in London, can be purchased for $486 in New York. Exchange is in favor of a place when the foreign money is there worth more than the par of exchange, and exchange will then be above par when the price is reckoned, as in London, in terms of a unit of domestic money, but below par when the price is reckoned, as in New York, in terms of a unit of the foreign money. Exchange is against a place when the foreign money is worth less there than the par of exchange. Cf. PURCHASING-POWER PARITY.
2. The nominal value of securities or certificates of value (often called nominal, or face, par), or the value or price at which they are issued (called issue par). The nominal par for railroad and industrial shares in stocks in the United States is for most stocks (full stocks) $100 or for some (half stocks) $50; for bonds it is usually $1,000, or less often $500; in Great Britain the usual values for shares are £1, £5, and £10. A security is said to be at par when the market price equals the par value. Cf. NO-PAR.
3. Equality as to value, condition, or circumstances; common level; — usually with on or upon; as, their pretensions are on a par; his ability is on a par with his rank.
4. An amount which is taken as an average or mean. Eng.
5. Golf. The number of strokes required for a hole or a round played perfectly up to the putting green, two strokes being allowed on each hole for putting. Length is an important factor, as follows: up to 250 yards, par is 3; 251 to 445, par is 4; 446 to 600, par is 5; over 600, par is 6. (These figures are for men players.) — above, below, under, or up to, par. Above, below, etc., the particular value or price taken as the par; hence, Colloq., above, below, etc., an accepted standard or normal level, specif., of health.

par (pär), v. t.; PARRED (pärd); PAR'RING. To put on a par.

par, prep. [F., fr. L. per. See PER.] By; through; also, by way of; — used in Early English in phrases from the French, being sometimes written as a part of the word it governs; as, par amour, or paramour; par compaingne.

par. Var. of PARR.

par, v. t. [ME. parren; akin to E. parrock.] To enclose in a par, or pen. Now Dial. Eng.

4. Bot. a Parallel, as in paraheliotropism. b Abortive, as in paracarpium, parastyle.
5. Chem. A prefix (also, adjectively, par'a) employed in designating a particular variety of a substance, or a substance in some way related to the one to whose name the prefix is attached, as a polymer, an isomer, a modification, a derivative, etc.; as, paraldehyde, paratartaric acid, paracasein, paraperiodic acid. Specif., designating certain benzene derivatives, or compounds of analogous structure; as, paraxylene (p-xylene), paroxazine, para position. Abbr. p-. See BENZENE RING, NAPHTHALENE.
6. Med. a A faulty, irregular, or disordered condition; abnormal; as in paralexia, paranoia, paraphrenia; also, perversion, as in parabulia, paracanthosis. b Associated in a subsidiary or accessory capacity, as in parasympathetic. c Closely resembling the true form; almost; — esp. in names of diseases, as in paratyphoid.
7. Petrog. A prefix indicating that the metamorphic rock so qualified was derived from an original sediment; as, paragneiss. Cf. ORTHO-, 3.

par'a-. [F., fr. It. imper. of parare to shield, defend.] A combining form meaning that which shields or protects from, as in parachute, parasol.

-para. See -PAROUS.

par'a-an'al·ge'si·a (păr'ä·ăn'ăl·jē'zĭ·ä; -sĭ·ä), n. [NL.] Med. Analgesia of the lower part of the body.

par'a-an'es·the'si·a, -an'aes·the'si·a (păr'ä·ăn'ĕs·thē'zhĭ·ä; -zhä; -zĭ·ä), n. [NL., fr. para- + anesthesia.] Med. Anesthesia of both sides of the lower half of the body.

par'a·han'ic (păr'ä·băn'ĭk), adj. [G. parabansäure, prob. fr. Gr. parabainein to pass over, to deviate.] Chem. Pertaining to or designating a white, crystalline, nitrogenous diacid, $C_3H_2N_2O_4$, made esp. by oxidation of uric acid. — par'a·ba·nate (păr'ä·bä·nāt), n. See 1st -ATE, 3.

par'a·bap'tism (păr'ä·băp'tĭz'm), par'a·hap'ti·za'tion (-tĭ·zā'shŭn; -tĭ·zā'shŭn), n. [Gr. parabaptisma. See PARA-; BAPTISM.] Irregular or uncanonical baptism.

par'a·bas'al bod'y (-bās'ăl; -'l). Biol. A cytoplasmic body closely associated with the blepharoplast of certain flagellates; a kinetonucleus.

pa·rab'a·sis (pä·răb'ä·sĭs), n. [Gr., fr. parabainein to go aside, step forward.] An important choral ode in the Old Greek comedy, mainly in anapaestic tetrameters. The chorus delivered it at an intermission in the action, facing and moving toward, the audience. — par'a·bas'ic (păr'ä·bās'ĭk), adj. Rare.

par'a·be'ma (păr'ä·bē'mä), n.; pl. -MATA (-mä·tä). [NGr. parabēma. See PARA-; BEMA.] Eastern Ch. Either the prothesis or diaconicon, or, pl., both, if they form rooms separated by walls from the bema. — par'a·be·mat'ic (-bē·măt'ĭk), adj.

par'a·bi·o'sis (-bī·ō'sĭs), n. [NL., fr. para- + biosis.]
1. Biol. Reversible suspension of obvious vital activities, as by suitable drying of an earthworm, or the temporary suppression of excitability in a nerve.
2. Biol. The anatomical and physiological union of two organisms either natural, as in Siamese twins, or artificially produced.
3. Zool. A form of co-operative association, in which two or more species live together maintaining friendly relations, but keeping their broods separate; — used esp. of certain colonies of ants.
— par'a·bi·ot'ic (-ŏt'ĭk), adj.

par'a·blast (păr'ä·blăst), n. [See PARA-; -BLAST.] Embryol. a The yolk of a meroblastic ovum. b The mesoblast, esp. that part giving rise to vascular structures. —

par'a·ble (păr'ä·b'l), n. [ME., also parabole, fr. OF. parabole, fr. L. parabola, fr. Gr. parabolē a placing beside or together, a comparing, comparison, a parable, fr. paraballein to throw beside, compare, fr. para beside + ballein to throw. See PARA-; DEVIL. Cf. BALLISTIC, EMBLEM, HYPERBOLE, PALAVER, PARABOLA, PARLANCE, PARLEY, PAROLE, PROBLEM, SYMBOL.] 1. A comparison; similitude; specif., a short fictitious narrative of a possible event in life or nature, from which a moral or spiritual truth is drawn; as, the parables of Christ.
2. An exemplar or type. Dial.
Syn. — See FABLE.

par'a·ble (păr'ä·b'l), v. t. & i.; -BLED (-b'ld); -BLING (-blĭng). To represent by parable; to compose or speak in parables.

par'a·blep'si·a (păr'ä·blĕp'sĭ·ä), par'a·blep'sis (-sĭs), par'a·blep'sy (păr'ä·blĕp'sĭ), n. [NL. parablepsis fr. Gr. parablepsis, fr. para beside + blepsis vision, fr. blepein to see.] Med. False vision; abnormality of visual sensation. — par'a·blep'tic (-blĕp'tĭk), adj.

pa·rab'o·la (pä·răb'ō·lä), n.; pl. -OLAS (-läz). [NL., fr. Gr. parabolē prop., a placing beside (cf. CONIC SECTION). See PARABLE; cf. PARABOLE.] Geom. a A conic section, the intersection of a cone with a plane parallel to its side; a plane curve, any point of which is equidistant from a fixed point, the focus, and a fixed straight line, the directrix not passing through the focus. See CONIC SECTION, Illust. b Any curve defined by the equation $y = ax^n$, where n is positive and rational. For the cubical parabola $n = 3$; for the semicubical parabola $n = 3/2$. Parabolas have infinite branches, but no rectilineal asymptotes. A cubical parabola is a plane cubic curve which meets the line at infinity in three coincident points and having a point of inflection as center and a cusp at infinity; or it is a twisted cubic, in space, which meets the plane at infinity in two or in three coincident points. A cubical hyperbolic parabola is a plane cubic curve which meets the line at infinity in three points, two of which are coincident and the third of which is distinct from the other two.

par'a·bo·la'nus (păr'ä·bō·lā'nŭs), n.; pl. -LANI (-nī). [LL., fr. parabolus a reckless man, fr. Gr. parabolos venturesome.] In the early church, an official or a member of a brotherhood devoted to the care of the sick, esp. in infectious or contagious cases.

par'a·bol'ic (păr'ä·bŏl'ĭk), adj. [See PARABOLICAL.]
1. = PARABOLICAL, 1.
2. [From PARABOLA.] Geom. a Resembling, relating to, or generated or directed by, a parabola. b Characterized by the equality or coincidence of two elements; — from the fact that a parabola is tangent to the line at infinity while the other conics have two real or imaginary intersections with that line. c Hence, having the form of a parabola; as, a parabolic course. — par'a·bol'ic·ness, n.

par'a·bol'i·cal (-ĭ·kăl), adj. [LL. parabolicus, fr. LGr. parabolikos figurative. See PARABLE.] 1. Of the nature of, or expressed by, a parable or figure; allegorical.
2. = PARABOLIC, 2. Rare.

par'a·bol'i·cal·ly (-ĭ·kăl·ĭ), adv. 1. By way of parable; in a parabolic manner.
2. In the form or manner of a parabola.

parabolic branch (of a curve). Math. A branch touching the right line at infinity, at a simple or at a multiple point.

parabolic conoid. Math. A paraboloid; a conoid whose directrix is a parabola. See CONOID, n., 1 a.

parabolic co-ordinates. Math. See 3d CO-ORDINATE, 2.

parabolic cyclide. See CYCLIDE.

parabolic cylinder. Math. A cylinder whose directrix is a parabola. It is the only one whose plane sections are all parabolas.

parabolic geometry. Euclidean geometry.

parabolic governor. Mach. See GOVERNOR, 6.

parabolic point, of an algebraic surface. Math. A point at which the indicatrix becomes parabolic, that is, a pair of coincident right lines.

parabolic space. Math. = EUCLIDEAN SPACE.

parabolic spindle. Math. The solid generated by revolving the segment of a parabola about its chord, when that chord is perpendicular to the axis.

Pap'u·a mace (păp'ū·ä; pä'pō·ä). = MACASSAR MACE.
Papua nutmeg. = MACASSAR NUTMEG.
pa·pyr'e·an (pä·pĭr'ē·ăn). Var. of PAPYRIAN. pa·py'ri, n., pl. of PAPYRUS.
Paque (päk), n. [F. pâque.] = PASCH; EASTER. paq'uet. Var. of PACKET. par (pär). + PAIR.
par'a-ag·glu'ti·nin, n. See AGGLUTININ, 3. par'a-a·mi'no·phe'nol, n. See AMINOPHENOL a. par'a-ap·pen'di·ci'tis, n. [NL.] See 1st PARA-, 2. par'a·ben'zo·qui·none', n. See QUINONE. par'a·blen' (pär'ä·byĕn'), n. [Sp. parabién.] Congratulation. Obs.

par'a·bol'i·form (păr'ȧ·bŏl'ĭ·fôrm), adj. [parabola + -form.] Like a parabola in form; tangent to the line at infinity.

pa·rab'o·list (pȧ·răb'ō·lĭst), n. A narrator of parables.

pa·rab'o·lize (-līz), v. t.; -LIZED (-līzd); -LIZ'ING (-lĭz'ĭng). 1. To express in fables or explain as parables.
2. To make parabolic or paraboloidal, as a mirror for a telescope.
— pa·rab'o·li·za'tion (-lĭ·zā'shŭn; -lī·zā'shŭn), n. — pa·rab'o·liz'er (-răb'ō·lĭz'ẽr), n.

pa·rab'o·loid (-loid), n. [parabola + -oid; cf. F. paraboloïde.] Geom. The surface generated by the rotation of a parabola about its axis; — called also paraboloid of revolution; any conoidal whose sections by planes parallel to a given line are parabolas. There are two kinds, elliptic and hyperbolic paraboloids, according to the sections made by other planes. — pa·rab'o·loi'dal (pȧ·răb'ō·loi'dăl, păr'ȧ·bō-; -d'l), adj.

par'a·bot'u·lism (păr'ȧ·bŏt'ū·lĭz'm), n. [See BOTULISM.] Veter. A bacterial disease of horses and cattle characterized by paralysis of the locomotor system.

Par'a·brahm (pŭr'ȧ·brăm), or Par'a·brah'man (-brä'mȧn), n. [Skr. See FAR; BRAHMA.] Hindu Philos. The supreme, absolute, nameless, impersonal principle.

par'a·bran'chi·a (păr'ȧ·brăng'kĭ·ȧ), n. [NL., fr. para- + -branchia.] Zool. The osphradium of a mollusk when large and gill-like. — par'a·bran'chi·al (-ăl), adj. — par'a·bran'chi·ate (-āt), adj.

par·ac'an·tho'sis (păr·ăk'ăn·thō'sĭs), n. [NL.] Med. Morbid growth in the prickle-cell layer.

par'a·car'mine (păr'ȧ·kär'mĭn; -mīn), n. Micros. Carmine stain containing chlorides of aluminum and calcium.

Par'a·cel'si·an (-sĕl'sĭ·ăn), adj. Of, pert. to, or conforming to, the practice or theories of Paracelsus, a 16th century Swiss physician and philosopher. — Par'a·cel'si·an, Par'a·cel'sist (-sĭst), n. — Par'a·cel'si·an·ism (-ĭz'm), n. — Par'a·cel'sic (-sĭk), Par'a·cel·sis'tic (-sĕl·sĭs'tĭk), adj.

Par'a·cel'sus (păr'ȧ·sĕl'sŭs). The title and hero of a poem (1835) by Browning. See PARACELSUS in Biog.

par'a·cen·te'sis (-sĕn·tē'sĭs), n. [L., fr. Gr. parakentēsis, fr. parakentein to pierce at the side, to tap.] Surg. The puncture of a cavity of the body with a trocar, aspirator, or other instrument, to draw off any effused fluid; tapping.

par'a·cen'tral (-sĕn'trăl), adj. [para- + central.] Anat. Lying near a center or central part.

par'a·cen'tric (păr'ȧ·sĕn'trĭk), adj. Also par'a·cen'tri·cal (-trĭ·kăl). [para- + centric, -ical.] 1. Deviating from circularity; changing the distance from a center.
2. Locksmithing. Designating a type of key and keyway used with pin-tumbler cylinders and having longitudinal ribs and grooves projecting beyond the center to hinder picking.

par'a·cen'tric, n. A paracentric curve, keyway, etc.

paracentric motion. Astron. a Motion which, compounded with harmonic circulation, Leibnitz believed to constitute planetary motion. b Rare. The central or radial component of planetary motion.

paracentric velocity. Astron. The central or radial component of planetary velocity. Rare.

par'a·ceph'a·lus (păr'ȧ·sĕf'ȧ·lŭs), n. [NL., fr. para- + Gr. kephalē head.] Terat. A monster with rudimentary misshapen head, imperfect sense organs, and defective trunk and limbs.

par'a·cho'li·a (-kō'lĭ·ȧ), n. [NL., fr. para- + Gr. cholē bile.] Abnormal secretion of bile.

par'a·chor (păr'ȧ·kôr; 181), n. [para- + Gr. chōros space; — from indicating comparative volume.] Chem. A constant dependent on the constitution of a compound and related to molecular volume. It is equal to the molecular weight multiplied by the fourth root of the surface tension and divided by the difference between the densities of the liquid and vapor phases at a given temperature. In symbols: $P = \frac{M\sqrt[4]{\gamma}}{D - d}$.

par'a·chor'dal (-kôr'dăl; -d'l), adj. [para- + chordal.] Embryol. Situated at the side of the notochord; specif., designating the cartilaginous plates, one on each side of the anterior part of the notochord, which are the anlage of the base of the cranium. — n. A parachordal cartilage.

par'a·chro'ma (-krō'mȧ), n. [NL., fr. para- + Gr. chrōma, -atos, color.] Med. Discoloration, as of the skin.

par'a·chro'ma·tism (-krō'mȧ·tĭz'm), n. Med. Abnormality in color perception; color blindness.

par'a·chro'ma·top'si·a (-krō'mȧ·tŏp'sĭ·ȧ), n. [NL., fr. para- + chromat- + -opsia.] Abnormal color vision.

par'a·chro'ma·to'sis (-tō'sĭs), n. [NL.] Parachroma.

par'a·chro·moph'o·rous (-krō·mŏf'ō·rŭs), adj. [para- + chromophorous.] Bacteriol. Excreting pigment which is insoluble in water and does not diffuse away from the cell wall or capsule. Cf. CHROMOPAROUS, CHROMOPHOROUS.

par·ach'ro·nism (păr·ăk'rō·nĭz'm), n. [para- + Gr. chronos time; cf. F. parachronisme.] A chronological error, esp. one by which a date is set later than is correct. — par·ach'ro·nis'tic (-nĭs'tĭk), adj.

par'a·chrose (păr'ȧ·krōs), adj. [Cf. Gr. chrōsis coloring.] Mineral. Changing color by exposure.

par'a·chute (păr'ȧ·shōōt), n. [F., fr. 2d para- + chute a fall. See PARASOL; CHUTE.] 1. A folding, umbrella-like contrivance, usually of light fabric, used for making a safe descent through the air from a great height, esp. from an aircraft. The expanded parachute offers great resistance to the air, checking the velocity of the falling body. Early parachutes were equipped with baskets or cars. In 1783 Sebastien Lenormand descended from a building in what is believed to be the first parachute invented; in 1797 Jacques Garnerin made the first successful parachute descent from a balloon.

Parachute.

2. A seed or fruit, as the achene of a dandelion, fitted for wind dispersal by a parachutelike pappus, coma, or other appendage.
3. The patagium of a mammal or reptile.
4. Any contrivance suggestive of a parachute in form, use, or operation, as a device to retard the descent of a cage in a mine, a device to protect the balance wheel of a watch from shock, a flat funnel of tinned copper made to slide up and down the fermenting vat of a brewery, the inverted cup acting as the holding part of a mushroom anchor, etc. — par'a·chu'tic (-shōō'tĭk), adj. — par'a·chut·ism (păr'ȧ·shōōt·ĭz'm), n. — par'a·chut'ist (-shōōt'ĭst), n.

par'a·chute (păr'ȧ·shōōt), v. t. & i. To convey or to descend by means of, or as if by means of, a parachute.

parachute light. Mil. A light bomb which, exploding in the air, releases a brightly burning composition supported by a parachute; — called also parachute light ball.

par'a·clete (păr'ȧ·klēt), n. [OF. paraclet, fr. LL. paracletus, fr. Gr. paraklētos, fr. parakalein to call to aid, to exhort, encourage, fr. para beside + kalein to call.] An advocate; one called to aid or support; hence [cap.], the Consoler, Comforter, Helper, or Intercessor; — a term applied to the Holy Spirit.

par·ac'me (păr·ăk'mē), n. [NL., fr. Gr. parakmē the point at which the prime is past, decay. See PARA-; ACME.] Biol. The state of decadence or decline in the phylogeny of a group of organisms, after the acme of development.

par'a·coele (păr'ȧ·sēl), n. [para- + -coele.] Anat. & Zool. A lateral ventricle of the brain. — par'a·coe'li·an (-sē'lĭ·ăn), adj.

par'a·con'dy·loid (-kŏn'dĭ·loid), adj. Zool. Denoting a process of the occipital bone lying on the outer side of each condyle in the skull of some mammals.

par'a·cone (păr'ȧ·kōn), n. Zool. The anterior of the three cusps of a primitive upper molar. In higher forms, it is the principal anteroexternal cusp. The corresponding cusp of a lower molar, called par'a·con'id (-kŏn'ĭd), is the anterointernal. See TRITUBERCULY.

par'a·con'ic ac'id (-kŏn'ĭk). [par- + aconic.] Chem. A white crystalline acid, $C_4H_3O_3CO_2H$, isomeric with itaconic, citraconic, and mesaconic acids.

par'a·con'scious (-kŏn'shŭs), adj. Accompanying, but independent of, ordinary consciousness.

par'a·co·rol'la (-kō·rŏl'ȧ), n. [para- + corolla.] Bot. A corona or other appendage of a corolla.

par'a·co'to bark (păr'ȧ·kō'tō). [I. e., false coto bark.] The dried bark of a Bolivian tree (Ocotea pseudo-coto) or of an undetermined tree of the family Lauraceae. It contains the crystalline compound par'a·co'to·in (-tō·ĭn), $C_{13}H_8O_4$, which resembles the cotoin, $C_6H_6O_4$, of true coto bark in physiological action.

Pa·rá' cress (pä·rä'). An annual tropical herb (Spilanthes oleracea), family Carduaceae, grown for use as a pungent salad.

par'a·cros'tic (păr'ȧ·krŏs'tĭk), n. A poetical composition in which the first verse contains, in order, the first letters of all the following verses.

par'a·cy·an'o·gen (-sī·ăn'ō·jĕn), n. [para- + cyanogen.] Chem. A polymer of cyanogen obtained as a brown or black amorphous by-product on heating mercuric cyanide.

par'a·cy·e'sis (-sī·ē'sĭs), n. [NL.] Med. Extrauterine pregnancy.

par'a·cys·ti'tis (-sĭs·tī'tĭs), n. [NL., fr. para- + cystitis.] Inflammation of the connective tissue about the bladder; pericystitis.

par'a·cys'ti·um (-sĭs'tĭ·ŭm), n. [NL., fr. para- + Gr. kystis bladder.] Anat. The vascular and connective tissues alongside the bladder. — par'a·cys'tic (-tĭk), adj.

pa·rade' (pȧ·rād'), n. [F., fr. Sp. parada a halt or stopping, an assembling for exercise, a place where troops are assembled to exercise, fr. parar to stop, to prepare, fr. L. parare; cf. It. parata a parrying, guard, a display, parade of troops. See PARE, PARRY.] 1. Pompous show; formal display or exhibition.

> Be rich, but of your wealth make no parade. Swift.

2. Mil. a The ceremonial formation of a body of troops before its commanding officer or other high officer for the display of its condition, numbers, equipment, and proficiency. The ceremony involves exercises in the manual of arms, the report on the numbers of the various units present or accounted for, the publication of orders, etc., and often ends with a review; often loosely, any of various other ceremonial formations. b The area upon which troops regularly assemble for parade.
3. Any march or procession; esp., a formal public procession; the movement of any body marshaled in something like military order; as, a parade of firemen; a circus parade.
4. Place where people promenade; a public walk, square, or promenade; also, those who parade; an assembly of promenaders; as, the Easter parade.

Syn. — Show, flourish, pretension; pageantry, grandeur, splendor, magnificence. — DISPLAY, PARADE, OSTENTATION, POMP. DISPLAY is the general term for undue or excessive show; PARADE is flaunting or spectacular display; OSTENTATION is pretentious or vainglorious parade; POMP is a grandiose exhibition, often of real splendor or magnificence; as, "But if proud, Wordsworth is not ostentatious, is not anxious for display" (De Quincey); "He loves to make parade of pain" (Tennyson); "Out of the fuss and parade of the world" (Lord Collingwood); "fond ostentation of riches" (Walton); "Ostentation here, with tawdry art, pants for the vulgar praise which fools impart" (Goldsmith); "The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power" (T. Gray); "The pomp of sound, which invests with grandeur his [Homer's] most common words" (Kingsley). Cf. OSTENTATIOUS, BOAST, GAUDY.

pa·rade' (pȧ·rād'), v.; -RAD'ED (-rād'ĕd; -ĭd; 119); -RAD'ING (-rād'ĭng). Transitive: 1. To exhibit in a showy or ostentatious manner; to show off.

> Parading all her sensibility. Byron.

2. To assemble and form; to marshal; to cause to maneuver, or march ceremoniously.
—, Intransitive: 1. To exhibit oneself, as by walking in a public place; to walk in public with some circumstance of show.
2. To assemble in military order for evolutions and inspection; to form or march, as in review.

par'a·den'tl·um (-shĭ·ŭm), n. [NL. See PARADENTAL; -IUM.] Dent. The paradental tissues, collectively, including the gums, the alveolar process, and the pericementum.

pa·rad'er (pȧ·rād'ẽr), n. One who parades.

parade rest. Mil. A formal position of rest in ranks in which the men remain silent and practically motionless, with the left knee slightly bent and the right foot carried six inches to the rear.

Parade Rest.

par'a·derm (păr'ȧ·dûrm), n. Zool. The delicate skin of an insect in the pronymphal stage.

par'a·di·as'to·le (-dī·ăs'tō·lē), n. [L., fr. Gr. paradiastolē a putting together of dissimilar things.] Rhet. Contrast of similar things, as for euphemism, as in styling "prodigality," "liberality."

par'a·di·chlo'ro·ben'zene (-dī·klō'rō·bĕn'zēn; -bĕn·zēn'), n. Also -chlor·ben'zene (-klōr·bĕn'zēn; -bĕn·zēn'), -chlo'ro·ben'zol (-klō'rō·bĕn'zōl; -zŏl), -chlor·ben'zol (-klōr-). Chem. A colorless crystalline compound, $C_6H_4Cl_2$, made by chlorinating benzene and used for the destruction of grubs, borers, etc. and for organic syntheses.

par'a·did'y·mis (-dĭd'ĭ·mĭs), n. [NL. See PARA-; EPIDIDYMIS.] Anat. Irregular tubules among the convolutions of the epididymis, supposed to be a remnant of tubes of the Wolffian body. — par'a·did'y·mal (-măl), adj.

par'a·digm (păr'ȧ·dĭm or, esp. Brit., -dīm), n. [F. paradigme, fr. LL. paradigma, fr. Gr. paradeigma, fr. paradeiknynai to show by the side of, to set up as an example, fr. para beside + deiknynai to show. See PARA-; DICTION.] 1. An example, model, or pattern.
2. Gram. An example of a conjugation or declension, showing a word in all its inflectional forms.

par'a·di·sa'ic (-dĭ·sā'ĭk), par'a·di·sa'i·cal (-ĭ·kăl), adj. Of, pertaining to, or resembling, paradise; paradisiacal. — par'a·di·sa'i·cal·ly, adv.

par'a·dis'al (păr'ȧ·dĭs'ăl; -l; 66), adj. Paradisiac.

par'a·dise (-dĭs; -dīz), n. [ME. paradis, fr. OF. paradis, fr. L. paradisus, fr. Gr. paradeisos park, paradise, of Per. origin; cf.
